

MUCH IMPRESSED WITH SALT LAKE.

J. M. Studebaker Contrasts Conditions Today With Those of Fifty Years Ago

GREATNESS OF BRIGHAM YOUNG

Attends Conference and Praises the Speakers and Singers—A Typical "Mormon" Family.

J. M. Studebaker, senior member of the firm of Studebaker Bros., of South Bend, Ind., spent a day or two in Salt Lake a week ago. So favorably impressed was he with conditions in this section that he wrote a letter to his home paper, the South Bend Times, in which he drew a graphic picture of Salt Lake today and Salt Lake 50 years ago, when he passed through here on his way to the Pacific coast. Mr. Studebaker's letter is addressed to Hon. J. B. Stoll, editor of the Times, and is as follows:

Dear Mr. Stoll:—As I have a few leisure moments I thought I would write you a brief report of my trip to this great city of Salt Lake. What a contrast and change I see from my first visit, which is still fresh in my mind. In 1853 on my way to California, after a long and weary journey in crossing the Missouri river, over the sage brush plains and the Rocky mountains, with nothing to break the monotony of the trip except the constant vigilance necessary to see that the Indians did not get our scalps, we passed down Emigrant canyon, and behold, it came up on us like a vision of a new heaven and a new earth, when this beautiful Salt Lake valley, so rightly named, came into view. We saw a small village of adobe houses built from large blocks of blue clay, made into shape, dried in the sun, and used by Brigham Young in building homes for himself and his family and his followers in the Mormon faith. Few there were who could read the word of the Lord, and the people in opening to the world this new beautiful and prosperous valley. It cannot be excelled in the world, with its snow-capped mountains on all sides, its agriculture, its fruit, its great mines of gold, silver and copper. It has no peer. Salt Lake from which the city takes its name is a beautiful body of water that can produce salt for the whole world for the simple cost of hauling it away.

If you want real ginger, buy Schilling's Best; there's plenty of "ginger"—something flavored with ginger.

Write for our Knowledge Book, A Schilling & Co.

Is it fair to suppose that Brigham Young, great man that he was, in planting the seed and colonizing this beautiful valley with the people of all countries could have been a bad man? Do you honestly believe that he, the first head of the "Mormon" Church, to enter this beautiful valley, could have laid the foundation of what is today one of the largest and strongest and most prosperous church organizations in our country—could this all have been done in the sight of God by a man and his followers if he and they did not have a higher power for their guidance?

ATTENDED CONFERENCE.

This is conference week, and I was invited by a "Mormon" Bishop to attend their service on Sunday. I went and saw a sight that can be seen nowhere outside of Salt Lake City. The meeting was held in their great Tabernacle. There were said to be 13,000 people inside that church, and fully 5,000 outside who could not get in. I was honored with a seat among the presidents of the stakes. The sight of that vast assemblage of one faith I shall never forget. In front of me were the dignitaries and "flares of the church," at least 100 men, largely gray-haired men, with an appearance of dignity, honesty and ability. After a prayer by one of the old patriarchs their leader and president, Joseph P. Smith, announced the hymn to be sung. Its title, "True to the Faith," composed by the leader of the choir, and I want to say to you that for the first time in my life that song brought tears to my eyes. An organ that comes as near the human voice as can be, and with 800 trained voices in the choir, sent forth over this great audience music that made me feel as though I had wings to carry me to heaven. I never attended church anywhere where the service was more impressive, or where more attention was given to the speaker; and what was said could not be easily criticized by few or gentle. Their president, the venerable Joseph E. Smith, made the closing remarks of the conference. They were beautifully expressed. He told them to offer up their earnest prayers to God for strength and guidance in their duties to their families, themselves, their God and their church. I will say that a more devoted and loyal people to their church I have never seen.

A BISHOP'S ADVICE.

We do a large business in this country. We employ 50 to 60 salesmen, nearly all members of the "Mormon" Church. At our annual banquet given last Saturday night to our traveling men by our worthy manager, who is himself a Catholic, he called on all these men for a speech. They responded promptly, and in the many banquets that I have attended of a similar character, I never heard better or more appropriate remarks. One of their number, a Bishop for 20 years, and a son of one of the early Apostles whom I knew, now dead, who has never had but one wife, made a splendid talk to young men. He talked of their duties in life, that the motives should be those of purity, with a Christian spirit constantly uppermost in their minds. He enjoined upon his associates and co-workers to be loyal to their cause, loyal to their employers, and to have for their watchword honesty and honesty of purpose. I can only say that it is most unfortunate for the future welfare of Salt Lake that these does not have a more charitable and brotherly feeling among the gentiles and leaders of the "Mormon" Church in Salt Lake, in their political parties.

A "MORMON" FAMILY.

In conclusion I thought the following might be of interest to the wives and mothers at home. One of the early Bishops, now 80 years old, was, years ago, agent for the sale of our business. I was as straight a man in his day as I ever dealt with. He had four wives. In my visit with him yesterday he told me he had with him four wives, 4 children and 125 grandchildren, great-grandchildren not counted, with not a deaf, blind, cripple or imbecile in the lot. All were healthy and well educated and some are in high positions. One in San Francisco is a noted portrait painter. Not one followed in his father's footsteps as to wives. None has more than one wife. This old patriarch's eyes flashed if I attempted to make a remark about anything against the polygamy of early days. I think he said three of his wives were dead. He said of them: "God knows I loved them all, and they were happy. Our son, persecutor of our lawful wife says so much." I leave you to judge, Mr. Stoll, what is the answer. We go to Idaho today to see the results of the wonderful development of that country.

