COUNTY ATTORNEY STEPS IN

He Orders Agency to Discontinue the Practice—Prosecution to Follow Repetitions.

Although T. B. Layman, an attorney, has been dead for three years, his name altered with one letter, has appeared recently on a dozen or more summons issued from the city court in collection cases handled by the Wallace Law Collection agency in the D. F. Walker building. When the attention of County Atty. John P. Lyon was called to the matter yesterday, he immediately put a stop to it. If Layman's name appears on any more summons, John J. Wallace, president of the company, will be prosecuted for forgery.

For more than two years, the name of the dead attorney has been used by the collection agency, according to the records. The first case of record was Dr. Woodmansee against Sam Castberry. Since that time dozens of summons have been signed in this manner where a settlement has been made by the debtor without going to court.

The case which was called to the attention of Mr. Lyon yesterday was that of Dr. W. H. Rothwell against Jens Hanson for the collection of a doctor's bill. When Wallace was called by telephone by Mr. Lyon, he explained that Layman was a member of the firm and that he was now in Cincinnati, Ohio. Wallace admitted that Layman had not been in Salt Lake for three years and that the attorney had not signed the summons and had no knowledge that it was being done. Wallace denied that he knew of Layman's death. The fact that the summons bears the name of "Layman" instead of "Laymon," the latter being the proper way to spell the name, is the only thing that saved the collecting agency from standing trial.

YOUNG MAN INVESTIGATES.

About a month ago, a summons was received by a young man from the city court and signed by Wallace. He went to court to see about it, taking the summons with him. He was told that the suit had not been filed, as the Wallace collection agency, which was handling the matter, had five days in which to file the case after the summons was served. The young man went to the Wallace collection agency to make a settlement and avoid a suit. When he went to the office of the company, he asked for Mr. Layman. The stenographer told him that Layman had just stepped out but would return shortly. She offered to have the matter taken up by another member of the firm. He consented and agreed upon a settlement. No suit was filed.

It is charged by several attorneys whose clients have brought similar summons to them, that it is a "bluff" to scare the persons into making a settlement without going to court and pay costs. In the city court an attorney can issue a summons upon his own signature and then have five days in which to file the suit. This is perfectly regular and is regarded as good procedure when the attorney is not a dead man.

MAKES NO STATEMENT.

John J. Wallace said this morning when called by telephone that he had nothing to say about the matter. He would neither affirm nor deny that the name of Layman had been used on summons issued at the instance of his firm. Wallace was arrested for embezzlement about three years ago, but was acquitted.

T. B. Layman was well known in Salt Lake. He was suffering from poor health when he came out here and only remained a short time. He was employed at the Knutsford hotel shortly before he returned to Cincinnati. When he died there several persons who knew him here received word of his death from his family.

He was given until Monday to enter his plea.

TWO DIVORCE ACTIONS.
Wife is Aggrieved in One Instance,
Husband in the Other.

Mrs. Gertrude B. Beckwith seeks a divorce from her husband, Ira W. Teich, on the charge of desertion. After leaving her on Aug. 14, 1908, he wrote her a letter stating that he would never live with her again and asking her to get a divorce. She says that she has written him several letters asking him for money, but that she received no reply. They were married on Dec. 23, 1902, and have no children. She asks for $100 attorney's fees and the restoration of her maiden name, Gertrude Beckwith.

W. C. Morris, who brought an action yesterday for divorce from Leila Morris, declares that he has been subjected to cruel and inhuman treatment, during the greater part of his married life. In his complaint he does not state the particulars of the case. They were married Jan. 1, 1891, and have one child, 13 years old. The child is with the mother. He asks for the privilege of visiting the child.

INJURY CASE TRANSFERRED.

The case of Peter Thanopoulos vs. the Copper company was transferred today to the United States district court from the Third district court where it was first filed. The plaintiff is a minor 16 years of age who, the complaint says, was employed as a water boy for the Utah Copper company. While engaged in that work it is alleged he was asked to act as switchman also. While doing so he was struck by a car, which was hanging from one of the cars, and rolling under the cars, his left leg was so badly injured that amputation was necessary. He is now maimed for life and has received $2000 compensation. Peter Kuras is his guardian and Dey, Hoppaugh and McGurkin are the attorneys.

