EVENING NEWS.

Saturday, . . June 12, 1875.

Rules for Spelling.

The following rules should be carefully committed to memory, as the knowledge of them will prevent that hesitation about the spelling of common words which is frequently experienced even by the well educated:

Rule 1.—All monosyllables ending in l, with a single vowel before it, have double l at the close; mill, sell.

Rule 2.—All monosyllables ending in l, with a double vowel before it, have one l at the close; wail, sail.

Rule 3.—Monosyllables ending in l, when compounded, retain but one l each; as fulfil, skilful.

Rule 4.—All words of more than one syllable ending in l, have one l only in the close, as faithful, delightful; except recall, befall, unwell, &c.

Rule 5.—All derivations of words ending in l have one l only; as equality from equal, except they end in er or ly; as mill, miller; full, fuller.

Rule 6.—All participles in ing from verbs ending in e lose the e final; as have, having; amuse, amusing; except they come from verbs ending in double e, and then they retain both; as see, seeing; agree, agreeing.

Rule 7.—All verbs in ly, and nouns in ment retain the final of their primitives; as brave, bravely; refine, refinement; except judgment, acknowledgment.

Rule 8.—All derivatives from words ending in er, retain the e before the r; as refer, reference; except hindrance from hinder; remembrance from remember; disastrous from disaster; monstrous from monster; wondrous from wonder; cumbrous from cumber, etc.

Rule 9.—All compound words, if both end not in l, retain their primitive parts entire; as millstones, chargeable, graceless, except always, also, deplorable, although, almost, admirable, etc.

Rule 10.—All monosyllables ending in a consonant with a single vowel before it, double that consonant, in derivatives, as sin, sinner; ship, shipping; big, bigger; glad, gladder.

Rule 11.—Monosyllables ending in a consonant with a double vowel before it, do not double the consonant in derivatives as, sleep, sleeping; troop, trooper.

Rule 12.—All words of more than one syllable, ending in a single consonant preceded by a single vowel, and accented on the last syllable, double that consonant in derivatives, as commit, committee; compel, compelled; appal, appalling; distil, distilling.

Rule 13.—Nouns of one syllable ending in y, change into ies in the plural, and verbs ending in y, preceded by a consonant, change y into ies in the third person, singular of the present tense, and ies in past tense, and past participle; as fly, flies; I apply, he applies; I reply, or have replied, or he replied. If they be preceded by a vowel, this rule is not applicable; as key, keys; I play, he plays; we have enjoyed ourselves.

Rule 14.—Compound words whose primitives end in y change y into i; as beauty, beautiful; lovely, loveliness.—Journal of Education.

Rich and Poor.

It has often been said that in the Oriental countries wealth has scarcely ever an honest source. There, if a man is rich, the presumption is that either he or his father was an extortioner or an oppressor, or, lacking the audacity or energy requisite to qualify him for the role of a robber, he must have possessed the sordid meanness of a miser. Omnis dives aut iniquus est aut haeres iniqui—"Every rich man is either a rascal or the heir of a rascal"—was the declaration of St. Jerome, who was also speaking of the condition of society in the East. The famous author of "Utopia; or, the Kingdom of Nowhere," thought that the grasping and oppressive disposition of the wealthy classes was not exclusively a characteristic of the Orientals. On the contrary, he insisted that the same traits were found in the England of his day. He described the whole system of society around him as "nothing but a conspiracy of the rich against the poor," a conspiracy which was carried out by controlling legislation and shaping it for the benefit of wealthy monopolists. "The rich," he said, "are ever striving to pare away something further from the daily wages of the poor by private fraud and even by public law, so that the wrong already existing is made still greater by means of the law of the State." Again he says: "The rich devise every means by which they may in the first place secure to themselves what they have amassed by wrong, and then take to their own use and profit, at the lowest possibly price, the work and labor of the poor. And so, as soon as the rich decide on adopting these devices in the name of the public, then they become law."—Ex.

RESTORING THE DROWNED.—The following "directions for restoring persons apparently drowned," issued by the Massachusetts Humane Society, should be cut out and posted up by all people who indulge in the pleasure of boat rides, or who have boys who go in swimming, as all boys should:

"Convey the body to the nearest house, with head raised. Strip and rub dry. Wrap in blankets. Inflate the lungs by closing the nostrils with the thumb and finger, blowing into the mouth forcibly and then pressing with the hand on the chest. Again blow in the mouth, and press on the chest, and so on for ten minutes, or until he breathes. Keep the body warm; extremities also. Continue rubbing; do not give up so long as there is any chance of success."
