LOST IN THE BOOKY MOUNTAINS."-This is the heading of a letter, written from Ft. Fred Steele, on the loth lost, and ap" pearing in the Omaha Herold of the 19th nstant, containing an account of the adventures of a Mr. Charles Schall, a ventrilogist and professor of tager-de-mais, and his partner. Mr. Schall had been exhibiting at Laramie, and then in company with his friend he went on a hunting excursion into the mountains, intending to be gone two or three days. On the return journey to Lacamie they lost their way in a country where there was plenty of snow but very venk to carry their rifles, they were com-pelled to throw them away. One of them retained a revolver, and with this they one day shot a jack rabbit, which they ate can-nibal style. After wandering about for thirteen days, they came in sight of a lodge of Arappahoes, and caring little, if they had of Arappahoes, and caring little, if they had to die, whether it was by scalping or starvation they made their way to the camp. The Indians seemed rather undecided whether to shake hands with or shoot them, when Schall proceeded to a large hollow tree near by, and tapping upon it with a stick, he brought from it a variety of groans, acresches do, which excited the currently of the Indians, who immediately gathered round the medicine man with avery symptom of respect. The juggler next gave a wonderful exhibition of stone swallowing, balancing, and other manoenwall-wing, balancing, and other manosuvers, the Indians looking on with awe and

The next morning they were given to interstand that a repetition of the performance of the preceding evening was desired; he request was compiled with, when our we adventurers, by drawing a rude sketch two adventurers, by drawing a rude sketch on the ground of a railway train made the indians comprehend that they desired to be guided to the railway. A couple of young braves, were detailed to guide them, and in a few hours they bad the pleasure of hearing the whistle, when their guides soft them, and they, in a very exhausted condition, soon after reached the section-house at Woolcot, where one of the mean hund an uncis whom he had not seen for years. Here their troubles ended. The Indian camp was forty guides from Fort Festermans.
