STAR VALLEY DISTURBANCE.

Residents Present Their Side in the Covey Controversy.

DENIALS OF DISTURBANCES

Origin of the Trouble and What Happened—As to the Division of the Public Range.

The Deseret News today received a communication from a number of Star Valley residents in relation to the recent trouble between them and Mr. Enoch Covey and herders of this city. The writers says:

The facts are: That nearly two months ago at a meeting held in Afton, the question of dividing the range between the sheep and cattlemen was introduced. It was there moved and carried that each town call a mass meeting and there consider the wants and interest of these stockgrowers and appoint two delegates from each ward, one to represent the cattlemen and the other the sheepmen. These delegates were all to meet at Afton and there present the views and interest of their respective constituents, and agree upon some plan to divide the range agreeable to the interest of all concerned.

The sheep men manifest so little interest that but few were present to represent them. Yet their rights were as fully considered and a division of the range agreed upon. The division made, or attempted, gave to the farmers and ranchers a strip of country two and three-quarters miles wide by about twelve miles long adjoining the valley on the west, and nearly all sloping east into the valley. This left for the sheepmen on the west a scope of country about fifteen miles wide by thirty long. And the entire range east of the valley except a few foot hills near the homes of the people and the headwaters of the streams, from which the people obtained their supply of water.

When it was learned that Mr. Covey was entering the range with the intention of lambing, dipping and shearing his sheep on this small strip of land reserved for the milch cows and dry stock of the ranchers, a committee of men from three towns was sent to wait upon Mr. Covey and lay before him the wishes of the people and kindly request him to keep his sheep west of this line, but their efforts were fruitless. Mr. Covey informed them that they had driven fast and a long way from their winter range to occupy this desired spot for lambing, etc. And that before they entered this valley they and other sheepmen had divided the range among themselves and this part fell to him. When asked what they had left for the cattle owned by the ranchers, they had forgotten to consider this unimportant matter and it was now too late to give this coveted range to any one but Messrs. Covey and Sons.

This committee returned and reported to the people. A company of men gathered, and agreed that if Mr. Covey would not move his sheep from this land they would do so for him; but before they set out, they sent for Mr. Hyram Clark, our county commissioner, and asked him if he would not go to Mr. Covey again and kindly reason with them regarding our rights. Then tell him that if he did not move them that these men would, Mr. Clark consented, and placed the matter before Mr. Covey; he would not yield one point and replied, "We can't afford it."

Mr. Clark then reported to the men assembled; they thanked him and told him to go home.

This body of "armed" and "masked" men then called a council as to the manner of procedure. In this it was agreed that all must be done if possible without violence to man or beast. Arms were only carried to protect themselves against the sheep men if compelled to, not for the purpose of killing or injuring sheep or men.

Farther, that if any herder refused to drive his own sheep back and made any resistance to their being driven, he was to be at once disarmed, so he could do no violence.

They then set out. Mr. Covey's camp wagons were met bearing down upon the valley. The first was ordered by three men to turn back. The driver at once obeyed. The herder was next met and ordered to turn his sheep back. He said he would and four men were detailed to aid him. With orders that the sheep should be driven without injury and no violence used.

Next three men were sent to Mr. Hansen's camp. The spokesman asked him to drive the sheep back. They were then within three-quarters of a mile of the fields. He said, "D— if I will." "Then we must drive them for you," the man said. Hanson answered, "I will drop the first— man that moves those sheep." The man then fired a signal for others to come to avoid trouble.

Mr. Hansen used some plain language; but was ordered to remain at camp until the company arrived. The spokesman then informed the men of Hansen's threats. One man then drew his gun on Hanson and ordered him to put up his hands. He did so without asking questions or arguing the point. Then one man, the former spokesman, dismounted and quietly took Mr. Hansen's double barreled shot gun from the saddle in front of him. The other herder was present, sitting in the front of the wagon. One of the company pointed his gun at him, saying, "Put up your hands." He did. The wagon was then searched by one man for firearms.

These were the only guns ever pointed at any man, and this only because of Mr. Hansen's many threats. No gun was ever pointed at or toward a Covey.

The sheep were then driven quietly by Mr. Hansen and three men sent to help him. It is not true that "terror was scattered around" that or any other camp. The property was not molested.

Young Mr. Covey was soon on the scene from Afton. He acted like a gentleman, which we have ever found him to be.

The men then told him to move the sheep and sign an agreement to keep them back of this line and south of another certain point not formerly designated. This he did, and was informed by the spokesman that they did not wish to do him any injury, and only asked that he respect their rights and let them live.

If he failed they would bunch his sheep and drive them even beyond the designated lines. Mr. Covey moved his sheep, the men quietly dispersed and went their way home.