PRIZES FOR SCHOOLS.

Awards Made For Garden Exhibits at The State Fair.

The directors of the D. A. & M. society have awarded first, second and fifth prizes to the Wasatch school for the best display of a fair of potted plants and cut flowers raised by members of the school, and the third prize to the Union school for the same. The Lincoln school was given the fourth prize for the best display of vegetables. The directors desire to encourage the school children in gardening and flower raising, and hope the schoolteachers will co-operate with them in furthering this excellent idea. The directors propose at the next fair to place the flower and vegetable exhibits from the public schools in the horticultural building where they belong, rather than among the school exhibits proper, and give these efforts of the children all the space necessary for their proper exhibition.

SPLENDID PICTURES.

Views of the San Juan Country Seen at Commercial Club.

A specially attractive exhibit being made at the Commercial club is two large transparent photographs by Whitaker of a great cave 600 feet wide, in the San Juan mountains, and the "Showing Stairs" in great cliffs leading to homes of ancient cliff dwellers in southern Utah. In the former picture several women are preparing their noonday meal in the cave, where their horses are also quartered. It is the intention of the club management to secure large transparent photographs for use club showing notable scenes in southern Utah, and hang the same in the windows of the club apartments.

CORRECTS AN ERROR.

Facts in Connection With Ear y Missionary Work in Australasia.

To the Editor:—Lehi, Utah, Oct. 20.—In your issue of the Deseret Semi-Weekly News of Oct. 19 (copied from Tuesday's daily) appeared a notice of the death and a biographical sketch of the Maori chief, Hiru Whangana, a part of which reads as follows:

"And was in command when the first Mormon missionaries arrived in New Zealand in 1832 under the charge of Wm. T. Stewart and Wm. Packman, who came to be known later as 'the father of the mission.' This statement is misleading, and feeling assured that the 'News' was not intentionally misrepresenting any matter, the writer deems it a duty to make the following statement: In November, 1830, Elders Wm. M. Bromley, N. H. Groesbeck and J. S. Ferris were sent apart for missionary labors in Australasia, which includes New Zealand. They arrived in Auckland, New Zealand, in January, 1831. Elder Wm. M. Bromley having been appointed to the presidency of the mission.

Previous to this time branches of the Church were organized in New Zealand, notably in Timaru, Christchurch and Auckland, and it was learned that the Gospel had been preached in the early fifties, principally among the whites, although efforts had been made to present the same to the Maoris but with little success until 1832-3 they began to receive the Gospel and the first branch of the Church was organized in Timaru in the month of January, 1833. Elders Thomas L. Cox, J. C. Williams, and Wm. John McDowell taking an active part in the same. Elders in other parts were active in this labor, some of them devoting their entire time to the same.

Elder W. T. Stewart was appointed by the writer to preside over the mission in July, 1832. Elder Packman did not visit New Zealand until the year 1836-7, at which time the Maori had joined the Church, numbered several hundred.

This is not the first time this misrepresentation has got out among our people and I trust you will publish the above correction, and oblige.

MECHANICS HAVE PLENTY OF WORK

The Trouble is There Are Not Enough Men to Meet the Requirement.

PLASTERERS RATHER SCARCE

Stone Cutters, However, Are a Sort of Drug on the Market—Conditions Generally.

There is a scarcity of laborers, mechanics and teams in the Salt Lake market, although this has not yet reached a point where it is acutely felt. There has been a shortage in bricklayers ever since the trouble at the university, when not a few of the craft left the city, as they would not work for certain contractors. Then a scarcity of carpenters is reported, largely because so many of them believe they can do better by working for themselves than in working for others, and having some little knowledge in architecture as well as in carpentering, start in as "full fledged" contractors, and go to making contracts to build moderate sized residences or similar structures. There are none too many plasterers, but this is owing mostly to the nature of the business which to a certain extent involves danger arising from workmen's lungs being loaded up with lime dust, the bad effects of lime on the skin, and being so much in the west. Many young men start out to learn the trade of plasterers, and on by the prospects of $6 and $7 per day, but after a year or two conclude that not for even twice that would they be willing to endure what plasterers are called upon to do.

There are plenty of stone cutters—more than there is really work for, but of general laborers there are none too many, and as to teams, they are "scarce and high." The railroads have been making the town over with "a fine toothed comb" for teams for construction work on the extensions and the new work going on in so many directions, and owners of teams have been able to get what they consider a fair price for their services. This open weather is very favorable to out of door operations, and the same are being "pushed for all they are worth" before bad weather sets in. Just what the winter weather will be no one can tell, as there are never any two consecutive winters alike in this part of the country. But contractors are hoping that this fine, open weather will continue for the next 30 days anyhow, as an immense amount of work can be accomplished in this building, in a good deal of building is going on about town, giving steady employment to many artisans, mechanics and laborers.
