Church to abrogate the doctrine of plural marriage was exhibited. Of ence which the Saints are now passing course, the editor of the Herald, who is through was necessary to develop in en rapport with those who persecute the Saints and on excellent terms with to possess, and to cleanse them from the world generally, favors the abrogation of this vital and prominent doctrine. He evidently considers that the issuance of a "revelation" by the visible head of the Church would he the proper course to pursue under the circumstances. The pith of his position is incorporated in the following, which we extract:

"Would John Taylor have the courage to say to the polygamic men and women already in the practice of plural marriage, and to the thousands to whom the dogma has been so industriously taught and its practice urged so strennously

Tuus saith the Lord, your Redeemer and your God; hear ye, O my people in the mountains and valleys of Utah, and listen to my voice. Lo, these many years ye have been following in devi-ous paths, and I, your Lord, command you that ye no longer walk in them. Let all those among you who have taken unto you more wives than the one wife of your youth, put them away from you. Provide for them and their children, that they have borne to you, according to the riches and goods ye possess; but put them away even as ommanded Abraham of old to put killed all of it, so that what appeared Hagar away. Let those among you whose first wife is dead (or is married to others as an affliction he recognized another), and who had more as a blessing in disguise, as it afterwives than the first wife living at the time of her death, take the one first closen to be plural wife as your companion; and be ye married unto her as provided by the law given unto my church and published in my Book of Doctrine and Covenants before the death of my servants Joseph and Hy-rum Smith, and put all other of your plural wives away from you and live no longer with them as your wives. And this shall ve do that ye may keep the law of the land, and no longer incur inv displeasure."

This would most likely be the tenor if not the text of such a revelation as God would give in the case if He should speak like Himself as He is revealed in the three standard works-Bible, Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants.

It will then be seen that the experience which the Saints are now passing through was necessary to develop in them the qualities so desirable for them to possess, and to cleanse them from the dross existing in their midst. Swainson Recovering.

Mr. Swainson, who was severely wounded by the explosion at the Ad-miralty office yesterday, continues to make favorable progress.

Detectives have obtained little evidence likely to afford a clne to the perdomicile of the publishers. The apology however is to contain "no allusion to the seizure of the Bosphore-Egyptien. London, 24.—A telegram from Alex-andria to the Exchange Telegraph Company states that the French con-writer's claims to the position he has assumed as the successor of his father it would of itself be sufficient. It is not only sacreligious, but indicates with what easy facility he could act the part of the pretender. He is correct in the intimation that President John Taylor would not have the "courage," if that is what it should be called, to issue a spurious revelation and palm it off upon the people as the voice of Deity to the people. The venerated head of the Church would not dare do what could evidently be done by this "degenerate son of a noble sire" without computction of conrevelation and then flimsily intimates that he understands that it is such an one as would be given by the Almighty were he to speak on the subject.

Joseph Smith, Jr., may reel off Imi tation revelations by the yard, but when anything of that character comes through the Presiding authority of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints it is the genuine article. If any man occupying a position of such immense responsibility should in that respect attempt to perpetrate a sacreligious fraud an offended God would speedily hurl him from his station and place his oracles in hands more honest and true. But there is no danger of anything of that kind occurring.

The citation of the course of Abram in relation to Hagar is doubtless not as ported. happy as the writer of the article could have wished. It is scarcely complete, as the "Father of the faithful" remained, to all intents and purposes, a polygamist, there being no ground for assuming that his wife Keturah was at any time dispensed with by him.

The closing paragraph of the quotation shows the dishonesty of the entire presentation. It assumes the absurd position that Joseph and Hyrum Smith did not practise, and certain standard works do not teach, under proper conditions, the rightfulness of patriarchal marriage. As a fact in point connected with this claim, Bishop H. B. Clawson informs us that he and the head of the so-called Re-organized Church were schoolmates in Nauvoo, and that it was well understood by both that the Prophet Joseph had a number of plural wives, and it was no particular secret as to who some of them were. It is a fact also that sev eral of those ladles are now living in this city, and by them Alexander Smith, brother to the editor of the Herald, was confronted, they claiming, in his presence, their relationship to his father.

The chief of the Re-organized Church is, of course, patted on the back by the Salt Lake Tribune, the notorious organ of slander and of the anti-"Mormon" crusade. Here is what it says about the bogus revelation :

"The Mormon's should remember, in reading the foregoing, that it was written by the son of the prophet-by the one who claims to hold the keys, the real priesthood of the Mormon Church. Who knows but he does?"

This is hypocrisy backed by hypocrites, for why should not hall fellows tall on each others' neck and weep, Listen to the rank deception: "Who knows but he does," yet there is not the most infinitessimal approach to a question in the mind of that Tribune scribe mind regarding the holding of the "keys of the real priesthosd," by the
