EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Legislature of Indiana has passed a law making it an offense punishable by fine for a telegraph operator to disclose the contents of any message sent over the wires.

A Louisville lottery project, in which the Willard Hotel was the principal prize, has collapsed. Of the $50,000 taken in for tickets, only about $10,000 remains for division among the purchasers.

The Cincinnati Times-Star says: "While the more moderate Mormons are preaching down polygamy at Kirtland, the Simon pure Brighamites are preaching it up at Salt Lake, and the latter seem to sweep in all the converts."

It is believed that about 3,000 persons, including many of the wealthiest citizens of New York, are liable under the penal code for complicity in fraudulent practices to escape jury duty. It is not likely that they will be punished. The number is too great.

Mr. Cummings was a candidate for Alderman in St. Louis. He wrote to the Spectator: "Give me a little puff. If you ask any one that knows me, you will find that I am not unworthy of your support. I enclose $10." The editor printed the letter by way of a "little puff," and gave the money to charity.

There has seldom been a more a tormented party than that composed of three colored fishermen near Atlanta who went fishing with dynamite lately. They came out of their first and only explosion minus one arm, two fingers, several yards of cuticle and most of their clothing, and they did not stop to pick up the fish.

The old plain affirmation of the Quaker is likely to take the place of the oath. A bill has been introduced in the British Parliament to permit affirmation. It is argued, not without reason, that making an oath to tell the truth cheapens truth itself. The same question is under discussion in France and Italy. A bill to permit affirmation has passed the Cortes in Spain.

The sanitary inspectors of Paris lately stumbled over an establishment where operators were busily engaged in manufacturing ground acorns and burned wheat into a stiff paste which was then stamped into coffee beans. These were then colored with an alcoholic solution of cochineal, and packed in bags for sale.

The Missouri Supreme Court has decided that information obtained by a physician from a patient must not be disclosed on the witness stand, though the physician declares that the information was acquired while acting in a professional capacity, and was necessary to enable him to prescribe as a physician or operate as a surgeon. The court held that it would not do, while the mouth of a physician is closed as to the talk of a patient, to open it as to knowledge acquired from his own diagnosis of the case.

An Atlantic steamer race has taken place which is without a parallel in the history of ocean travel. The steamer Idris of the Leyland line started from Liverpool for Boston, and an hour later the Kansas of the Warren line steamed out of the Mersey bound for the same port. Both pursued the same course, and during the voyage never lost sight of each other. At first the Kansas passed her rival, but next day the Idris forged ahead. The race terminated after a long run of 3,000 miles, by the Idris reaching her dock in Charleston at 1 o'clock on Monday, the 2nd inst., and the Kansas swinging into her anchorage at 2 o'clock.

The Rev. Washington Gladden has been installed over a Congregational Church in Columbus, Ohio, without a dissenting vote in the council, although his declaration of theological views contained the following: "I am not satisfied with any theory of Christ's atoning work. What forms the endless life in the world to come will take I do not know. The mystery of the future I do not try to fathom. I only know that as it is full with the wicked in this world and in all worlds; and I am content to wait for the knowledge of how well it is with them till that shadow come who keeps the keys of all the creeds." What Mr. Gladden would make a large book.

The most astonishing claim yet made in behalf of electricity is that it has been proven possible to convey by vibrations of light, so that it is practicable not only to speak with a distant friend, but to see him. According to the Otago Times, Dr. Goldschmidt, of Victoria, has invented an apparatus, called by him an electro-scope, which accomplishes this. The paper in question says that a public test of this instrument was made in Melbourne in the presence of some forty scientific and public men. "Sitting in a dark room, they saw projected on a large piece of white burnished metal the race course at Flemington, with its myriad hosts of active beings. Each minute detail stood out with perfect fidelity to the original, and as they looked at the wonderful picture through binocular glasses it was difficult to imagine that they were not actually on the course itself, and moving among those whose actions they could so completely scan."

DASTARDLY, NOT HEROIC.

