BREVITIES.

During the last sixty years, 3,196 titles of nobility have been granted in France.

Five pall-bearers at Mrs. Vanderbilt's funeral represented $250,000,000.

Gen. Lee has started a bible class in his college, which numbers 105 members.

The Queen of Prussia has recovered from a very poor state of health by the daily consumption of many grapes.

Napoleon the Third is about five feet four inches tall, his face is wizened and drawn, and all the photographs flatter him outrageously.

Mr. Charles Brooke has peaceably succeeded to the government of his uncle, the late Raja of Sarawak, Borneo.

A barber in Duane street, New York, charges a dollar for hair cutting, and is always one hour performing the operation.

The well-known actor, "Yankee Locke," had his jaw broken at Gloucester, Mass., few days since, by falling down stairs.

A newspaper says: A child was run over by a wagon three years old and cross-eyed with pantalets which never spoke afterwards.

At Vienna, from 500 to 600 old horses are butchered yearly, and the meat of them is eaten by the poorer classes of the population.

Blanc, the proprietor of the gambling establishment at Hamburg Springs, Prussia, is said to be worth $20,000,000, and it is only 30 years ago that he arrived in Frankfort with only $4 in his pocket.

Some New York traders have placards in their windows, saying; "Here we speak German," "Here we speak French," etc., upon which a Bowery retailer has improved by hanging out a sign, "Here we speak—the truth."

A new Parish brooch is an enameled branch of fig leaves bearing fruit. Each fig is a stumpy, pear-shape pearl. A thick serpent of precious stones coils in the centre, but instead of spitting out venom, it holds a large diamond on its forked tongue.

"Poetry and Criticism" was the subject of Emerson's lectuer given at Boston lately. His most eloquent period was given to Shakespear, whom he placed above all poets.

A certain little damsel, being aggravated beyond endurance by her big brother, plumped down upon her knee, and cried: "Oh, Lord! bless my brother Tom! He lies, he steals, he swears; all boys do; us girls don't. Amen!"

At a marriage ceremony recently performed at Pre Saint Gervais, France, the young bridegroom complained of drowsiness, and before the wedding breakfast was over, he fell into a sound sleep, from which he was not awakened during eight successive days and nights.

The death of Count Walewski, the son of Napoleon I., by a Polish lady, was very sudden. He arrived at Strasburg with his wife, who was quite ill. He entered the apartment to inquire after her health, and passed into an adjoining room, whare he exclaimed, "A glass of water! Quick! a doctor!" and expired.

The man who flatters himself that every girl who looks at him is favorably struck by his appearance, is simply a victim of misplaced confidence. As a general thing young fellows don't look half as well to others as they do to somebody worshipping a mirror. All the nonsense, vanity and happiness of the human kind is not confided to that sex that wear petticoats and provoking skirts. For concentrated vanity, and prodigious nothingness, there are some men whom no woman can hold a candle to.

In London, the other day, a boy only five years old was taken before a magistrate charged with vagrancy. He was found half naked, making "cartwheels," by the side of an omnibus in the Commercial road. The hair was worn off the top of his head, and he was a mass of rags and dirt. In the "Union" he and his companions had refused to wear boots—they were in fact little savages, and they had been made so by living in the streets. Hundreds of children are thus tempted to the life of street Arabs in London, by the half-pence of omnibus passengers.

A very excitable gentleman sat near a very phlegmatic one at one of the concerts of the famous Clara Schumann, in Leipsic. Excitable gentleman almost beside himself in his rapture, and is "fidgeted" to the extremity of endurance by the phlegmatic individual, who hears piece after piece played cold as an icicle.

Ex. Gent. (who, after a splendid performance of a piece by Chopin, can endure it no longer). "I say, sir, do you not like her playing?"

Phleg. Ind. "Why, yes, I like it very well."

Ex. Gent. "Why the deuce, then, sir, don't you applaud?"

Phleg. Ind. "I—? Applaud? Oh, I am her husband."

An enthusiastic sportsman in France recently went to a breakfast given in sign of the beginning of the shooting season. The talk was of game, when suddenly in rushed a servant exclaiming to the host that a hare had been seen moving about on the lawn. Out went the sportsman, gun in hand, fired at the hare and missed him. The hare, scratching his nose, stood up on his hind legs, presented a pistol at the sportsman, and fired in return. No one was hurt; but the sportsman was naturally astounded, until it was explained to him that the hare was a performing animal, which had been hired from a neighboring show. The Paris Figaro tells this tough story.
