BREVITIES.

The ice crop is the only instance of man's reaping where he has not sowed.

A man's credit must be bad, indeed, when he can't even borrow trouble.

A Boston paper calls one of the police justices of that city a "velvet pawed dictum of law."

A Philadelphia belle went into hysterics because she thought as France had become a Republic there would be no more French fashions.

To try to get an honest man inside a "ring" is to attempt Sydney Smith's proposition to "put square men in a round hole."

Agricultural fairs are epidemic now but there's no use of garden vegetables competing for prizes—the cabbage will always be ahead.

A New York tailor was startled the other day by the return of a bill which he had sent to a magazine editor, with a notice that the "manuscript was respectfully declined."

A number of respectable citizens of Hannibal, N. Y., who started in the temperance cause last spring with great ardor, got together a few evenings ago and burned their pledges.

A foot race occurred at Newark, N. J., recently between a blind man and an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, the former carrying a child on his back. During the race the blind man fell and broke his leg, thus losing the stakes.

The people of Enfield, N. H., not being satisfied with the census taken by the Government, have taken a new one by a committee of citizens, and found that they numbered 93 souls more than the census represented.

Henry Ward Beecher don't believe in turning the other cheek. He says when a fellow smites you, hand him one on his bugle.—Ex.

A deer, wedged between cakes of ice, was captured alive in the Mississippi by some pile drivers near North McGregor, Iowa, the other day.

Tourgeneff, the famous Russian novelist, is in England, and one of the papers bestows upon him a rather dubious compliment, in the remark that "those who have not read his books are to be envied."

An Atlanta, Ga., paper of last week says: "A lady in this city tied her hubby's hands and feet, the other day, just for fun, and then went through his pockets for a certain billet-doux, and found it. His physicians tells him that his face won't be badly scarred, though he may remain permanently bald."

A Nebraska girl, who married a fellow of mean reputation, was taken to task for it by her uncle, "I know uncle," she replied, "that Joe is not good for much, but he said I dared not have him and I wont take a stump from anybody."

A school-boy going out of the playground without leave, one of his masters called after him, and inquired where he was going. "I am going to buy a ha'porth of nails." "What do you want a ha'porth of nails for?" "For a half penny replied the youngster.

A fellow having a spite at a sausage-maker, rushed into his shop, when crowded with customers, threw a large dead cat upon the counter, and said: "That makes nineteen! We'll settle when you're not so busy!" and made his exit. He was, of course, followed by the sausage amateurs, empty-handed.

Dio Lewis, in one of his dissertations on what to eat and how to eat it, says one pound of meat boiled to rags, with a quart of beans, and eaten with brown bread, will make a dinner which seven adults cannot overcome. Much, probably, depends on the quantity of brown bread added.

"How is this for High?"—A. Williams, junior, after an extensive research, has discovered that this expression, which has been accredited to the gentleman in Mark Twain's steamboat explosion, was originally made by the cow when she "jumped over the moon."

The following curious advertisement recently appeared in the London Times: "An elderly person, fond of every pleasure life can afford and money procure, desires to be received into or to make an enjoyable home. Party possesses and lives up to an ample fortune, has common sense perception, and therefore hopes boarding-house keepers and such like, as Puritanical people monstrosities, and hungry, poor, struggling respectabilities, will feel it useless to write. Offers must be explicit on all points, and will be confidential, therefore no more general or anonymous letters will be noticed.

Prince Joinville solicits a command in the French Army, and is ordered, by Gambetta, to leave France!

PARIS TRANSFORMED INTO A BATTLE FIELD—MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN KILLED BY THE PROJECTILES OF THE BESIEGERS IN THE STREETS AND HOUSES!

NEW YORK.

Gambetta orders Prince Joinville to leave France—Restoration of the French Regency talked of—Particulars of a great battle—Progress of the bombardment—Terrible destruction of life and property.

