William R. Garrett, a resident of Deweyville, met with fatal injuries Saturday evening resulting in his death in less than an hour.

Mr. Garrett was employed as coal shoveler for the Oregon Short Line railroad at the Cache Junction and yard and was engaged in unloading a car load of coal when the accident occurred. He was standing on the side of the car when it moved forward suddenly throwing him between the wheels which passed over his right arm at the thigh terribly crushing the bones. His left foot was also crushed and he received internal injuries. Some of the passengers gave him every possible attention until the train reached Collinston when Dr. Friday boarded the train and gave the man several hypodermic injections which was to deaden his pain as it was evident the injured man could not live and the only thing to do was to relieve the terrible pain he was suffering. About five minutes before the train reached Brigham City where the remains were removed from the train, and prepared to be sent to Deweyville to the sorrowing young wife who is left in Ogden with Mrs. Archibald Bowman and family.

A PROVO INVENTOR.
Thomas E. Daniels, Jr., who is conducting a photograph gallery in this city, as he has been for years, varying this work with electrical pursuits and others, has secured a patent for an electrical circuit breaker. The invention is said to be superior to any other device for transforming installations, subdividing power and light mains, dividing street mains into blocks and districts and cutting out in and branch circuits. It can be installed without interruption to the main line at any time or place and is entirely free from danger.

It completely covers every form of making contact, by means of a hook with an insulated handle, thus saving the operator from the danger of being struck by a very low price so that light and power companies can use one on every pole if necessary.

PRIMARY FAIR.
The Primary associations of this stake are conducting a fair at the courthouse here, which is open for several days and will conclude tomorrow (Monday) evening.

It is really astonishing to the visitor at this fair to see the advancement that has been made in the skill of these young people. Boys from nine years of age up to thirteen have perfect models of carpentry work, and as hay derricks, fully rigged for work, hayracks, stepladders, ladders, well-crooks (roofs), houses, etc.

And in the girls' department all kinds of fancy work and sewing, such as fancy quilts, infant dresses, girls' and ladies' wrappers, fancy pillows, and large variety of needle work, are to be found.

Four large rooms including the courtroom are filled with the exhibits. The great credit is due to the sisters who have had the matter in charge for their labor in promoting the exposition of the citizens of this country, who ought to receive greater support and encouragement in the way of prizes, etc., than they have done in the past.
