WHY WORKING PROPLE ARE SO DEPENDENT.

Tas working people. of the United States, like their class'in Great Britain and continental Europe, rivet the makles that keep them in subserviesce to capital, by their improvident tables and their indulgence in strong drists. The majority of them spend enty cent they earn, and throw much mey away in stimulants that do them more harm than good. They thus hep themselves in a condition of demdence and their necessities render arm a prey to hearfless capital.

We are aware that many of them, specially in crowded localities where epscially in crowded localities where have is at a discount, can only obtain cough by their-toil-to keep body and soil together. But there are thousands upon thousands who, by the exercise of economy and forethought, might hype a little provision for "a rainy day," and thus render themselves in own charge indemendent to their tagksome degree independent of their task-DASLA

The cost of the drink and the smoking for the year was no less than $900,000,000; and of this the working classes expended more than $000,000,000. Think of it! This was expended by the classes that strike for higher wages and complain of their bard lot. If it had not been turned into guzle sud smoke, how much better off would the millions of people who have spent it be, in body as well as in pocket! It is too much to expect that the habits which have been formed by men and women and their fathers before them, back for many generations, will be thrown aside in a moment. They are too deeply rooted and doo strongly embedded in the soil of their natures to be torn up at once. THE ANAROHISTS FOUND GUILTY.

THE result of the trial of the Chicago anarchists, given in our dispatches, will be read with interest throughout the entire country. The verdict : was anticlpsted by public opinion and will be endorsed by it: Spies, Schawb, Fellden, Engel and Lingg have been found guilty of murder us charged in the indictments, and death has been

A CHINESE ROMANCE

READERS of our dispatches will no doubt remember the account, given some time ago, of a Chinese youth attached to the legation at Washington, who became violently enamored of a young lady moving in the highest circles, and who appeared to encourage his advances, not looking upon them as anything serious. When she discovered that the pigtailed son of the Flowery ed that the pigtailed son of the Flowery Kingdom was in dead earnest, she en-deavored to make him understand that his wishes were impossible to be com-piled with. But he was as persevering as devoted, and would not be made to see that he could not win for his wife the mir mainten who had entranced him. The young lady had to leave the capital to escape his importunities, and the almond-eyed suftor became fu-consolable. The finale to this little following dispatch in the columns of the New York World: WASHINGTON, 14.—This morning pe-following dispatch in the columns of the New York World: WASHINGTON, 14.—This morning pe-destriaus in the neighborhood of Castle Stewart were startled by a shrick from one of the fourth-story windows of that building, now the headquarters of the Chinese legation. Those on the Massachusetts Avenue side looked up and beheld a sight which would tend to curdle one's blood. A young Celes-tial, attired in a loosely-fittinggarment of silk, was stauding on the window-sill. Around his neck was a tope, the other end of which was secured to a binge of the inside blind. In his right hand was a hari-karl sword, such as is used by Chinese officers when they fall to win a battle. In bis left hand was a bit of cardboard on which he was in-tently gazing. Then he ljumped. The rope about his neck ugittened and he attered a few gurgling sounds dis-tinctly audible to the people below. The alarm was quickly given and sev-eral servants rushed above sind burst open the bolted door and proceeded to rescne the would-be suicide by pulling him back into the window. In the meanwhile the bit of card-board had been dropped and was picked up by a small boy. It proved to be the photo-

meanwhile the bit of card-board had been dropped and was pleked jup by a small boy. It proved to be the photo-graph of the young' lady who caused such-a commotion in the legation by flirting so desperately with a young Chinaman, who, it was afterwards as-certained, was the would-be suicide. One of the servants stated to-day that last Monday the same young man attempted to take his life hy drow ning inithe bath-thb. This is denied, how-ever by members of the legation. The young man is not seriously injured. He has one wound behind the ear caused by the hari-kari sword. In-quiry was made at the legation this morning in regard to the affair, but the servants and members were extremely servants and members were extremely reticent.

IN, THE INTEREST OF THE HORSE.

