CULLED FROM LATEST EXCHANGES

Tucson, Arizona, Sept. 7.—The Yaqui Indians made a descent recently on the ranches near the Yaqui river, killing two men. They have been forced back to their villages by the state troops. Further particulars will be received tomorrow.

Austin, Nev., Sept. 7.—News has been received here this evening that a big fire occurred at Ione, sixty miles from this place, Tuesday night, at 10 o'clock. It started in Gage, Curtis & Co.'s warehouse, consuming it, and then spreading to three dwelling houses, a saloon and a livery stable owned by W. B. Sheehan, which were burned to the ground. Nothing was saved. A high wind was blowing up the canyon during the fire and it took all the efforts of the inhabitants to save Gage, Curtis & Co.'s store, whose loss will amount to $5,000. The Sheehan property cannot be replaced for $5,000; no insurance.

Fort Shaw, M. T., September 9.—A man belonging to this fort, while laboring under the delusion that he was an East India snake charmer, traveling in disguise, attempted to practice his art of witchery on a rattler which he found lying in the grass, and which he thought was sufficiently under the influence of his magic spell to be handled without further danger. He no sooner attempted to take hold of it, than it sprang to him, biting him in his hand. Medical aid was given him, and he is now entirely out of danger, but he means what he terms his lost art. He has learned not to monkey with a robust Rocky Mountain rattler.—Butte Miner.

Wednesday morning the residence of Mr. Fred. Grose narrowly escaped destruction by fire, and had it not been that Mr. Thomas Snarr happened to drive by at the time a disastrous conflagration would no doubt have ensued, as the houses in that vicinity are built very close together. Mr. Snarr's attention was first called to the fire by the screams of the women folks, and when he arrived on the ground the whole roof of the building was aflame. He, with another gentleman, succeeded, after strenuous efforts, in extinguishing the flames. The damage done was slight, there being a hole burnt in the roof about four feet square.—Park City Call.

Benson, Arizona, Sept. 6.—Al Liebenthal, a commercial traveler for Friedlander & Co., of San Francisco while on his way from Tombstone to Fort Huachuca, was attacked by three Mexican bandits, who ordered him to throw up his hands. Liebenthal had considerable funds in his possession belonging to his firm, and did not care to lose this money. Instead of throwing up his hands he threw down his six-shooter and opened fire. Twelve shots were exchanged. Liebenthal escaped unhurt, but succeeded in wounding one of the Mexicans and killing one of their horses. The Mexicans started for Sonora. The Sheriff of Cochise county and posse have left Tombstone in pursuit.

Florence, Arizona, Sept. 7.—On August 9, Nicholas White, a rancher, was waylaid near Round Valley, twelve miles east of here, and shot through the neck. The bullet passed around the wind-pipe; White recovered. Budd Dozier was recognized by White by the roadside and arrested. He was held in default of $2,000 bonds. D. D. Baker, alias Ben Decker, disappeared at the time, but he was apprehended near Lordsburg, N. M. and brought here. He confesses a conspiracy with Dozier, Bob Dunn and James Brash, to kill White and his family. He was offered $3,000 to kill him, but refused; he accepted an offer of $25, a horse and a gun to bear the blame, and fled. He is held in $1,000 bonds, Bob Dunn in $1,500 and Jas. Brash in $7,500. Brash owns a water ditch and had trouble with White, his neighbor, and suits were pending. The confession charges Brash with originating and aiding the conspiracy. The trial will take place in the middle of October.

Albuquerque, New Mexico, Sept. 7.—Charles Corey committed suicide here this afternoon by taking morphine of some sort of liquor. He had been on a spree since last Saturday, and Monday night he entered the bedroom of Dr. T. H. Wells before the doctor and wife retired, secreting himself under the bed. The doctor's wife for once retired without looking under the bed, but when the doctor had disrobed himself she told him to look, and he discovered a man. He got his revolver and was about to shoot when the man begged for mercy. On getting out he was found to be Corey. The doctor, through kindness, allowed him to depart, but in strong language told him that he had better leave town. However, he did not take the doctor's advice, and to-day continued drinking. In the afternoon he was much intoxicated and became ashamed of himself. He purchased some morphine and died from its effects. He had been around Albuquerque about five years. No one knows where he came from.—S. F. Chronicle.

One day last week Mr. W. R. Shelton and wife, of Spokane Falls, Washington Territory, were camping out at Trent, enjoying themselves fishing and hunting. They had been shooting and were returning to camp, about a mile away, when a shady grove near a farm house caused them to stop and rest. Mr. Shelton selected a comfortable looking place under a shady tree and sat directly down upon a rattlesnake, which instantly struck him in the fleshy part of the hip three times. Mr. Shelton seized a club and killed it at once, and with rare presence of mind began a series of applications to kill the poison, drinking all the milk he could procure from the farm house, whisky, etc. Swelling set in and in a few hours the side of his body had swollen enormously and one eye was swollen shut. In five hours he began vomiting and threw up a great quantity of greenish colored matter. He is now home and is to be congratulated on his escape, which is undoubtedly due to the remarkable presence of mind exhibited by himself and wife.—Northwest Tribune, Sept. 8.

From Coroner Miller we learn the following particulars of the accident near Carbon by which Anton Kratz lost his life Thursday noon: It seems that the freight train was late and the section gang were on the hand car going down to Carbon for dinner. In the rock cut about one and a half miles west of Carbon there is a sharp curve. The hand car was in the cut and within one hundred feet of the approaching train before it was discovered, the car running at a high rate of speed. When the train was sighted all the men jumped. Kratz fell, striking his head upon a sharp rock which crushed a hole in his skull, killing him instantly. The coroner's verdict reads: "The deceased came to his death by jumping from a hand car on September eighth, in the stone cut one and a half miles west of Carbon, to avoid a collision between hand car and freight train No. 27; and we believe that due precaution was not observed by the section foreman."—Rawlins, (Wyo.) Journal, Sept. 10.