APPROPRIATE for the dynamite and other outrages which have been resorted to by the Irish "Invincibles," by way of retaliation for the wrongs inflicted upon Ireland, attempt to draw a parallel between these deeds of violence and war. This we regard as a great mistake. In the present imperfect condition of general society war appears to be an occasional necessity. Mankind have not yet reached that rational position where reason can take the place of force and right can prevail over selfishness. War with all its consequent horrors is regarded as a necessary evil. And, among civilized nations, it is regulated to some extent. There is a degree of fairness in its methods. It is open and declared antagonism, a struggle for supremacy for which either party is more or less prepared. Victory, it is true, does not prove the conqueror right nor defeat argue that the vanquished are wrong. But the resort to arms is a recognized mode of settling national difficulties, which are usually settled by the result.

The dynamite policy is not war, it is assassination. It is the work of the bravo, not of the soldier. It is a blow in the dark, not a struggle in the daylight. It is like crawling up behind a man and stabbing him in the back instead of smiting him in the face, boldly. There is all the difference between the method of the Fenians or Invincibles and the method of the Fenians or Invincibles and the method of the Fenians or Invincibles.

Ireland, no doubt, has been badly governed. Its people have heavy grievances. Its wrongs ought to be redressed. England will do little in this direction unless started out of its usual plodding way and its common indifference to Irish suffering. But the policy of assassination will not effect this in a desirable manner. Dynamite will startle no doubt, but it will not create sympathy or promote reform. It will only incite indignation and provoke harsh measures. It is not unlikely that if this kind of violence is continued it will be met by retaliation in a shape that will be disastrous to the Irish people. There is much natural antipathy among the working and lower classes of the English against the "Pad-dies" who constitute a large proportion of the laborers in many English towns. This antipathy, soon aroused into active demonstration by a sufficient pretext were afforded. And the ire of the working people in populous districts, if turned upon the countrymen of Brady and Fitzharris, of Egan and Rose, would result in summary vengeance, in the shape of rioting, mobbing and bloodshed.

The probability of this is recognized by Mr. Jennings, the observing and talented London correspondent of the New York World, who is a supporter of the Irish cause, but not of its methods. In a dispatch to the World of recent date he says: "Troops have been sent forward to-day to Birmingham to guard against the rescue of the Fenian prisoners there, by way of saying that the class in England which is at present in the most imminent danger is the Irish population of London and our large manufacturing cities. Should any lives be lost by another explosion of dynamite, it is not much to say that a literal war of extermination would probably be waged, and the Irish driven out of every town."

Already I notice that employers are getting afraid to take them, and a movement for their discharge is going on steadily in many large factories, so that, as I have already intimated, the blow of the next explosion will be certain to fall more heavily on the Irishmen than on any other class.

At the same time repressive measures instead of those of relief will be provoked towards Ireland itself, and its unhappy people will have cause to curse rather than applaud the party of dynamite and the dagger. We are not blind to the fact that the cause of Ireland is that of the weak against the strong, and that the agitation of words, the battle of arguments, makes but little headway in the struggle. But the attempt to gain independence or more liberty for Erin by the means now attempted, will not bring about the end desired, and will only postpone those reforms that are needed, and prejudice the vast majority of people in all civilized nations against the country and the cause which can think of no means for striking for freedom but those of the assassin, and no instruments but the knife of the bravo and the infernal machine of the dynamite fiend. The so-called "patriots" of the green have made a great mistake. War with England, however rash it might be regarded, would create sympathy and might gain assistance, but murder and mutilation, terrorism and diabolism, never. They are dastardly, not heroic.

ASSEMBLY HALL SERVICES.

Yesterday afternoon the congregation was first addressed by Elder M. A. Empey, recently returned from a mission to the Southern States. He spoke of the knowledge possessed by the Latter-day Saints regarding the divine origin of the work which they are engaged, and to which he bore testimony.

Elder John Morgan was the next speaker. He had just returned from a visit to the Southern States. He had traveled a long distance in about fifteen different States. Some people in the world imagined that persons who once got beyond the borders of Utah would not desire to return. Although the speaker's relations were in another part of the country, he was always glad to return to Utah and mingle with the people. He was in the same position as the Savior, who said his relatives were those who did the will of His Father in heaven. So when we went out for a season to return to the home of the Saints with joy and rejoicing. It was because the Gospel had a sweeter sound to our ears than any other. There had been a great change or revolution in public sentiment regarding the Saints lately to what prevailed about a year ago. The feeling was then very bitter, and the natural view of the situation was that the Saints would be annihilated. Now the same men who entertained a view of that kind, feel very differently. They found new newspapers were, as a rule, willing to treat us fairly. An incident wherein a Chicago paper had shown that disposition was related. The agitation referred to caused public men to be better informed regarding the belief and practices of the Saints—a very desirable result. An incident was told regarding a sectarian clergyman making application for a situation to preach the doctrines of the Latter-day Saints. An explanation was given him of the method pursued by the Saints in preaching without purse or scrip, and nothing more was heard from him. Many intelligent, honest and earnest inquirers were, however, being made and the Gospel was spreading among the people.