SORE backs and sore shoulders on horses, which may frequently be seen, are signs of negligence and careless. ness on the part of those who own or attend to them. .There is no necessity for the torture to which many of the uoble animals are made subject. If you will bathe the shoulders of your horses with cold water or brine as quick as the collar comes off, before quick as the collar comes off, before the sweat begins to dry, thus driving, or drawing the feverishness away from the flesh and mnscles there, then rubbing all the sweat and dirt off the collar and sad-dle piece with a moist cloth before hanging your harness up, or throwing it down upon the floor as careless, shiftless people do, you will prevent sore shoulders and sore backs on horses. Nothing in the world will ex-cuse crueity to horses or other dumb cuse crueity to horses or other dumb cuse crueity to horses or other dumb brutes that are the servants and help-ers of men. Every day horses suffer untold agonies for want of water which can or should be supplied to them, often letting each animal drink all that he wants of clean, fresh water.

THE DOOMED ANARCHISTS.

THE verdict in the anarchists' cases is in accord with general public seutiment. The press of the country, so far as heard from, universally approves natics who That the f the bomb and those who threw it or assisted in throwing it, and all who advised or conspired to perpetrate the murder of the policemen in Chicago, assassins in Ispirit and intent are and are thus worthy of death there cannot be a doubt in the minds of those who are well disposed towards order and the preservation of wards order and the preservation of society. But we have not been satisfied by reading the particulars of the trial which nave been seut over the wires, and further accounts of which we have seen in eastern papers, that the charges against the prisoners have been fully sustained by the evidence. The facts that the accused are anarchists, and that they have advocated extreme views and indefensible propositions cannot be denied. But we have failed to find any positive evidence which directly con-nects them with the atrocious deed for which they are condemned, to death,

We have no doubt that they have aided by their incendiary utterances and in-flammable publications in arousing fammable publications in arousing passions that have led to the awful crime which calls for redress: But this is not the offense with which they are charged, and the testi-mony for the defense is quite as strong, to say the least, as that for the prosecution, and goes to show that the prisoners were not the actual perpetrators of or accessories to the wholesale murder. The condition of public feeling has been such that no other perdict than that rendered would have satisfied the press and the conntry. Any other press and the conntry. Any other would have raised such a general storm of popular indignation as would have of popular indignation as would have been a far greater menace than any-thing that might be apprehended from anarchial sources in consequence of the present verdict. We think that a fair and impartial trial was almost an impossibility under the circumstances. It may be that a now trial will be granted, but that seems quite unlikely. The public feel-ing will not be toned down enough by September to contemplate with equan-imity a possible chance for the escape of the accused. It is more likely that the anarchists who have not yet been implicated in the orime, but are known to the police, will be pursued and either driven out of Chicago or brought within the grip of the law and made to suffer some of its minor manuficeto. penalties.

Extremists will be made to under-stand that while they have the right under the laws to advocate the most unorthodox and peculiar ideas and notious, they will not be protected in vert acts actuative even and wood overt acts against peace and good oder, or in urging others to break the iaw. A man may advocate auy doctrine he chooses, but he may not break the law or in-cite others to do so, without bringing himself under its lash. There is a wide difference between exposing the wrong of a law and violating its provisions; between showing the rightfulness of something that the law forbids and practising it in defance of law. Anar-chists may declaim against what they call the evil of government, but if they for snything to destroy government chists may declaim against what they call the evil of government, but if they do anything to destroy government they render themschees liable to pan-ishment. Freedom of speech and of the press is one thing, an act to injure an individual or a nation is another and different thing. Society has the same rights of self-preservation as a person. Laws are framed to protect the State as well as the individual. The principles on which that preservation is founded may be held up to reprobation, oppo-site principles may be advocated and remedial measures may be proposed, and constitutional enactments will in-terpose no barriers in the way and re-quire no punishment of the advocate. But if he proceeds to deeds that tend to destroy society 'or aid in the over-turning of government, he is amenable to violated enactments. We have no sympathy with their views or their methods. But we have not seen in the evidence adduced against them, when weighed with he testimo-ny for the defense, proof beyond rea-sonable doubt that they were accesso-ries before the fact, such as the law contemplates by that term, to the ries before the fact, such as the law contemplates by that term, to the dreadful and hexcusable murder at the Haymarket in Chicago.

