

Dow Discovering a Thief.

After Lorenzo Dow had retired to his room, after a hard day's travel in the western part of Virginia, a number of persons collected in the bar-room to enjoy their usual revelries, as was their custom in that part of the country. At a late hour in the night, the alarm was given that one of the company had lost his pocket-book and a search proposed. Whereupon the landlord remarked that Lorenzo Dow was in the house, and that if the money was there he knew that Lorenzo could find it. The suggestion was instantly received with approbation, and accordingly Mr. Dow was aroused from his slumber, and brought forth to find the money. As he entered the room, his eyes ran through the company with searching inquiry, but nothing appeared that could fix guilt upon any one. The loser appeared with a countenance expressive of great concern, and besought Mr. Dow for heaven's sake, to find the money. "Have any left the company since you lost your money?" said Mr. Dow.

"None," said the loser, "none."
"Then," said Lorenzo, "turning to the landlord, 'go and bring me a large dinner pot.' This created no little surprise. But as supernatural powers were universally conceded, his directions were unhesitatingly obeyed. Accordingly the pot was brought forward, and set in the middle of the room.

"Now," said Lorenzo, "go and bring the old chicken-cock from the roost."
This was also done, and at Lorenzo's directions, the cock was placed in the pot, and covered over with a board, or lid.

"Let the doors now be fastened and the lights extinguished," said Mr. Dow, which was also done. "Now," said he, "every person in the room must rub his hands hard against the pot, and when the guilty hand touches the cock will crow."

Accordingly, all came forward, and rubbed, or pretended to rub against the pot.—But no cock crowed.

"Let the candles now be lighted," said Lorenzo, "there is no guilty person here. If the man had any money, he must have lost it in some place else. But stop," said Lorenzo, when all things were prepared let us now examine the hands."

This was the important part of his arrangement. For on examination, it was found that one man had not rubbed against the pot. The other hands being black with the soot from the pot, was a proof of their innocence. "There," said Lorenzo, pointing to the man with clean hands, "There is the man who picked your pocket."

The culprit, seeing his detection, at once acknowledged his guilt, and gave up the money.

THE WAY THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCHMEN FIGHT.—When the Berks County and other interior troops were on their way toward Camp Curtin, the officers had a conference over the news of the taking of Fort Sumter, and the fact that after thirty-six hours cannonading, no life was lost. One honest Dutch officer could not understand how this could be done; but another officer, better posted in modern warfare, assured him that it was was all owing to the astonishing improvements in modern science, which had made the art of war so perfect that forts might be battered down and cities bombarded, and and yet not a single individual be killed. The honest Dutch son of Mars listened attentively and in surprise at such remarkable results. Suddenly his face reddened, and, with a blow of his fist upon the table, which sounded like the discharge of a Columbiad, he exclaimed, "Den, by tam, dey had better not bring town our Dutchmans, for dey are so tam stupid mid science, dat dey could not go into a fight m itout killing somepoty."

"SPEAKING TO" THEM.—A man who had never seen the inside of a court house until he was introduced as a witness in a case pending in one of the District Courts sitting last Fall in the northern part of California, being sworn, took a position with his back to the jury, and began telling his story to the Judge. Judge R—N, in his bland and courteous manner, said, "address yourself to the jury, sir." The man made a short pause; but not comprehending what was said to him, continued his narrative. His honor was then more explicit, and said to him, "Speak to the jury, sir—the men sitting behind you on the benches." The witness then turned around, and making an awkward bow, said, with great gravity of manner, "Good morning gentlemen!"

INFORMATION WANTED.—Euphemia Simpson, of Cowden-heath, Lochgelly, Scotland, wishes to learn the whereabouts of her son WILLIAM SIMPSON, who emigrated to the States some six years ago, and to Utah about two years since. Any information concerning him will be thankfully received, directed as above.

Also information wanted of ELIZABETH WHITE HOLMES, who came from England with her parents to St. Louis in 1851, and was last heard from in 1853. Should this meet the observation of herself or any other person, the favor of a communication to John Holmes, of North Ogden, will be thankfully received. Council Bluffs Bugle please copy.