On Friday last as George Rowley was driving along the Almy road he saw a team and wagon going along ahead of him, with a man apparently intoxicated driving. Smoke was issuing from the wagon in large volumes and he whipped up his team in order to learn the cause. Just before he reached the wagon the man tumbled head first out on to the ground and badly bruised his face. Rowley called to a man near by to hold his horses and he ran up, stopped the team and unhitched them from the wagon, which was loaded with flour, feed and vegetables. The bottom of the vehicle was filled with straw and this was on fire and burning rapidly. He at once procured water and put it out. But for the timely discovery the wagon and all its contents would have been destroyed, and had the team once seen the fire they would have been beyond control. After the fire was extinguished George turned his attention to the man, whose name is George Platt, and found out that the fall he received had sobered him up somewhat, so he hitched up the team, put the man on board and again started him on his journey to the northward.—Utah (Wyo.) Chiefstain.

Last Thursday morning a fire broke out in the field near Smithfield, and four stacks of hay belonging to Wm. Douglass were destroyed. The loss will be very severe on that gentleman, especially so from the fact that he is now in the penitentiary for the sake of his religion. The origin of the fire is unknown.

To-day, W. H. Smart, who has been connected with the faculty of the B. Y. College for a number of years past, departed for Cornell University, New York, where he intends to pursue a course of study. Mr. Smart is well known in this region and highly respected by a numerous host of friends. We, with them, wish him success in his labors and a safe return to his home.

Chris Garff's box factory is now shipping boxes as fast as they can be made. A car load of egg cases goes to Salt Lake next week. Purchasers say the home article is superior to the imported in several respects, the principal one being that the home-made box weighs one pound less than the imported article, which makes a considerable saving of freight on a carload.

The elopement of the woman living in the Third Ward, mentioned in our last issue, as the details of it come to light, is turning out to be a sickening piece of business. It seems for a short time previous to the elopement, two men "Cap." or "Doc." Van Osten and Simpson Pearson, had been holding suspicious relations with the woman, whose name is Jane Jordan. On the day of the elopement she told her folks she was going north to visit her daughter who was sick. She had previously sold some property to J. R. Blanchard, for $400, and bought a large amount of clothing and jewelry. On the day she left she gave the deed of her husband's place to her boy and told him to keep it, and boarded the train for the north. In the meantime Pearson and Van Osten took a wagon and went to Smithfield, where they joined her. It has since been learned that she did not arrive at her daughter's place, and no one has any idea as to the whereabouts of the trio. The woman's husband, Mr. Jordan, has been away from home for some time, but returned to Logan on Friday.—Logan Journal, Sept. 10.

MUTILATED MONEY.

SMALL NOTES ARE THE WORST—THE REDEMPTION.

"Are many mutilated notes presented for redemption?" asked a reporter of a clerk in the United States sub-treasury on Wall street today. "Yes, more than the public has any idea of," he replied; and the obliging clerk at once volunteered to initiate the reporter into the workings of the department having charge of that particular branch. The chief rules regulating the work are as follows:

Paragraph 16 reads: Mutilated United States notes, gold certificates and silver certificates are redeemable by the treasurer only, at a discount of 10 per cent. of the face value for each tenth of the original proportion missing in any part or place, provided not less than one-half of the whole note is presented.

Paragraph 18. Fragments less than half and notes subject to discount under paragraph 16 are redeemable at the face value of the whole note when accompanied by an affidavit of the owner or other persons having knowledge of the facts that the missing portions have been totally destroyed.

Of national bank notes it says: Paragraph 21. Notes equaling or exceeding three-fifths of their proportions, and bearing the name of the bank and the signature of one of its officers, are redeemable at their full face value.

Paragraph 22. Notes of which less than three-fifths remain, or from which both signatures are lacking, are not redeemed by the treasurer, but should be presented for redemption to the bank of issue.

More $1, $2 and $5 notes are redeemed than of any other denominations. Notes were shown to the reporter that were scolloped, torn in half, with corners missing holes the size of a silver dollar seemingly taken out of the center of the note, and some so thin that more handling would reduce them to shreds. The silver certificates of $1 and $2 were well represented, even though in circulation but one year. They were principally torn, not worn as in the other cases. A piece of glass the exact size of a note, divided into squares and oblongs is used to measure the size of the mutilations. One half of the glass is divided into five parts, formed by lines cut horizontal with the ends—each oblong being one-tenth of the glass. The other half is cut into twenty squares, each representing one-fortieth of the glass. This glass when laid upon a note at once reveals the extent of the mutilation.

The money is received and examined by a special clerk, who, after returning the proper amount to the person presenting it, turns the note or notes over to a clerk whose duty it is to pack and prepare the same for shipment to Washington. A large stack of bills was before the last clerk and he was busy sorting them according to their denominations. They are then put into packages of 100 notes. Then ten packages are tied together forming a bundle containing 1,000 bills. Silver certificates are perforated before being packed. The bundles are expressed to Washington, where the notes are reduced to a pulp, which, in turn, is moulded into various shapes and sold to curiosity hunters.

More than $30,000,000 in mutilated notes are redeemed each year at the sub-treasury.—Commercial Advertiser.

DONE FOR.—They were discussing art matters.

"Have you ever been done in oil, Mr. Smith?" she asked.

"Oh, yes," he replied.

"Who was the artist?"

"He wasn't an artist—he was a broker."