SUIT IN OSUTER FILED.

Joseph F. Smith, trustee in trust of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, brought an action in the Third district court yesterday against William G. Bradshaw to recover possession of property in lot 4, block 74, plat A, Salt Lake city survey. It is alleged in the complaint that the defendant unlawfully took possession of the property June 21.

TITLE IN CONTROVERSY.

Sarah E. A. Barton, Irene L. A. Barton, Albert L. A. Barton, her guardian, Isabella S. Armstrong, and William F. Armstrong, executors of the estate of Francis Armstrong, deceased, filed suit yesterday in the Third district court against the George Q. Cannon association to recover $300. It is alleged that the Cannon association has extended beams from its building in lot 5, block 75, plat A into the wall of the plaintiffs' building. It is alleged that the Cannon association is making some claim on the wall of the building which clouds the plaintiffs' title. An order was issued citing the defendant into court to set forth its claim. The complaint asks that the title be quieted.

IN POLICE COURT.

When Otto Hanson sought the comfort of the cooling draft in the hallway of 68 Commercial street, he found that it led to the shade of the back wall of the city jail. He was arraigned this morning before Judge Bowman on the charge of trespass, and in answer to the request for his plea explained that he had had a room at that place, but finding it too close and sultry had sought the floor of the hallway for a bedplace. A plea of not guilty was entered by him, and he will have the shade of the back wall until next Monday, when he will be given a hearing.

The vagaries of the courtroom showed strongly again in the cases of Daniel Spencer and Edward Medwed, two boys arrested for riding their bicycles on the sidewalk. They were both about the same age, and both working boys. Although Spencer's father interceded for him, explaining to the court that on the occasion of the arrest the boy had been taking his brother's place at work for half a day, as well as doing his own work, and that in his hurry to do the double work, he had unwittingly violated the law, the boy was fined $5. Medwed's next plea was that he had been riding on the sidewalk, and he pleaded guilty to the wilful violation of the law, his only excuse being that his "wheel had gone flat and he wanted to save the rim." In his case, too, the court was lenient. Rogers and the arresting officer, Patrolman Dan Grundvig, interceded for him, on the ground that he is a hard-working boy and contributes part of his wages to his mother. He was discharged, although the court took occasion to deliver a reprimand on the bringing of cases into court only to be discharged because of some excuse.

It was impressed upon P. S. Webster this morning that as a cure for toothache whiskey is an expensive medicine. The impression was strengthened by a night and a day in jail and a $5 fine. Webster pleaded guilty to having been drunk and offered as his only excuse that he had had the toothache. "It hurt so that I took a few drinks, and I'm pretty young and can't stand it," he said. "Well, you'll be fined $5," was the only sympathy given by the court for the suffering of the toothache.

If John James Henry Johnson Clifton (who is particular about having his full name used) keeps his promise, he will be by far the far away, but the police still have their fears. J. J. H. W. J. Clifton has been "one best bet" about headquarters for the past week or two. He has made the station a sort of a home, and any time he left it was good for more than even money that he would be back before sundown. The only guess was in what fantastic makeup or predicament he would reappear.

"Mistah" Clifton first came into real prominence by insisting that he should be "waited upon" in restaurants by waiters. He then took him to court, he wished a white suit, and then he couldn't pay a dollar for peaches and cream, the real price of which was 10 cents, he was arrested and tried on a charge of obtaining a meal under false pretenses. When the court found him not guilty he took a liking to the police department and seemed to look upon the officers of Lieutenant Hemphill and Chief of Police Harlow as at home—until he was thrown out. Then he was brought to the station, literally, in a barrel when in an innovation on the "sandwich" advertising man he refused to heed the officer's warning to keep off the sidewalk. A day or two in jail on that charge didn't do much to quiet the irrepressible Mr. Clifton, and Saturday he hired an automobile to carry him from the Wilson hotel to the Newhouse block, the fare was $5, and Clifton only had a dollar, so there was another arrest. He was released on his declaration "Shuah, this block cost me a dollar, but I got out of the city by the Salt Sea, when Ah got out, Ah'm goin' to vittin' tuah." He was then taken to the jail.

