But when this agitation subsides —it is beginning to icce its turbu-hence already—the true aspects of the question will be all the more likely to be considered, than if no special interest had been excited in relation to it. Thomas Jeiferson, to whom this constry is indebted for the incorpor-stion of religious liberty into the or ganic law, said that under perfect religious liberty 'if a sect atises, whose tenets would subvert morals, good sense has fair play, and reason laughs it out of doars, without suf-fering the state to be troubled with it." I think that the rule may be safefy applied to the Mormons. In dealing with this question we must be cateful and not permit our so-tions to be dictated by prejudice or believes that his hope and associa-tion in the tosurrection of the just depend upon his patriarchal reliations toward his fam-ily. The Mormons are anxious to see who the commissioners will be that the President is to appoint. It looks now as though they would be eastern men, but the Mormons claim that they do not care for that if they are honest. They claim that the

I do not think there is any danger of trouble from the Mormons. The eastern peo-ple have very peculiar ideas of the Mormons. I know when I first went to Utah I expected to see all Mor-mons wearing a perfect arsenal of weapons and supposed they were a blod-thirsty musclerous set. This is a great mistaks. To say that polygamy is wrong, a le-turn to barbaric conditions, does not answer the question. Toleration does not involve approval.