NEW YORK.—A dispatch to the Herald, dated London, 15th, says: "Prince Joinville has just returned from France. He went to Chauzey's army and requested a command. Chauzey welcomed him, but Gambetta ordered the Prince to leave the country immediately. The Prince refused to leave and expressed his willingness to serve as private, but Gambetta ordered Chaussy to send him to Bordeaux under a guard, unless he obeyed the order to leave the country. Joinville, seeing the difficult position in which his refusal to leave placed Chaussy, and to show his appreciation of the friendly treatment he had received from the General, left and returned to England.

The Duke of Chartres is now in France under an assumed name. Lesset, the French charge d'affairs in London, together with several leading imperialists, has joined the Orleanists.

De. Connean has been on a visit to the Empress The restoration of the regency and the old legislative assembly is much talked about. It is said the restoration contemplates a close alliance with Prussia. Bismarck has recently been approached on the subject, but entirely refuses to commit himself to the restoration. He said, when Paris falls we shall find a de facto government. If it is willing to accept peace and elect a constitutional government to confirm the terms, we will not interfere with the internal affairs of France. If, on the other hand, the temporary government is inclined to wickedly prolong this wicked war, we will be willing to treat with the empire, which has not yet been constitutionally set aside.

A dispatch to the Herald, dated London 14, says a treaty between Russia, and the French Empire is talked of, based upon the following terms: First, a modification of the commercial treaty of 1860; second, the Oriental question to be henceforth regarded as a secondary matter by France; third, that portion of Belgium known as French Flanders to be annexed to France, in lieu of Alsace, and Alsace and Luxembourg to be annexed to Germany. It is supposed that the latter proposition will satisfy the amour propre of France and reconcile the people to the restoration.

The New York Herald correspondent, writing from the headquarters of the army of the Loire, at Lemans, at midnight on the 11th, gives the following particulars of the second day's battle between Chauzey's forces and the German army under Prince Frederick Charles: "This has been one of the most eventful days in the history of France during the present war and probably one of the most eventful battles fought since the struggle began closed at nightfall this day. After the defeat of yesterday, Jan. 10th, General Chaussy, displaying much energy, rallied his broken columns and having received reinforcements determined to strike another blow to retrieve his fortunes, knowing the whole hope of France centered on the ability of the army to break through the opposition of the Prince, and advance to the relief of Paris. After a night of unceasing labor and anxiety, daylight found the French forces prepared for the conflict. Their army consisted of three corps, the 16th 17th and 21st, respectively under the command of Admiral Jourequiberg and Generals Calamb and Jauffrey. These corps averaged fifty thousand men each; the whole under the supreme control of Gen. Chauney. By one o'clock in the morning, Jourequiberg's corps had taken up a position on the right bank of the river Helane, Gen. Calamb's on the plateau of Auvors, and General Jauffery's on the right, covering the village of Brette. The Prussians advanced along these roads, and are said to have been under the command of Prince Frederick Charles himself, over a hundred thousand strong. Soon after 10 o'clock, sharp firing was opened by the Prussians from well-located batteries on the left of the French, and was replied to with spirit. Very soon a large force of German infantry flanked by cavalry, advanced under cover of a heavy artillery fire, striking the right of Admiral Jourequiberg's position. The assaulting column was met by a fierce artillery fire from many guns, including a number of mitrailleuses of the new pattern. The struggle became exceedingly severe and was well contested, but, although the Germans suffered heavy loss, they finally succeeded in driving back the French, capturing only two guns, and holding an important position near the river. General Chaussy, perceiving the danger which threatened his position, moved forward his reserves of artillery to support Admiral Jourequiberg. It opened a terrific fire, which checked, for awhile the further advance of the Germans in that direction. Two or three severe assaults were made by the Germans to secure further advantages, the object being to take the position held by the French at La Tillere. The French, however, strongly posted, fought with great courage and determination, and each attack was repulsed with heavy loss to the Germans, the French also losing heavily. Meantime, an equally fierce attack was made on the French line covering the railroad to Chartres and Paris. After two hours' desperate fighting the French centre was driven back but it retreated slowly and in good order for a short distance only, to a position in the rear of that first occupied, where the rising ground affforded good facilities for artillery. Here a heavy force of guns was posted, which manned by marines, opened a severe and well directed fire on the advancing enemy. This not only checked the Germans, but compelled them to fall back in turn. A heavy counter-fire was soon opened from the German batteries, which during the engagement, had advanced to a commanding position on the left of the railroad. The superiority of the German guns in firing soon became apparent. After an unequal duel the French fire slackened, the Germans causing great loss to the French lines. Still the French infantry maintained their position heroically, and another attempt to dislodge them signally failed. For some time the engagement had the character of an artillery duel, but when the German lines had taken the position assigned them, a more active attack commenced evidently with the object of cutting between the enemy and Lemans, and capturing a large number of prisoners. At four o'clock the tactics of the Germans seemed changed in heavy massing of troops on the French right, under cover of the wood near the village of Brette, which was held by the French. The wood was on the extreme left of the Prussian position, stretching for miles south-east of the plain between the road and village, and was commanded by the Prussian artillery, which was well posted on the left under cover of the wood. A sharp and precise needle gun fire was opened on the French line and the position to the left of the village of Brette, not more than seven hundred yards distant. It soon became evident that it would be impossible for them long to hold the position unless the Germans were dislodged. A heavy fire of artillery directed on the woods, had apparently but little effect, and a large body of French infantry advanced in good order across——