William Morgan and A. Beckstead, two youths charged with the theft of two horses, entered pleas of not guilty to the complaints filed against them, accusing grand larceny, but through their counsel retained the privilege of changing their pleas to not guilty. Should they elect to go directly to the district court for hearing. An attempt was made to have the case against Beckstead transferred to the juvenile court, but this was opposed by Asst. County Atty. Bowman on the ground that the juvenile court does not have jurisdiction in felony cases.

The case of A. H. Rohner, charged with having obtained money under false pretenses by issuing worthless checks, was discharged in Judge Bowman's court on motion of the prosecuting attorney. In the explanation to the court it was stated that Rohner's offense had been committed under the influence of liquor, and not with any intent to defraud. H. G. Cook of Heber City, the employer of Rohner, arrived in the city yesterday reimbursed Beckstead, who accepted the worthless checks, and gave Beckstead a plain writing in the case, acknowledging his satisfaction.

What was intimated to be a partnership misunderstanding was brought up in Judge Bowman's court this morning when William Waterfall of 337 Windsor avenue, was arraigned on a charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The complaint alleges that Waterfall, representing himself to be the manager for the Stoker Coal Saver and Smoke Preventive Device company, obtained money from the principal, had collected from the Union Paper Box company without authority the sum of $150 due on a contract. The complaint is sworn to by George E. Rogers, owing to the absence from the city of Mr. Stoker, who the defendant's counsel said was an important witness to show that the matter was a misunderstanding, the hearing of the case was continued until July 20.

After taking up an hour of the court's time this morning in which he got lost in a maze of conflicting and contradictory stories, the defendant, who was charged with the theft of a quantity of bed clothing from the La Paloma rooming house at 146 south State street, Ignacio Guero, a Mexican, showed that he had in fact been caught by a policeman of humor by a policeman of humor. He was charged with the theft of the clothing. He will have the next six months in the city jail to chuckle over his joke. The Mexican was caught by a policeman of humor while he was attempting to pawn the stolen bed clothing. He told the officer first that his sister had given it to him to pawn, and then he changed his story, saying the stuff had been given him by two "Americans." He elaborated on this latter statement at his trial, but wound up by admitting that he had not told the truth because it was easier to lie than tell the truth.

The police have released and E. W. Stringfellow may perform the "Third Degree" in the police court. In a case against Mr. Stringfellow had dragged through several weeks. Asst. City Atty. Rogers informed the court this morning that the chief of police had inspected the case and had found no ground for it, and because of inefficiency of evidence, he asked that the case be dismissed. The court was also informed that the management of the show had promised that the utmost propriety would be observed within the show.

If anyone knows where Fred Merrill is, he should forget it, or at least not tell it to the police. He is a convicted prisoner, and has another charge of larceny hanging over him—but the police aren't the least bit worried—except that perhaps they might stumble on to him. He is now in the city jail, and he has to arrest him. Merrill, now in the lowest depths of the drug habit, was in such a condition that even the workers on the chain gang threatened to strike if he was not taken away from them, as his cellmates refused to eat or sleep if he was kept among them. It took him a long time to see his chance of escape—and the guards didn't see him when the light dawned. The second charge of larceny has been continued indefinitely, with the hope that it will never need to be called up again.

Mrs. Anna Eufelmann found scant comfort in her desire for revenge against her neighbor, Andrew Olson, Rodberg of 164 east Eighth South street this morning when he was found not guilty of having disturbed the peace. The defendant was discharged immediately following the introduction of the prosecution's evidence, and without a word of argument. From the statements of the complaining witness she had attempted to go into the yard of Rodberg's, and had been caught by "talking" to a boy who had struck her boy. She accused the defendant of having stopped her and calling "lots of bad names," but she couldn't remember just what names he had called her because he talked so fast. She admitted that she had told him that "he had better go into his house and mind his own business." The second witness could only testify to having heard Mr. Rodberg call her a loud, but said that Mrs. Engelmann had been talking loudly, too, and shouting at the defendant that "she would get the law on him." The third witness hadn't seen the occurrence, and said nothing about it. Judge Bowman promptly discharged the defendant.

