N. B. Some of these numbers may not be the same ones, the names of the owners set opposite them have made; but they are the numbers they are responsible to keep in repair. Wherein any individual did not fence on the number allotted to him for his lot and block, he was required to report the number he fenced, that every man might be responsible for his own fence: wherein persons have neglected this injunction, they are responsible, and not the fence Committee: wherein the lots will not pay the amount due for repairs, the property of the owners is responsible for it. DANIEL SPENCER, Pres't.

DESTRUCTIVE CONFLAGRATION.

One of the most destructive conflagrations that ever occurred in Philadelphia, broke out yesterday afternoon at No. 58 North Delaware Avenue, in the fourth story, occupied for storage. The flames spread in every direction, in a short time extending west to Water st., and south from Race to Collowhill streets. Three terrific explosions occurred; originating, as it is supposed, from about 1000 bags of saltpetre stored in Brook's warehouse. Many lives were lost, among whom were many valuable energetic and noble firemen; of these at least thirty are supposed to be killed, and ten or more of the wounded will probably die. The total number cannot be less than 100. Judging from the extent of ground covered by the fire, and the nature of the property consumed, we venture to compute the loss at $4,000,000.—Mo. Rep.

HORTICULTURE.

SEEDLING POTATOES.

MR. EDITOR,—Being a friend to every thing relative to the improvement of Agriculture and Horticulture, I rejoice to see to what a state we are likely to improve almost every article of vegetables and grain, by practising the growing of new varieties adapted to this climate, from seed: for instance, the Potatoe; which, in Europe and the Eastern States, is so much diseased, that a great portion of the crop is lost by the rot, which I believe is nothing more or less than the old varieties being too long continued, by cultivating from the roots, instead of renewing, or obtaining new varieties from seed. In order to remedy the evil of the Potatoe rot, and to obtain varieties adapted to this place, Mr. William Staires last year planted Potatoe seed, which produced several new varieties grown to their full size, and some of excellent quality; and on a further trial, this year they have been proven to yield an excellent crop, and to be well adapted to the climate. If this method is properly encouraged and carried out, by doing away altogether the old varieties of Potatoes, and substituting new varieties, and the Valley will ere long be unequalled for superior kinds of this excellent esculent root.

Indeed, let every person sow the seed, and produce good varieties of the Apple, Pear, Quince, Currant, Gooseberry, Strawberry, and every useful fruit and vegetable, and we will soon have a strong and vigorous collection, adapted and acclimated, of good fruit and vegetables, from the primitive stock of the Valley, independent of foreign importations.