Here the dispatch abruptly ends.

NEW YORK, 16.—London and Paris newspapers of the 10th say a rain of projectiles, some weighing ninety-six kilogrammes, unparalleled in the history of the siege is poured into Paris from the Invalides to the Odeon. The bombardment is uninterrupted day and night, and so violent, that on the night of the 8th, between St. Sulpice and the Museum, shells every two minutes were striking the hospitals, ambulances, schools, the public libraries of Sulpice, Carbonne, Vallgrace and private houses. Women in the streets and in bed are killed; infants in their mothers' arms are struck. One projectile, in the Rue Vanguard, killed four children and wounded five. The unrivalled works of art at the Luxembourg museum are destroyed. The hospital at Vallgrace has suffered greatly. The wounded are killed in their beds. Paris is transformed into a battle-field, women showing themselves as brave as men.

FOREIGN NEWS.

WEST INDIES.

Cargo of the "Hornet" captured.

HAVANA, 15.—The steamer Hornet landed her cargo on the 12th near Manati. The Spanish troops arrived shortly afterwards and captured her entire cargo. They killed several expeditionists and are in pursuit of the remainder. The officers of the Hornet, seeing the state of affairs on shore immediately went to sea.

BELGIUM.

BRUSSELS, Jan. 14.—It is expected there will be a concentration of 50,000 Belgian troops, in case Faidherbe is forced to the frontier.

GREAT BRITAIN.

LONDON, 15.—The disabled steamer, City of Brooklyn, arrived at Roche's Point, this afternoon, under sail.

The Prussians are menacing to bombard Longevy. The women and children are fleeing to Belgium and Luxembourg. There was an artillery and infantry fight on Saturday near Longevy.

It is said an officer of high rank has arrived at Luxembourg, with a letter from the King of Prussia to Prince Henry.

FRANCE.

Constant skirmishing near Havre—Protest against the bombardment of Paris—Sorties repulsed.

BRANSTON, 13.—There was severe fighting till evening between Rerincourt and Croix. The results are unknown. Large German reinforcements are coming from the north. There is constant skirmishing near Havre. It is rumored the Prussians are turning Faidherbe's left wing and menacing Cambral.

The Paris government protests, to foreign powers, against the bombardment wantonly of hospitals, ambulances, and churches, killing innocent women and children. Military usage requires a warning to remove noncombatants. The bombardment is not a preliminary military action, but a coldly calculated devastation.

The inhabitants of Paris are undismayed. On the night of the tenth a vigorous sortie was made by the Paris garrison against the guards near Le Brouget and Drouey, the 11th corps near Mendon, and the 2d Bavarian corps near Clamirt. The Parisians were everywhere repulsed and retreated flying.
