ENGLISH CHARACTERISTICS.

[CONCLUDED.]

At the hotel in London where I stopped, the daughters of the landlord, three fresh, comely young women, did the duties of the office; and their presence, so quiet and domestic, gave the prevailing hue and tone to the whole house. I wonder how long a young woman could preserve her self-respect and sensibility in such a position in New York or Washington?

The English regard us as a wonderfully patient people, and there can be no doubt but we put up with abuses unknown elsewhere. If we have no big tyrant, we have ten thousand little ones, who tread upon our toes at every turn. The tyranny of corporations and of public servants of one kind and another, as the ticket man, the railroad conductor, or even the country stage-driver, seem to be features peculiar to American democracy. In England, the traveller is never snubbed, or made to feel that it is by somebody's sufferance that he is allowed aboard or to pass on his way.

If you get into an omnibus or a railroad or tramway carriage in London, you are sure of a seat. Not another person can get aboard after the seats are all full. Or, if you enter a public hall, you know you will not be required to stand up unless you pay the standing up price. There is everywhere that system, and order, and fair-dealing which all men love. The science of living has been reduced to a fine point. You pay a sixpence, and get a sixpence worth of whatever you buy. There are all grades and prices, and the robbery and extortion so current at home appear to be unknown.

I am not contending for the superiority of every thing English, but would not disguise from myself or my readers the fact of the greater humanity and consideration that prevail in the mother country. Things here are yet in the green, but I trust there is no good reason to doubt that our fruit will mellow and ripen in time like the rest.

JOHN BURROUGHS.

—Appleton's Journal.

EXCITING SCENE AT A RAILWAY DEPOT.—An exciting spectacle was recently witnessed at the Yorkshire station of the Metropolitan Railway, near London, during a thunder-storm. The station is in a deep cutting, and the fall of rain was so heavy that a large amount of water had accumulated, extending for a considerable distance. As soon as the 6:18 train from Barnet, which was filled with passengers, emerged from the tunnel, the water had reached such a hight that it put the engine fires out, and the train was consequently brought to a stand-still. It was found that the points would not work, and that owing to the storm the wires of the electric telegraph could not be used. The latter misfortune was all the more important, inasmuch as the express at the time was overdue. Another engine was procured by the officials, and chains were attached to the train. Every effort, however, in this direction, was unsuccessful, owing probably to the sleepers floating about in all directions. The excitement at this period was painful in the extreme. The majority of the passengers were unable to leave the carriages, owing to the depth of the water which was making down the line in a perfect torrent; women were fainting, and even the servants of the company seemed paralyzed with fear, being totally unable to prevent what threatened to be a terrible disaster. A few of the passengers, by dint of the greatest exertions, had been removed from the train, when suddenly a shout announced that the express was coming, and a huge wave was seen issuing from the tunnel as the train approached. The same cause, however, which had placed the Barnet train in its terrible position, proved its salvation, for water so put out the fires in the other engine and stopped the train just in time to prevent a terrible accident.—Ex.

BREVITIES.

A man ran through Detroit shouting that he was looking for "the road to heaven." The crowd called him crazy for looking for it in Detroit.

In a paragraph on vacations the Christian Union says: "It strikes us that society is so arranged that the American young lady has a pretty easy time of it, compared with her brother."

A female who ought to know, says: "No women indulge in the disgustingly dirty habit of wearing trains on the street but those whose pedal extremities cover a large amount of real estate."

A wholesome discipline is enforced at the Eastern camp meetings where the reverend preachers notify the speakers in the beginning, "If any man attempts to make a long speech, he will be sung down on the spot."

Few people know, and thousands do not know, that by setting a glass fruit jar on a folded towel, thoroughly soaked in cold water, the fruit can be poured in boiling hot, with no more danger of breaking than with tin.

Here is a Knoxville advertisement: "Having a dead sow and litter of 12 defunct pigs under my kitchen, I am anxious to sell them low to the Council to purify some other part of the city. It is hard to part with such health promoting animals, but I am poor, and will make the sacrifice for cash."

A Breton peasant, on his way to Paris, stopped at a barber shop in Bamboniblet. While the barber was strapping his razor the peasant noticed a dog sitting near his chair, and staring at him fiercely. "What is the matter with that dog?" The barber answered with an unconcerned air, "The dog is always there. You see when I cut off an ear —" "Well!" "Well, he eats it."

An old black man expressed to a wild young Virginian the half-unconscious creed of many a white sinner. "Massa Richard," said this hoary evil-doer, solemnly lifting up his hand to emphasize the admonition, "if there is a hereafter, don't carry on—but," and here he suddenly broke into enthusiasm and a broad grin, "if there ain't no hereafter, carry on powerful."

Young man if you would succeed in this world, stop your day-dreaming, that listless drifting. Choose some trade or profession, and then master it. Have an object in life, and work to attain it. Be number one in your profession, or calling, whatever it may be. Be honest, upright, industrious, polite and persevering, and you will live honored and respected, and die rich and happy.—Western Enterprise.

There are men and women whose nerves stand out an inch beyond their cuticle, and each nerve is of such aggravated sensitiveness that one cannot approach them without giving offense in some way. Such people are in a state of chronic affliction; somebody is always coming short in treatment of them. If you look at them it is a stare; if you do not look at them it is a slight. There is no safe way with the over-sensitive but a straightforward one. For if you try to avoid one corn, you are sure to tread on another.