NO LIGHT IN THEM.

THE numerous proofs that have been given to the public of the impositions practised by many so-called spiritual mediums, seem to have little effect upon the over credulous, and people continue to be deceived and swindled by the craity charlatans, who practice upon the superstition of the ordinary mind and that regard for the departed which makes so many souls sensitive and open to hasty impressions. And confirmed spiritualists contend that the frauds perpetrated by impostors do not invalidate the manifesta-tors do not invalidate the manifesta-tions produced by the true mediums and attested by a cloud of witnesses. There is some show of reason in that proposition. The passing of a coun-terfeit is more of a proof in favor o the genuine coin than evidence against its non-existence. But granting that there are real spirit manifestations, that the exhibitions of force and of a cer-tain class of intelligence which appear to be supernatural are not the result to be supernatural are not the result of a purely human power, that of a purely human power, t is yet misunderstood but cansed by is yet misunderstood but caneed by the presence of spirit personages seeking to communicate through perceptible media, it does not follow that those unseen spirits are the individuals whom they represent themselves to be, or that their communications are genoine or of any value to the living. We must say that we have never yet seen anything professing to come from the spirit world through the mediums who submit themselves to control. the spirit word through the menums who submit themselves to control, which is superior to ordi-nary thought among mortals or conveys any intelligence that is unattainable by ordinary means among menin the fiesh. Neither have we ever known any positively good re-sults or great achievements in any de-artment of human avitance, which

Son Jesus Christ are not to be con-founded with the phenomena and mes-isages of that which is called spiritual-ism. The Father is a perfect and ex-alted being who comprehends all things, and the Son is a resurrected, glorified being in His perfect image, one with the Father and possessing all power both on carth and in the heavens. They are not disembodied spirits, occupying the sphere of the departed. They are above and infinitely superior to men in mortality or in the spirit world. And with the Holy Spirit which is the light and life of all things, they form the Eternal Godhead. What they reveal is truth, it comes with authority, and it is binding upon the obedience of all who are made acquainted with it. The imperfect muterings and con-celts that purport to emanate from the dead are unreliable, contradictory and often deceptive. Here is the testimony of a celebrated spiritualist who is also a scholar and a genteman, W. Stain-ton Moses of the London University, he says: "The spirits who are able to deal

he says:

"The spirits who are able to deal with gross matter so as to produce physical manifestations are beings who are not possessed of high moral con-sciousness. Whether they are instruscionshess. Whether they are instru-ments in the hands of more progressed intelligence or not, the fact remains that they cannot be relied on as judged by the laws of human integrity."

Commenting on this, another spiritu-alist writing to the Boston Herald remarks:

remarks: "I should go even farther, and say mortal, as well as physical. Bnt, as 1 have often said, we must drink the water through dirty pipes if there are no other. The people in the black hole took it oot of dirty vessels gladly. In a sense, this world is a black hole. I believe Emerson says we must fetch the pump with dirty water, if there is no, other." The answer to this is there is no need no, other." The answer to this is, there is no need to pump for this "dirty water." There is a fountain of pure intelligence open to every soul. All smay "partake of the waters of life freely." Iuspira-tion is free, and the spirit of truth can manifest things past, present and to come to those who are under the pro-per conditions. These are attained by obedience to the Gospel and its ordi-mances administered by legitimate au-thority, and that Spirit is a medium of communication from the Father and the Son, who know all things, have power over all things. In reflecting upon the vagarles and follies and anti-Christiah influences of modern spiritualism, one is invariably modern spiritualism, oue is invariably led to think on the advice of Isaiah the Prophet:

"And when they shall say unto you. seek onto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter, should not a people seek unto their God for the living [to hear from] the dead?"

"To the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." -viii, 19, 20.

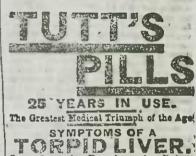

REASONABLENESS OF THE RESURRECTION.

