printed ballots. Judge Maginnis suggested the challenging of these votes which were so written on, and wanted Judge Morse to pass on this question at once. The court, however, declined to do so, and court, however, declined to do so, and said that the ballots which were chal-lenged would be taken up altogether and that he would then require each side to take a position whether or not they challenged certain classes of bal-lots and he would then rule on the various questions presented.
