

PEOPLE THINKING OF LAFOLLETTE

Wisconsin Senator Convinces Hearers That He is Force in Nation's Affairs.

DELIVERS A GREAT SPEECH.

Handles Current Political Issues in Vigorous Manner and Without Gloves or Excuse.

Last night Senator Robert La Follette of Wisconsin lectured in the Assembly hall on live political issues. This morning the people are talking about "Bob" La Follette said, and the general sentiment is that the city has been visited by a man who is to be a great force in future affairs. He talked down to practical facts and figures, showed the people how their government has gradually ceased to represent them, and how it may be forced back to the performance of its regular functions, and he is talking about, and he has no fear in expressing himself.

The hope of "Bob" La Follette, and it comes very natural to call him "Bob" after two hours of the heart to heart talk he had with his audience, is that with 10 years of education the people will see clearly what their interests and rights are, and his mission is to spread 10 years of education to them. As a political speech, the lecture was intense. It shows the politics of new issues, and has no interest except to illuminate the issues.

SPEAKER A RADICAL.

Senator La Follette was radical, and he has the chin of a fighter, and he would rather fight than anything that a quitter. The same tactics that won for him in Wisconsin were used here. There he read the names of those who accepted bribes to defeat him in the party convention. Here he said he was not slinging mud, but simply reading from the record. A month ago Senator La Follette was reported from Washington as being much discredited in the capital. Last night he was on a mission of throwing discredit upon the "gang" as he called them, of congressmen and senators who habitually shamed whose services they were by voting always on the corporation side of proposed legislation. Answering a charge that he voted with the Democrats instead of with his party, he denied it by cleverly asserting that the Democrats voted with him and he represented the best ideals in his party.

LATE IN ARRIVING.

Senator La Follette was late in arriving. It was 8:30 when his train pulled in and a packed Assembly hall was waiting for him, when he arrived, accompanied by Senator Reed. He was escorted to the stand, where Hon. William H. King introduced him to the audience. He then began to talk, and with the vigor of a champion, he closed, and his efforts would have been continued longer, but for the reason that he had to catch a train to Butte. Although many in the audience were women, there was no one who wished to leave and the audience remained to the end anxious to hear the words of a man with a political message. In part Senator La Follette said:

"I beg your indulgence and patience, for starting an address at the time when it should be ended, but if you will bear with me I am going to talk about our country and our government. As our forefathers designed it to be, it was to be the will of the people. They outlined a plan whereby that result could be reached, and they called it republican government. If they could have made it do, the system would have been such that every citizen of the country could have gone to the seat of government and voted for every law, but that was impossible, so the plan of representatives was formed, with congressmen representing the population and senators for each state. That plan so commended itself that township, county, municipal and state governments followed along the same lines.

"All has changed in the last 12 years, however, so that the citizen has been cut out almost entirely. Corruption has made such inroads that the influence has come to dominate our government so that a new word has been necessary to keep pace with the change. This word is graft; graft is the word, and in every minor part of government, until it appears from one end of the country to the other. It was 75 years ago that one of the most learned men of the world came to the United States to study our form of government; and another man, Alexis de Toqueville, returned to France, he said he had found no evidence of man spending his wealth to corrupt government in this country. Only 15 years ago another impartial critic visited this country and this report, in Bryce's American Commonwealth, said the great corporations were everywhere. Their management was secret, and in the hands of a few, and the doors of Congress were besieged with representatives of the railroads and great corporations, allied lobbyists. SYLVESTER S. PHIPPEN.

Honored Pioneer Whose Mortal Remains Were Laid to Rest This Afternoon.

In the death of Sylvester S. Phippen, which occurred at 11:45 Sunday morning, Utah and the west lose one more of their pioneers. It was in the early fifties that Mr. Phippen crossed the desert with his family and other hardy homesteaders. He was here but a few years when on April 5, 1856, he married Miss Mary Jane Grim, who preceded him to the great beyond just seven months and ten days, she having died April 1 of this year.

Sylvester Smith Phippen was born in the town of Charlotte, Chautauque county, New York, on the 20th day of May, 1834. His parents, Isaac and Adie, Stewart Phippen, joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1833. In the spring of 1839, when the deceased was but 5 years of age his parents with their family, consisting of seven children, started for Commerce, a small town on the Mississippi river, Hancock county, Ill. Later the name of Commerce was changed to Nauvoo and had been selected as a gathering place for the Mormons after their expulsion from Missouri. Elder Phippen stated that his earliest recollection of Joseph the prophet went back to the time when he was a lad between 6 and 7 years of age and extended over a period of three or four years. He stated he had heard the prophet preach a number of times and was also present when he delivered his farewell address to the Nauvoo Legion.

