A PROPER APPLICATION.

In the proceedings in the suits planted against the Church by the government, before the Supreme Court, last evening an application was made by the defense for an order authorizing parties who may be made defendants to institute such suits as might be necessary against the receiver, without special permission of the court. The reasonableness of this application is self-evident when it is considered that the court some time since granted the same privilege to the other side. If the plaintiff is to have exclusive privileges and the defense thus be robbed of its rights, then there would be no contest, as on one side would be a combatant armed and equipped from head to heel while the other would be practically without a legal weapon, with his hands bound together behind him.