Mr. Covey was not driven back into "snow, brush and high mountains," but was given some of the best range in the states of Idaho and Wyoming. And if he has suffered this enormous loss mentioned, it was not the result of his being driven to those lines, but was caused by his hurried and long drive made in his eagerness to be the first on this beautiful slope.

As to the route Mr. Covey is compelled to take, it is one the sheep have traveled ever for twenty years past, and will work him no hardship.

You say, "why not take the law?" These and other sheep men have let their sheep pasture in the very fields and yards of our residents in former years, and repeatedly have poor men attempted by the "law" to make them respect their guaranteed rights, and every time the wealth and cunning of these men will win in the courts, not wholly because justice cannot be had in our courts, but these men of means first appeal their case from one court to another, and who among our farmers, struggling for a livelihood, can follow them in these legal races for protection and justice.

Did the people of our valley look only to the law for help and tamely submit to the depredations of these men, who are willing "to live," but forget to "let live," it would be but a very few years until our beautiful valley, now dotted with the happy homes of an enterprising people, would be depopulated and our struggling citizens must look for more congenial climes in which to honestly earn the bread of life.

This season has witnessed the leaving of about twenty of our good families, in search of homes where their few cows can range and help support an existence in this life.

Here in this high altitude our only hope for existence is in our few cattle. We cannot grow grains, fruits and vegetables to any extent. Now, if we are deprived of this our only means of support, the result can easily be foretold.

Is it better that Mr. Covey and other sheep men be fair and just in this matter or that our homes be sacrificed to their greed for gain?

Last year this Mr. Covey and others ranged their sheep on our foot hills down to our very homes, and as a result our cattle were brought in very poor last fall, and with our long winter and scarcity of feed. This people have lost more than Mr. Covey ever did or will by these "lawless acts" of our citizens. This spring our milch cows were driven to the first bare pieces of ground appearing upon the hillsides. These had been swept bare as a barn floor by our good sheep men. Many cattle were only able to live by our feeding to them our seed grains and laboring night and day.

These poor cattle were gathered on this coveted piece of range, and had Mr. Covey been permitted to graze his sheep there, our cattle would have died by the hundreds.

We the undersigned have been residents of Star Valley since its early settlement, and know that its good people have no enmity toward the sheepmen, in fact, many of us are sheep growers. And all our local sheepmen have and do manifest a willingness to respect their neighbor's rights.

One year ago, some of our men occupied this disputed range with their flocks, and were requested by the ranchers to move them. They did so at once, and they had no sooner moved camp than Mr. Covey moved his sheep right in on the same grounds, but was not so willing to vacate it when asked.

Our sheep owners of the valley are willing this range should be preserved and the people feel that Mr. Covey and all transient owners must, willing or unwilling, preserve it from their flocks.

Signed. A. LUE HALE
and BYRON H. ALLRED, JR.

Ogden's lead has been broken at last and Salt Lake fans are happy. The teams are closer together now and some lively work is sure to result in the future. This interesting state of affairs was brought about by the Lobsters losing to the Railways and Park City a week ago, and dropping another to the Salt Lakes Saturday. The latter now lead the league with a percentage of 600, while Ogden is second. Park City and the Railways are tied for third place. These teams will meet here on June 1st.

The Salt Lakes are extremely happy over the present situation and hope to keep in the lead up to the end of the season. It can be depended upon that henceforth the race is going to be a determined one, and the owners of the pennant at the end of the season will have earned it.

GAME AT PARK CITY.

Salt Lakers Defeat the Miners by 12 to 8.

The Rio Grande special to Park City yesterday morning carried four coaches loaded down with baseball enthusiasts, and nearly the whole town of Park turned out to see the game between Salt Lakes and the miners' team.

Webster pitched a masterly game for the Salt Lakes, allowing but seven hits and striking out nine men. His support was good. Good hitting was a feature of the contest. Of the Salt Lakes, Risley, Barr and Hawley getting three each, one of Risley's being a three bagger. Hawley of Park, got three doubles and a single. Of the Salt Lakes Barr proved to be the star player. His work was good all the way through. He figured in a pretty double play and did good work with the stick.

SALT LAKE 11, OGDEN 9.

Saturday's Game Was a Merry-Go-Round for Both Teams.

Probably the most interesting event in the history of Salt Lake baseball was Saturday's game between the boys in white and the boys in red.