Elder Phippen was a man of sterling worth in all respects. He was the father of 11 children and is survived by five of them and 20 grandchildren. Two of the family, Adelbert S. Phippen and Mrs. Annie L. Pettigrew, live in Idaho; Mrs. Effie A. Knight and Mrs. Mary A. Phippen and Edward E. Phippen in this city. The funeral was held from the Eleventh ward meetinghouse this afternoon at 1 o'clock.

when this great evil was just starting, we ought to realize that there is something to reach of us to do, and to do now. I don't mean to say that there have not been instances of corruption before, and in other countries, but this writer has spoken of organized corruption, and of legislators who have been unfaithful to their trust.

AS TO THE TRUSTS. "There has been a change in business conditions that has had a material effect on the people. Up to the last century the business of the country was conducted by individuals and partners, but as the country was developed, there came a change when large companies were formed. On this plan, directors were put in charge and the business was controlled by a few men who acted the same as individuals or partners. Following this there came a time for the formation of the trusts, when these companies united and voted their stocks as individuals, and the management of the business and the interests of the country were centered in the hands of a few men.

"This brought about a condition which has set aside the laws of supply and demand and has suited all competitors. The same plan was used in England years ago, but it was stifled by criminal statutes. Here in the United States, however, it has run riot until there is not a necessity of life that is not absolutely controlled by the gigantic corporations.

"They say they could reach back and supply the market for raw material. Take meat, for instance. Six men make the market of the country. True, they loosened their grip recently on account of investigations, but their power is as great as it ever was. In recent years there has been food a shrinkage of $12,000,000 in the value of the beef of the country on the hoof, and they have steadily advanced the price of meats. Three times a day these six men come to every table in the United States and claim their tribute.

GRAIN MARKET CONTROL. "Turn to other products. You can't find a market for a bushel of grain that is not controlled by the grain trust. I don't mean to say that there are not a few independent elevators still struggling for existence, but they have been gradually forced out of business by the Armours, who are part owners and directors in the railroads on whom the elevators depend for existence.

"There are less than 100 men who control all of the industrial life of the country. The boards of directors of 1,600 trusts and combinations are made up of these men, and the railroad interests make up the greater part of this number. A very few years ago there were some 9,000 railroads. Now there are six systems controlled by eight men, and all of these are not in real competition, but are controlled by a gigantic trust.

RATE LEGISLATION. Railroad rate legislation, which is the theme on which Senator LaFollette became a national character, was taken up at length. The railroads he said were capitalized at $12,000,000,000, while $6,000,000,000 would pay the entire cost of their construction with terminals, while the people were paying interest on over capitalization in the shape of exorbitant rates.

"We pay the railroads ever year," he said, "more than it costs to maintain all of the government of the country from township to national and yet we can not have representatives who will vote for statutes to enforce the decrees of the supreme court."

"It is a long time since we have had

SERIES OF BIBLE TALKS IS CLOSED

"Religious Work for Men" Theme Of Secy. Fred S. Goodman.

AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE

Delivered at Y. M. C. A. Auditorium Last Evening—Convictions Without Work Are of Little Account.

International Secy. Fred S. Goodman of the Y. M. C. A., closed his series of talks on Bible study last evening, in the association auditorium, on "Religious Work for Men," illustrated by stereopticon views. He held that the key of success is work. One may have deep convictions, but unless he gets down to work those convictions are of little account. The speaker further said:

ORGANIZATION NECESSARY. "Organization is necessary to success. We must have organization and hymns must assume the responsibility of their expansion and power for good. There should be Bible teachers in Salt Lake, capable and willing to take up and carry on the work. The place of a teacher is a restraining power of his life. He may not be, strictly speaking, a great Christian, but if he occupies the position of a teacher of a Bible class he keeps thinking of the school all the week, and thus his thoughts, his mind is kept in Christian channels. Responsibility is what brings out the power for good there is in man.

"What the association stands for is efficiency. Efficient work will always bring good results. In order to achieve the best results there must be variety in method. We must adopt different methods to the different types of men. It is the duty of the men engaged in the work of this association to go out after men. Those who need aid most will not come to us.

"The men needing the uplifting power of the association must not come into a house like this. It is well enough to have a house like this in which you can assemble and have a good time. That is commendable; but the primary, the all-important object of this association is to reach out and help the needy; help them to build up character and become strong in the doing of good work, in living pure lives and becoming valuable members of the association of Christian workers of the world."

Mr. Goodman left for Denver this morning. He made an excellent impression here.

Tonight Miss Beatrice O'Connor will give a box party at the Orpheum.

