

IN HOARY HUNTINGTON.

Long Island Village to Celebrate Its Quarter Millennium.

The Place Where Nathan Hale, the Patriot Spy, Was Arrested and Where Wait Whitman Lived.

Special Correspondence.

Huntington, N. Y., June 22.—The little Long Island village of Huntington is not to be outdone if it can help it by its metropolitan neighbor, and while its celebration of its two hundred and fiftieth birthday will not be as elaborate as that of Manhattan it is preparing to mark its quarter millennium anniversary with fitting ceremony. The festivities will take place on the Fourth of July. There are a few towns in the United States older than Huntington, but they are not much older, with the exception of the Spanish settlements in Florida, New Mexico and California. St. Augustine, the oldest town in the country, was founded in 1565. Santa Fe, N. M., is nearly as old, and some of the Roman Catholic mission towns in southern California have reached a great age. The landing of the pilgrim fathers at Plymouth, Mass., was in 1620. The Dutch landed in the Hudson river valley a little before that date. A trading station was established by them on Castle Island, just below Albany, in 1614, and Albany was founded under the name of Fort Orange, in 1614. Albany was chartered as a city in 1666. New Amsterdam has recently observed the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of its beginning. So Huntington, founded in 1653 by Puritans from the New England settlements, can claim an antiquity almost as great as that of any town in the United States.

The Dutch who set up their homes at New Amsterdam and on the western end of Long Island sprang to the east, and met in the vicinity of Huntington the wealthier and more numerous English communities, and Huntington numbers among its old families descendants of immigrants of both nationalities.

During the Revolution a regiment of British soldiers was quartered at Huntington, and many a minor engagement was fought hereabouts. The Huntingtons, being mostly of English descent, were suspected by their neighbors across the sound of harboring the British willingly, and they suffered from numerous acts of supposed reprisal from the patriots. To disprove this allegation of Treason the annals of Huntington can show no end of occasions on which the British soldiers were kept in the hands of the Continental armies by the youth of the village.

One historic event of which Huntington was the scene and which has been commemorated by the latter day citizens of this village with two notable monuments was the capture of Nathan Hale, the patriot spy. The generally accepted place of Hale's capture is on the shore of Huntington bay about two miles from the town. The house in which he was taken has long since disappeared, but its site is marked by a large granite boulder erected in 1876. On one side of the boulder is the date of his execution, with the inscription, "Nathan Hale, in Everlasting Remembrance." Upon another are cut the words with which he accepted the commission to reconnoiter, single handed, the position of the British troops about New York in the face of almost certain and ignominious death and beneath them his last utterance as he was being taken by his British captors, "I only regret that I have but

WE HEREBY CONDEMN, repudiate and openly challenge as false and malicious, all statements to the effect that SOZODONT, the well-known dentifrice, is or ever was acid or contains any ingredient injurious to the teeth or mouth. The origin of these statements has been traced to certain irresponsible and unprincipled persons desiring to benefit thereby. We, therefore, publicly state and stand ready to prove SOZODONT to be not only non-acid but an acid destroyer, for by its alkaline reaction it neutralizes all destructive mouth acids. This statement is corroborated in hundreds of letters from our most eminent dentists.

one life to give for my country." The third tablet bears these facts about Hale: His ancestors were the Hales of Kent, England; he was born at Coventry, Conn., June 6, 1755; graduated from Yale college Sept. 8, 1773; enlisted as lieutenant, Seventh Connecticut regiment, July 6, 1775; appointed captain Sept. 1, 1775; volunteered as a spy in September, 1776; captured by the British on this shore Sept. 21, 1776; executed at New York Sept. 22, 1776.

Another reminder of Hale and his connection with the history of Huntington is the beautiful memorial fountain in the center of the town. This is a granite shaft, with a drinking fountain attached, erected in 1894. It stands opposite the Public Library, built a few years ago in honor of the men from Huntington who went to the front in the war between the states.

A little distance into the country from the center of the town the house of Wait Whitman, the poet, is still standing. It falling into decay. There has been talk of a concerted public effort to purchase and preserve it, but nothing definite has been done. The old cemetery of Huntington has much historic interest. It was used as a camp ground by the British during the Revolution. At the close of the war General Washington paid a visit of state to Huntington, remaining over night, and the old chronicles contain a vivid account thereof.

THE DOCTOR'S ADVICE.

The doctor looked serious. "You should be very careful for at least a month," he said.

"Is it as bad as all that?" asked the patient, anxiously.

"If the result is to be as satisfactory as I would like to have it, you cannot follow the rules I lay down too carefully."

"I will do exactly as you say," said the now thoroughly alarmed patient.

"A—am I eating too heartily?"

"Much too heartily. You should eat simpler food and not so much of it. If you follow my advice you'll cut your butcher's and baker's bills just about in half."

"I'll do it, doctor."

"You ought to take more exercise, too," continued the physician. "How do you go to your office now?"

"By bus."

"Stop it at once. You must walk to and from your office every day, rain or shine. Do you ever go to the theater?"

"Quite often."

"You mustn't do it while you're under my care. How about smoking?"

"I smoke, of course, but only in moderation."

"Don't smoke at all," instructed the physician. "Throw away all your cigarettes, and don't buy another for 30 days at least, or I'll give you the case."

"I'll do it, doctor; but—but—"

"Do you drink?"

GEORGE T. ODELL, General Manager.

"Occasionally, but I—"

"Stop it entirely."

"A little cereal on the table now and then ought not to—"

"Not a drop at any time."

"All right, doctor. What next?"

"Nothing. Follow these instructions closely for 30 days, and by that time—"

"Yes," said the patient, eagerly. "By that time what?"

"By that time," repeated the doctor, "you ought to have saved enough to pay me the balance due on that little bill you have owed me for a matter of about 18 months. Good day."—Tilt-Bits.
