"domino dance" given by the Misses Kirkpatrick last night at the Knutsford will rank among the most brilliant affairs of the season. The two ordinaries were used for dancing and were covered with canvas and effective-ly decorated in Christmas colors. The dining room, where the supper tables were laid was also in green and red, and lighted with red candles. The men only were in mask and domino, the ladies being in handsome evening costimes. The leap year privilege of choosing partners for the dance was appropriated by the ladies, and a merry time was the outcome. Favors of red hearts tied with red satiu ribbons were given the men. CHARLES ELLIS BURNED TO DEATH.

Sad Fate of a Well Known Local Writer, Who Lived the Life Of a Recluse.

BODY WAS FOUND BY FIREMEN

Circumstances Point to His Having Fallen With a Lighted Lamp in His Hand.

Charles Ellis is dead. Clad in his nightshirt and burned almost beyond recognition, his remains were found at his home, 66 east Second North street, shortly before 6 o'clock last night, where it is supposed the body had lain for some hours. When the firemen arrived the blaze, which evidently had been burning for some time, had gained considerable headway, and it was with some difficulty that it was got under control. When that point had been reached, the house was searched and the body of the well known local writer, lying face downward, was found, the flesh so charred as to yield readily to the merest touch. Assistant Chief Workman and Captain Love made the discovery, and when the fire had been extinguished, they had the body re-moved to the undertaking pariors of Joseph William Taylor, on West Tem-ple street, where it now lies pending the holding of an inquest.

BOY TURNS IN ALARM. How the fire started is a mystery. It was first seen by the 13-year-old so of L. E. Hall, who was attracted to the scene by the crash of falling glass. Learning that the house was in flames, the boy immediately repaired to the nearest call box and turned in an alarm. A few minutes later the firemen were on the scene hard at work. Neighbors knew nothing of the blaze till this time, and therefore can give no idea of when it started. Chief By-water, however, is of the epinion that the fire must have been smouldering for some hours, as the floor and other parts of the building were badly burned.

TWO THEORIES ADVANCED.

As to the origin of the fire several theories are advanced. Probably the most likely one is that Mr. Ellis was arising for the day and in walking through the house with a lighted lamp in his hand, tripped and fell, the lamp setting fire to the house, and the fall rendering the old gentleman uncon scious through his head having come in contact with a piece of furniture. A wound on the left temple indicates that such might have been the case. Some, however, advance the theory of murder, and account for the broken lamp, which was found a few feet from the body, as a scheme of the assassin to cover up the crime committed. These are but theories; the solution of the problem will be left to the coroner's Correspondent Avers That Their Use Is Detrimental to Business.

To the Editor.

One man has said that trading stamps are to merchants what grasshoppers are to farmers. How about this, Mr. merchant; is this not true? Are stamps really paying you for the trouble and expense they put you to? If not I appeal to you from the stand-point of common sense to drop them at once. Why keep a lion in your shop that saps your profits, and demoralizes your business by drawing in a set of people who are always hunding bargains, commonly called professional bargain hunters or town shoppers. Stamps encourage a type of people known as "the something for nothing kind, whose numbers now are increas ing every day. Then why do you en-courage them by holding out some pre-miam to corrupt your business. Make your business stand in the first class rank. It is my honest opinion, and I do not stand alone in it, that to draw the people whom business men desire we must give them instead of trading stamps, premlums, coupons and discounts, the best goods, good measure and good weight. The merchant who has this record will win in the end, and furthermore an honest, legitimate busines cannot be transacted in any other manner. A merchant of Kingston, Ontario, says: "When trading stamps were first introduced in our city "When trading by two advance agents (slick agents they were, too) that great enemy of commerce, bad credit, was surely going to be slain. From the arguments put forth our best merchants were led to sign their agreement, and all felt as-sured of success. For a time our hopes were high, but as time were on these hopes were shattered. We found the cure worse than the disease, and the gold brick promised had only a super-ficial coating of gold bronze. About eight months after signing the contract

They were disgusted with the licking and sticking of stamps and giving their share of their profits to a concern that did not earn it. For a merchant doing a business of $20,000 a year, $1,000 would be the percentage that the trading stamp people would fall heir to, About 200 merchants met and decided to abolish them, which was done. And thus the curse was removed." I have often noticed that a woman, when once inoculated with the trading ly. All she can see is trading stamps and she is often so blind that the qualmoney for goods that they did need, so that it would add a few more stamps to her books. One business man has said that "half the women of this country give more attention to filling their trading stamp books than they do to the Russian-Japanese war." For such folly there is no excuse. If people would only think a little more and not be so anxious to listen to "hot-air peddlers," they would be much better off.

But I blame the merchant for educating the public to such a deplorable state, "How can you remedy it?" you Drop them. Don't let them be a partner in your business. If a man cannot make money without stamps he