A WEEK ago we made some remarks on the subject of the resurrection of the dead, in answer to the declaration of Dr. Lyman Abbott in the Christian Union, that the doctrine was unseriptural and contrary to science. We are pleased to see in the latest issue of that paper, a letter from a gentleman named G. J. Dingman, who takes up the subject on the same grounds as occupied by the DESERET NEWS. He strongly deprecates the course of a "" aristian" paper in becoming the vehicle of publishing to the world criticisms upon or denials of a cardinal doctrine of the Christian faith, and proceeds to support the Biblical doctrine of the resurrection in a cogent article, from which we make the fol-lowing extract: '

"In the article under consideration a sole ingredients that enter into the new growths of vegetation. Whoever examined with minuteness, candor and new growths of vegetation. Whoever examined with minuteness, candor and care a seeding of a vegetable, grain, fruit or flower, and saw such a diminu-tion in the parts of the delicate seed that was planted as to mistake it for some other seed or grain? Absolutely, the parts and the bulk of the planted seed are so nearly the same that the naturals eye, unsided, can detect no reduction in the quantity or in the form, though the blade or the stem of a new plant appears above ground. The germination of the seed and the production of another life in the new plant have not diminished the form or the bulk of the seed, which still remains in the ground, or, as in certain plauts, is carried upward and adheres to the new stem. Suppose, now, the bulk of some other variety of vegetation, the identify is preserved in the new plant which has already sprung up, from the fidentical bulb or seed, which subsequently entered in-to new combinations, and con-tributed to other varieties of vegetable growth, and these vegetables, following their natural course, enter into new and beautiful animal, combi-nations. iollowing their natural conrse, enter into new and beautiful animal, combi-nations. One would require a power-ful microscope to detect any loss in the bulk or form of the planted seed for some time after germination has, taken place and the identity of the seed has entered into the new and delicate formations we see above ground. So, though the old seed, in its decay and, dissolution, pass away, the identity is retained and maintained. Why not, now, accept the law of analogies and admit with Christian catoor a resur-rected body that shall preserve and per-petuate the identity germ of the de-cayed body in a similar form, only mora ethereal and permanent and beautiful, fitted for its celestial circumstances, surroundings, and requirements? He who preserved the identity amid the natural growth and decay as it is carried forward in the vegetable and animal kingdoms around us can surely preserve the identity and personality of the godlike form of man, though animal kingdoms around us can surely preserve the identity and personality of the godlike form of man, though subject to decay and dissolution. A human body was assumed by the Holy One in redeeming the world, and therefore there can be nothing repuz-uant to the divine nature or beyond the circle of his operations to preserve the identical germ of the human body for any number of ages, and again rebuild it, retaining much of the same figure; but in a beauty and radiance and youthfulness ever new, to shine on fu iresh splendors, like Christ's own gloilous body, amid the realms of bliss forever."

A verdict of guilty was also reached in the case of Nelbe, but, owing to certain mitigating features in the evidence against him the punishment prescribed for him is imprisonment for fifteen years. The penalties will not be inflicted for some time. Indeed it is not an absolute certainty that they will at all. That can only be decided after the motion for a new trial, to be argued next month, is disposed of. The question that now remains to be determined is whether the evigorous action of the courts in those cases will extinguish the inrid fiame of anarchy which has been threatening the vitals of the social structure. "In the article under consideration a quotation is given from Jacob Abbott iurther to stigmatize this grand old doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. Mr. Jacob Abbott's sentiments are very much like a great deal that passes for science in our day among a certait class, and, to say the least, they are yery illusory and delusive, and by their unbounded pretensions and tair show many are led astray. He is either a deeply prejudiced or a very partial observer of nature's beautiful processes. The transformation of a decayed animal body lato vegetables, grasses, flowers, foliage, herbage, or vegetation in general, does not necessarily destroy the identity of the human body thus decomposed, and entering into these exquisitely fine processes through which they come forth to again embellish and beautify the landscape, the garden, the field and the forest, and in these new and beautiful combinations afford some-thing rich. wholesome and tasy for and the forest, and in these new and beautiful combinations afford some-thing rich, wholesome and tasty for other animals.