With an even number of runs in the eighth, young Barr made a nice two bagger scoring, the winning runs and the Lobsters retired in despair. It would take up too much time and space to go into the details of the thing. It was all details. Capt. Dud was mainly responsible for it all. Several days before the thing happened, a meeting of the faithful was held in the Salt Lakes' club rooms. The meeting was secret. On every face was a pained and fierce expression, indicative of deep thinking. Risley's face was a sight to behold. Suddenly he arose to his feet and in a grave and dignified manner addressed his followers in the following language:

"Friends, players and other animals, something's got to be done! I have been thinking it all over and I have figured it out. It is a question of luck. "Web" hasn't been very lucky against 'em and neither has Pink. With me it might be different. I was always lucky against them—that is, nearly always. So I have decided that if the game's won I must win it. Keep your seats, gentlemen, I see you are surprised, but you will be more surprised when the thing comes off. I will pitch."

The meeting adjourned, and it was agreed that nothing would be said about it for a few days. True to his word, Dud was in the box when the time arrived. Briefly stated, this is what Dud accomplished: He gave one base on balls, nineteen hits only, and struck out four men.

It started off well. Salt Lake made 7 hits and six runs. Borchers pitched for Ogden, and he was batted unmercifully in the first, but had splendid control after that. In the second the visitors got nary a hit and the crowd was lavish in its cheers for Dud. But after that it was simply awful. In the third the Ogden batters sent out five hits to safety and scored three runs. In the next came four more hits and two runs. In the meantime the home lads were getting only what the little boy shot at. Dud braced up in the next inning and the Redmen never touched the ball for a safety. Hughey, who was playing right field, was called in and Pink Hawley took his place. Pink made a hit and assisted by an error of Bluth and Plake, scored one more run for the Salt Lakes. In the sixth Ogden got another. Three more were theirs in the next on account of a wild throw on Mr. Williams' part and the visitors were two ahead. Ogden rooters then began to supplicate for rain. In the last half of the seventh the score was a tie because of a few mistakes made by the Lobsters.

In the first half of the eighth the situation took on a brighter prospect. Two Redmen were on bases when Dud became fierce and struck out three men. When Salt Lake came at the bat again Pink got a single and Dud reached first on a muff by Clark. Then it was that the winning hit was made by Barr. That young gentleman had been in the game all the way through and when he came to the bat his friends felt encouraged. Making his second double-header he scored Pink and Dud. Ogden got nothing in their half. It looked dangerous at one period when Casey sent one far out to right, but Mr. Hawley got under it and that put an end to the trouble.

This is the score in detail:

OGDEN DEFEATS RAILWAYS.

Visitors Piled Up Ten Runs to Three.

When the railways alighted from the street cars on Second South and East Temple street, and wended their several ways to their places of abode, one could tell from the expression of their countenances that something had gone decidedly wrong. They looked disappointed and worried, and so they were. They were confident of showing up Gimlin and his crowd, but the battle went the other way, hence the chunks of gloom and sadness.

There are those who blame the umpire, Jack Grenewell, and say, it was his fault, but that may be an extreme way of viewing it.

No matter what the cause was, Ogden piled up ten runs to the Railroads three.

Borchers pitched again for the lobsters, and Arkansaw Hamilton shot them over for Clippinger. The former gave five bases on balls, all in the first, struck out seven men and gave seven hits. Himilton gave two pases, struck out six men and gave twelve hits.

There were twelve errors in all, evenly divided.

In the second Martin made a run, Pace came in in the third and Kimmerer in the fifth, which was all the Railways got.

In the fourth the lobsters began to score runs. They made three, two in the fifth, one in the sixth, two more in the eighth and two in the ninth. The score is as follows:

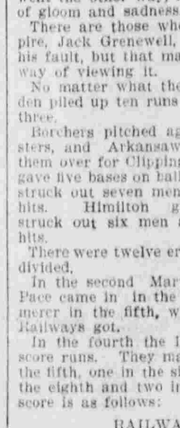
Sporting Notes.



JUST think of a score of twenty-two to two! That's what happened to the far-famed Live Oaks of Bingham on Saturday afternoon when they undertook to take a fall out of the L.D.S. College nine. It was such an awful thrashing that even Manager Bassett was ashamed of himself, and his team for allowing it to occur. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd in attendance and the Salt Lake boys were accorded splendid treatment even after they did the terrible deed. Of course, the winners were tickled almost to death because they expected to have the hardest fight of their lives. They only made two errors. They purloined so many bases that the Live Oaks' captain seriously contemplated swearing to a complaint charging them with petit larceny. In the eighth inning the home team scored ten runs. Here is the score and line-up:

This afternoon there is a game scheduled between the Boston Bloomer girls and the Salt Lakes at the League Park. The novelty of the thing will likely draw a good sized crowd. The statement that five of the girls are men is denied, and it is further said that this aggregation is not the same as that which appeared here before, but this is the original nine. What the Salt Lake line-up is to be is not known. Billy McCausland said the other day that he had been promised the position of pitcher for the Salt Lakes, and he has been practicing faithfully for the ordeal. He says "whip" is in good shape and he feels confident of winning the contest. On the other hand, Marty McQuaid declares that he will do the pitching and the management favors this plan.