RESULT OF CELEBRATION.

With Other Children the Victim of Accident Set Off Several "Sparklers" With Terrible Results.

The second fatality demanded as the toll to be paid for Salt Lake's celebration of Independence day was recovered this morning when little Loretta Gillespie, the 10-year-old daughter of Robert W. Gillespie of No. 516 Spruce avenue, died at the L. D. S. hospital.

The death of the little girl occurred after a three days' brave battle for life, made under the torture and intense suffering of a terribly burned body. The accident which resulted in the death was directly due to fireworks, and occurred at the home of Charles E. Street, 368 Ninth East street, on the night of the fifth. Mr. and Mrs. Street had planned an evening's entertainment for several friends, a part of which was to be a display of fireworks. The children had been warned to keep away from the fireworks, but in their fun-loving, mischievous mood had disregarded the warning. Securing several "sparklers," and some matches, they had begun lighting them. In some way the little Gillespie girl's light, flimsy dress was swished against one of the sparklers and in an instant she was enveloped in flames. Her screams ran screaming in her terror and frantic with the terrible pain, Mr. Street caught her and quickly extinguished the flames but before the child had received such injuries that resulted in her death.

DIES AT HOSPITAL.

She was removed to the Groves L. D. S. hospital and given every possible attention and medical aid, but her condition Tuesday and Wednesday improved to such an extent that hope for her recovery was entertained. She suffered a relapse, last night, however, and succumbed to her injuries at 4:30 o'clock this morning.

The remains are now lying at Joseph William Taylor's mortuary, and the funeral will be held from the family residence Sunday, the definite hour to be announced later.

DANGER IN CANYON FIRES.

The forest service officials call public attention to the carelessness of campers in Big Cottonwood, where they leave camp fires burning behind them, thus causing good fires in several instances, but which were extinguished by the forest service men, and leaving a wide and varied assortment of dangers lying around loose, giving the canyon a most unduly dangerous and menacing appearance for picnickers who may come after.

SPRINKLING IS RESTRICTED.

Thomas Hobday, superintendent of waterworks, issued notices to water users this morning in that part of the city east of Seventh East street and south of Seventh South street, advising them that lawns and gardens must not be sprinkled except between 5 o'clock and 8 o'clock in the afternoon, and during the months of July, August and September. Any violation of this order will be reported by the inspectors and will be punished.

AMENDMENTS LAND ON THE TABLE

Aldrich Again Has His Way in
Matter of Corporation Tax
Provision of Tariff Bill.

BACON CLASHED WITH HIM.

Georgian Said Certain Senators Assume to Have Greater Rights Than
Other Senators on Senate Floor.

Washington, July 8.—A depressing suggestion of a protracted session of the senate to conclude the consideration of the tariff bill was contained in a motion presented by Senator Aldrich as soon as the senate convened today. With the experience of last night's session in mind, Mr. Aldrich moved to amend the order of procedure by striking out the provision for an automatic adjournment at 7 o'clock. This was agreed to without objection. There was no effort to reach an understanding as to the hour, but the general feeling was that whether early or late, the measure should be disposed of before leaving the senate chamber. It had been supposed that much time would be consumed in the discussion of the tobacco tax bill, but even before that item was reached it had been arranged that there would be comparatively little effort to alter the finance committee's schedule.

The uncompleted corporation tax provision was the first subject of the day's consideration, and Senator Daniel resumed the speech he began yesterday. His remarks were in defense of his amendments to the tax law, which would increase the rate of one percent of 1 per cent on the gross receipts of corporations having a capital stock of more than $300,000.

"We have a worthy man in the president," declared Mr. Daniel, "a judicious man of great mind and of great heart. I have no sentiment of opposition to the pending proposition because of its source. On the contrary, I am in favor of it as the highest respectability."