The Cleofan met with Mrs. McVicker this afternoon and Mrs. F. T. Roberts gave the paper, her subject being

"Even now you haven't got a rate bill for the masses. It solves some of the problems of the large shipper, but it doesn't enable the commission to bring down the rates to reasonable figures, as outlined by the supreme court."

"I offered nine amendments to the rate bill, eight of which had been recommended by the interstate commerce commission. The most important was the amendment to ascertain the value of railroad property. Its got to be done before you can begin to fix rates on a reasonable basis. The people are paying $45,000,000 a year in freight rates that the supreme court says is right."

"I propose to give all my time and all my strength to fighting before the people the records of Congress. If I can only arouse interest enough in these records I shall have performed some service in getting the government closer to the people. When we have put in 10 or a dozen years, you people will take the government back unto yourselves again."

Senator LaFollette concluded, after explaining that he had been in order to catch a train to Butte, by reading the record of voting on the railroad rate legislation in which he had been interested. On one amendment he read the names of Senator Snoot and Senator Sutherland as voting to table it.

The lecture was given under the auspices of the Mutual Improvement League course, and was its opening number. The course is designed to bring to Utah men whom it is good for the community to come in contact with, and eight more numbers will be given during the winter.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater.—The hold that "The Devil's Auction" has on a certain class of theater goers is one of the marvels. The regular habitues of the house are seldom seen on such occasions, and the face of the first-nighter is always conspicuously absent. But there is always a big thronging, teeming, tumbling out, not over particular in its tastes, with many children sprinkled through it, and to all such the grotesqueness of "The Devil's Auction" specially appeals to appeal. The dancing and the scenery remain the only features deserving of serious mention; as for the acting—the least said is the better. The ballet work of the girls was quite pretty and the acrobatic work of the clown convulsed the audience.

The engagement was limited to one night.

"Checkers" Tonight.—The racing play of "Checkers," which comes with a record of three seasons of success in New York behind it, opens at the theater.

Orpheum.—The only superlative excellence of this week's Orpheum offering came at the very end of the program last night. It was in the work of the four Bards, whose gymnastic efforts are just a little bit better than anything ever exhibited before in that line. The Bards are all men and are the perfection of physical development to begin with. Then, to that is added such grace as one seldom hopes to find in mere muscular action. Their work is the final touch in perfecting vaudeville gymnastic entertainment.

As for the rest of the program, it is amusing in part, but there is nothing to call for a hearty demonstration. Perhaps the saving number would have been that of the Avon Comedy Four, which was delayed. It is said to be a fun maker of the highest order, but in its absence the best of the medium offerings was Belman and Moore in "a bit of Vaudeville," which began with a burlesque of Canille and ended with a burlesque of the "Barnyard." The others on the bill were Willie Eckstein, boy pianist; the kinodrome, Castle and Collins, in regulation black face stunts, and Lea Durbelle, shadowgrapher.

With the Avon Comedy Four added tonight, the program may be improved.

Grand.—A number of box parties were in attendance at the Grand last evening, to witness a performance of "The Convict's Daughter." A good-sized audience was present down stairs and the upper part of the house was filled. The ever-popular melo-drama went off with smoothness and finish, and was a credit to every performer. This was particularly true of the work of George J. Elmore, in the role of the leading character, William Woodford, for whose being a "sway Willie" there "is a reason." "The Convict's Daughter" has been seen many times in Salt Lake, both under its present title and as "A Noble Outcast," and interest in the play never seems to lag.

The next attraction at the Grand will be "Nobody's Claim," a three night and one matinee performance, beginning Thursday evening. The ladies' souvenir matinees will be a drawing card during the extended engagement of the present company.

Lyric—"A Son's Devotion," a play full of sensational scenes and many thrills, is being presented at the Lyric this week by the stock company which has held forth there for several weeks. The production seemed to please most of the audience, but the play is hardly in a class with those which have been presented since the engagement of the present company.

The story is of a foul murder. The son discovers the murder of his mother and takes an oath to avenge her death. He assumes enough disguises to make Nick Carter, the detective, turn green with envy, but he accomplishes his purpose and right triumphs in the end. Mr. Frazier as the villain, has a chance to do some clever character work and he makes the most of the opportunity. Fred Moore, as the minor, is also good, and the other characters are well sustained. The same bill goes for the remainder of the week, with the usual matinees.

Mr. Joseph Petrich, who has been manager of the Lyric for some time, will be transferred to another of Mr. Cort's houses, as the Salt Lake place of amusement has gone under the management of Frederick Moore. Mr. Moore is leading actor of the company and is now also manager of the Utahna at Ogden.