The Elders in the field reported that they had all sorts of success in the range of labor was extending. Almost one-third had been added to the missionary force in order to all appointments by request. Violent opposition had been met by did not, perhaps too much so, as an absence of opposition occasionally led to indifference. The better the Elders were known the more cordially they were treated. Railroad men as much relied upon the statements of the Elders as they would or could upon the statements of any people in a business way.

The arguments made by prominent men showing the unconstitutionality of the Exemption Law were, especially those of Judge Black, had an excellent effect upon thinking people. A gentleman in Tennessee recently stated that the "Mormon" question was assuming such a shape as to give it a national interest, on the ground that if their liberties could be taken away, so could those of others. Some of the best telegraphed ahead that a company of Elders was on the way to the Southern States, which had the effect of bringing out large numbers of different points to see them. A paper advocated that the party be near the line of one of the States and treated to a dose of Judge Lynch. Another journal stated that this was very poor argument, would be the very best way to advertise the "Mormons," and suggested that some of the turn out, meet the "Mormons," compare notes about doctrines and then let the fittest survive.

The speaker related some incidents showing the great prejudice against the Book of Mormon, but stated that that feeling was decreasing, as evinced by numerous applications for copies and explanations of that book. The people who embraced the Gospel in the south were emigrating about two-thirds as fast as they were baptized. Most of them settled in the San Luis Valley, Colorado, where soil, climate and other facilities compared favorably with those of this valley. The Saints there, as a rule, satisfied with their condition and prospects, being enabled to get titles to their lands at reasonable prices. Comparatively few turned aside from the faith. The immigration that landed there this spring had been provided for by the presiding officers with labor, the officials of the railroad recently finished to this city, had kindly furnished contracts for work adjacent to the settlement. The Saints and their neighbors got along excellently, especially when they became acquainted. The Judge of the District there stated lately that he had yet to have a first-hand "Mormon" culprit before him. The speaker related an incident about one of the families of the Saints isolated from the settlement. They were sick with fever, typhoid, and other diseases, and the neighbor in the Church called and asked several times if he could be of any service, and whether he should try a doctor. They would like to get some of the Elders from the settlement. The man named his horse, went to the settlement and informed the brethren about the request of the family. The Elders responded, and the same man subsequently asked the parties who were sick were getting better, and they were getting well he replied, "Yes, any people who have got faith like that will get well."

LATEST BY LIGHTNING.

A monstrous Death-Dealing Meteor. New York, 16.—A dispatch from William's Ranch, Texas, states that an immense meteor fell yesterday, destroying the house of L. Garola and killing him, his wife and five children. Every building in the town was shattered and all the houses shaken. The meteor is still steaming, and covers an acre of ground.

Northern Pacific Slaughter House.

St. Paul, 16.—Officials of the Northern Pacific report for the statement that large slaughter houses will be established at various points of the Yellowstone country along the line of that road with a view to the shipment of meat to the east, and that by this means great saving will be made in contract shipment of live stock.

Chicago, 16.—The President of the North Chicago Rolling Mills stated that the mill would be again in operation in from three to six months, or not at all. They would not be started while present prices of iron and steel were so low. The mill has been thrown out by the stoppage of these mills. He thinks one-third of the rails needed this year are already in the market and expect the balance of the year to be a very dark one.

Fifty Millions More.

St. Paul, 16.—The work in the piers is practically suspended. It is estimated that the total out of logs this season above here is 485,000,000 feet, or 60,000,000 in excess of the amount out in any former year.

Milwaukee, 16.—The evidence in the Scheller case is now all in. The case will be submitted to the jury this afternoon.