Mr. Bacon suggested that the Virginia senator change his plans for taxing corporations to make it apply also to corporations that have gross receipts of more than $300,000 annually. On suggestion of Mr. Daniel, Mr. Bacon offered his amendment as an amendment to the proposition by the Virginia senator.

"I move to lay the amendments on the table," curtly interposed the chairman of the finance committee. "Which amendment?" interposed Mr. Bacon, rising in his place with a show of indignation.

"Both if I can," said Mr. Aldrich. "I rise to a point of order, if I can have the attention of the chair," persisted Mr. Bacon.

The gentleman from Georgia always has the attention of the chair if he will state his point of order," replied Vice President Sherman in suave tones that suggested harmony.

"I don't want to be considered as chiding the chair," replied Mr. Bacon, "but I do insist on a right to have my motion put to the senate."

"The chair always does that," retorted the vice president, smiling.

After a short exchange of views of just what happened the amendments were gently "laid on the table," and there was no further suggestion of any ruffle on the senatorial waters.

Other amendments to the corporation tax amendment were quickly disposed of in the same way.

The corporation tax amendment as perfected by the committee then was agreed to by Mr. Aldrich announced that with the exception of the tobacco tax bill the bill was perfected so far as committee amendments were concerned.

Mr. Bacon for his colleague, Mr. Clay, offered an amendment to the bill providing for a special tax and for the prohibition of sales on stock exchanges and insisted on a strict adherence to parliamentary rules in disposing of it. This insistence was emphasized by an equally persistent purpose on the part of Mr. Aldrich to dispose of it as quickly as possible.

"It is very apparent," said Mr. Bacon after several clashes with the Rhode Island senator, "that there are certain senators who, by reason of their relations to tobacco, are assuming to have greater rights than other senators on this floor. I resent that assumption, and so long as I am permitted to remain I do not intend to submit to such lordly pretensions as are made here."

At the first opportunity Mr. Aldrich moved to lay the amendment on the table, which was agreed to by 44 to 34.

The tobacco tax amendment was laid before the president and the disposal of the other measures. Mr. Bacon protested against it as carrying a large increase of taxation on the tobacco industry. It was agreed that 8 o'clock in the afternoon would be the latest time for the introduction of any amendment to the bill.

The tax, he asserted, bore much more heavily on the independent tobacco men and was an actual advantage to the trust.

The senate today accepted Senator Bradley's amendment permitting tobacco growers to sell their product without the payment of a tax.

The measure is practically the same as that which passed the house, and removes the tax of 6 cents a pound on the tobacco grower as a vendor and thus removes what is supposed to be the cause of the night-ride attacks in Kentucky and Tennessee.

There is a little doubt that the provision will remain in the bill. The tobacco tax schedule as a whole was adopted by the senate.

"She was ironing some lace," this testimony was introduced to show that the defendant possessed the necklace which she alleged was stolen from her by Miss Agnes Barrette, complainant in the present case.

On cross-examination Miss Lindeman was shown a necklace which she said could not identify as that worn by Miss Gingles.

It is usually the most squeamish that are quickest to turn a harmless pastime into an unbecoming passion; and, in fact, much of the amusement of life can be given a questionable hue by the false modesty of the unwelcome prude. At the Salt Palace, the Trocadero Amusement Company is running what is known there as "The Third Degree," and at Saltair as "Pilgrim's Progress." It consists in a series of surprises such as twirling chairs, jumping floors, grotesque mirrors and the like. At the exit a breeze shoots up from the floor, lifting slightly the skirts of the damsel who can't help but be with the crowd, she may as easily go down the stairs at the side or down the shoot. Some one noticing this feature of the amusement straightaway had the Amusement company arrested and an investigation instituted, only to find that the prude had made a laughing stock of himself and to have the "Third Degree" pronounced as harmless as the playing of children. It is needless to say that The Third Degree is still a winning card at the Salt Palace, for everyone knows the difference between the purity of the prig and the innocence of youth.
