MY DEARLY BELOVED BRETHREN: For a long time I have desired to whisperjust a word of sympathy and fellowship into your listening ears. Not that I can say aught that you do not already thoroughly know, nor anything that has not been said, perhaps far more fitting than I can say It; but that I may add my mite to the coplous flow of sympathy and expressions of confidence and love and admiration which have already greeted you from every hand, in honor of your manly courage and patient resignation to the will of Providence, and other noble actions, so far, throughout this unhallowed persecution. I would have you know that I am not only "almost" but altogether such as you are, except those bonds, in heart and spirit respecting the main question. I know not how soon I may be altogether as you are, including both the bonds and imprisonment, nor do I care, if it be the will of heaven. I am willing to share

than they were. It pleased God to allow them to suffer for a wise purpose in Him, that the cup of their enemies might be filled, and if it so pleases Him now, I have no doubt that some of us at least can endure it as well as they did. We certainly possess all the rights and privileges of the Gospel that they possessed, and for which they cheerfully suffered persecutions, counting all things as dross, and taking joyfully the spoiling of their goods and of their good name, for the excellency of the name of the Son of God. We even have more than they, for now the fulness of the Gospel has been revealed and restored, while in former dispensations but part was given. I will simply name the giorious principle of baptism for the dead and all its attendant ordinances, including sealings, adoptions and noly anointings and ordinations, which doubtless never were so fully revealed in former Gospel dispensations (unless it might be in that of years ago, writing a private letter to a Enoch's) as in the "dispensation of the | friend here, says: fulness of times." I am proud of my connection with you in the noble cause for which you are counted worthy to suffer for conscience sake. "For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully," and I thank you from the depths of my soul for the unflinching, manly and tearless example which you have so nobly set before the people and the world.