A dispatch from New York today says: The king has decided to breap up his large hackney stud at Sandringham, says the Tribune's London correspondent. Tomorrow there will be a sale at Wolferton farm of 34 lots, comprising 58 horses, which will be offered without reserve. There will be another sale at Wolferton in September when more than 100 brood mares, fillies and foals will be disposed of. In future only a small stud of breeding animals will be kept by his majesty at Sandringham.

Jim Corbett is just at the present time having quite an argument with Captain Flood of the New York police department, says the Denver Post. It seems that Corbett in some way or other has secured the enmity of the [illegible]n, and he has ordered Jim to close his saloon at 1 a. m., underder penalty of being arrested if he fails to comply with the order. Funny how some people swell up just as soon as a little authority is reposed in them. Flood has just been transferred to the "Tenderloin District" in New York, and is trying to make a reputation similar to Captain Chapman of whisker fame. The people had Chapman transferred, and it won't be long before they will get Flood's scalp, too. The whole trouble started about the arrest of George Fuller Golden, the actor. When an officer tried to arrest him out of Corbett's place the bystanders took him away from the officer until Corbett arrived, when he told Golden to go with the officer and he (Corbett) would bail him out. Flood feels sore at Corbett for doing this, and that is what has caused the trouble. When Flood and Corbett met in the Hoffman house the other day Corbett called him everything he could lay his tongue to in the presence of hundreds of people and dared the captain to arrest him.

The Lagoon road race scheduled for Thursday promises to be a most interesting event. In all there are eighteen prizes offered and the total valuation placed upon them is about $600. Promptly at 10 a. m. the signal to start will be given and the riders will leave Fifth North and Third West streets. Secures 69 Points to 27 in Track Events.

Reno, Nev., May 25.—The intercollegiate track contest between the Universities of Nevada and Utah this afternoon resulted in a score of 69 for Nevada and 27 for Utah. The high altitude seemed to affect the Utah boys, who were badly used up after several events. The broad jump was declared off.

The afternoon was unfavorable, being cloudy and threatening rain, but notwithstanding the weather a large crowd climbed university hill and cheered lustily for their favorites. Most of the business houses were closed to give the clerks and their employes a chance to see the sport.

100-yard dash—Rideout (Utah), first; Stubbs (Nevada), second. Time — :10 3-5.

BANASTER MAY NOT RACE.

Badly Hurt in His Latest Contest—Must Have Rest.

New York, May 27.—Banaster, son of Farandole, favorite in the Brooklyn handicap of Saturday, may not race again this year. The winner of the Brooklyn handicap two years ago and of the Metropolitan handicap this season, was cut down early in his latest race, and so badly hurt that at least until autumn he must remain off the track.

This statement was made last night by Charles Hill, trainer of Banaster, at the request of Clarence H. Mackay, owner of the horse. Banaster was cut on the outside of his near hind leg, a tendon being affected. Mr. Mackay's candidate had been interfered with soon after the start, and practically ran the last mile of the handicap on three legs. The accident occurred at the end of the first quarter. It was at this point that O'Connor took Count over on the rail and assumed the lead, closely followed by Herbert. Banaster, third, led Standing by a head, but the candlemas colt was on the inside, and as Odom attempted to displace him, Banaster, Standing and Herbert came into collision. It will perhaps never be known who was at fault. Odom things that in the mix-up Standing's hoof struck Banaster.

SONG OF THE BLEACHERS.

You must wake and call me early, call me early, mother mine,
For I've got to do some rooting for our only baseball nine.
It's the first time in two seasons that I've felt as if I might
Go and split the air with yelling, like a true-born bleacherite;
So wake and call me early; make it six o'clock I pray,
For the season begins today, mother, the season begins today.

You Must give me half a dollar; I have car fare—just a dime—
And the fence around the ball ground is too high for me to climb;
And I long to be there early, where the bleacherites are glad,
While they roar and root and riot, to put Boston to the bad.
So wake and call me early, and have breakfast on the way,
For the season begins today, mother, the season begins today.

You must wake and call me early, though you wake me from a dream,
For in fancy I have witnessed all the players get up steam.
And in dreamland I have trembled till the batter smote the sphere,
When my shouts have caused commotion in the frightened atmosphere.
So wake and call me early, make me up at six, I say,
For the season begins today, mother, the season begins today.
