MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS

Unanimously assigned the

"FIRST RANK

IN THE
"SEVERAL REQUISITES" of such Instruments!

The MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO. have the honor to announce that the Organs of their manufacture have been unanimously assigned "the FIRST RANK in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of instruments of the class" by the Judges at the CENTENNIAL EXHIBITION at Philadelphia, 1876, and are the ONLY INSTRUMENTS OF THIS GENERAL CLASS AWARDED THIS RANK. This is after the severest competition by the best makers, before one of the most competent juries ever assembled.

They have also received the MEDAL, but, as is well known, medals of equal merit have been awarded all articles deemed worthy of recognition; so thus it will be easy for many makers to advertise that they have received "first medals."

The differences in competing articles, and their comparative excellence, are recognized in the Report of the Judges from which the following is an extract:—

"THE MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN CO.'S exhibit of Reed Organs and Harmoniums shows instruments of the FIRST RANK IN THE SEVERAL REQUISITES OF INSTRUMENTS OF THE CLASS, viz: Smoothness and equal distribution of tone, scope of expression, resonance and singing quality, freedom and quickness in action of keys and bellows, with thoroughness of workmanship, combined with simplicity of action."

(Signed by all the Judges.)

The Mason and Hamlin Organs are thus declared to rank first, not in one or two respects only, but in the SEVERAL REQUISITES of such instruments, and they are the Only ones assigned this rank. This triumph was not unexpected, for the Mason & Hamlin Cabinet Organs have uniformly been awarded the highest honors in competitions in America, there having been scarcely six exceptions in hundreds of competitions. They were awarded highest honors and Last Night's Dispatches.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—Morrill submitted as a substitute for the resolution of Davis, the following:

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed to investigate the finance reports, books and accounts of the Treasury Department, particularly the reports from 1869 to 1872, inclusive, to ascertain whether or not any actual differences or discrepancies, exist and also whether or not any alterations in the amounts or figures have been made, and report the facts to the Senate, and that said committee shall have power to employ a stenographer.

Davis spoke at length, declaring that differences and changes involving millions were evident from the reports; that Secretary Bristow and the finance committee omit such unexplained corrections; that only since 1871 the reports have differed, and that other reasons existed for the passage of his resolution.

Morrill declared that all Davis' allegations had been satisfactorily explained by the reports of Sherman and Kernan in 1876.

Thurman did not think Sherman's report explained the alleged discrepancies. He urged that an investigation be made, and moved an amendment that the committee authorized do not expire with the end of the present session. Agreed to.

Hereford quoted from the finance reports to show the existence of discrepancies, and denied that they were attributable to defective bookkeeping. The previous explanations were unsatisfactory.

Dawes promised to amend the resolution.

Jones submitted the following:

Resolved, That the Attorney General and Secretary of the Interior are hereby directed to communicate to the Senate the instructions given agents and marshals of the United States in the States of Alabama, Florida and Mississippi, touching the seizure of logs, lumber and naval stores, suspected of having been taken from public lands of the United States; whether or not under the orders given to said agents and marshals large amounts of property in possession of citizens of the United States, held under the claim of valid titles, have been seized without a warrant supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing things to be seized.

After a brief discussion the resolution was amended to request the President to furnish the information to the Senate, and on motion of Chaffee it was further amended to include the instructions given to agents and marshals in all other States and Territories, as well as the States named. As thus amended the resolution was agreed to.

Ingalls introduced a bill repealing the act authorizing the coinage of the twenty-cent silver piece. Referred.

On the motion of Ingalls it was ordered that when the Senate adjourn to day it be to meet on Monday next.

HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, 16.—The consideration of the bill relating to resumption being resumed, the House was addressed by Hart, who opposed its passage.

Garfield said that this was a well-discussed topic. Its features were old. He appealed to the general judgment of mankind on the question of currency. In 1860 there was general prosperity, and then it was the best settled of all questions that the only safe and trustworthy standard of value was coin of ascertained weight and fineness, or a paper currency convertible into coin at the holder's will. That was then, and had been for a long time, the unanimous opinion of the American people. Only twelve years had passed since the House, with only six dissenting votes, resolved to stand again by the old ways to bring the country to sound money, and now what was found? Groups of schoolmen and doctrinaires, the latter unknown twelve years ago, were found in favor of what they called "absolute money," declaring that a piece of paper stamped "one dollar" was a dollar, that gold and silver were a part of the barbarism of the past, which ought for ever to be abandoned; that resumption should never take place, and that the era of prosperity were paper eras. Coming back to the prosperous era of 1860, he asserted that although banking was free there was but $207,000,000 of paper money in circulation, and about $200,000,000 in coin. How much was in circulation to day? Seven hundred and twenty-seven millions in greenback fractional currency and fractional silver and about nine millions of copper; in all, $736,000,000, exclusive of the gold circulating on the Pacific coast. He put it to the judgment of the House, whether, if in 1860, under free banking, with no restrictions, $407,000,000 was the limit of the possible currency in circulation, almost twice that amount was needed, and hardly enough in 1877. He affirmed that the vast majority of the creditors of the country were poor men, and that the vast majority of the debtors belonged to the rich classes. In the first place the poor man had to borrow money, and in the second place it was the laboring man who placed his surplus money in the savings banks, and it was the rich who borrowed from the savings banks. Thus did the poor lend to the rich. In the name of the laboring man, therefore, he denounced the attempt to repeal the resumption law. If it were repealed the country would be plunged into the necessity of sailing the same tempestuous ocean with an uncertain result. If it were repealed and no substitute made for it, the day would not be far distant when Congress would look back from the depths and horrors of the evils which would surround the country for the second time, and would earnestly regret the day when the resumption act was repealed. The struggle now pending in the House was, on the one hand, to make the greenback better, and on the other to make it worse. In the name of every man who wanted his own when he earned it, he demanded that Congress should not make the earned wages of the poor man to shrivel and shrink away, but the greenback should be made better until the plow-holders' money should be as good as the bond-holders' money. This was an era of pacification of the States, and the citizens were equal before the law, so that the motto of the country might be "equal States, equal men and equal dollars," and a complete pacification would be achieved. Two years ago his colleague (Ewing) had predicted that the silver currency then proposed to be issued would be immediately absorbed and withdrawn from circulation. So his colleague thought now that the gold coin would be absorbed and withdrawn from circulation.

Ewing explained that when he made that statement the country was not aware of the rascally act demonetizing silver, and silver was then at a high premium over the greenback.

Garfield suggested that the trouble about the explanation was that silver coin was of 12 per cent. less value than old silver, so that there never was the slightest danger of its being bought up for silver. The gentleman (Ewing) thought there was some danger about gold, but if an eastern farmer removing to the west sold his farm for $10,000, he was likely to load himself with forty pounds weight of gold, or 640 pounds weight of silver. He would rather take his pay in ten $1,000 bills and carry it west in that convenient form.

In conclusion, he said: If any of the amendments propose to make the resumption act more safe, more certain, more careful of the interests of the country, I shall cheerfully join in voting for it, but anything that takes back a promise, anything that gives up what we have gained, anything that sets us afloat again on the wild waves from which we have nearly escaped, I will oppose, if it should cost me all the political future that can be offered to any American. (General applause on the republican side of the House.)

Buckner a vocated the passage of the bill for the repeal of the resumption act, and said, if the present policy were persisted in, the whole social fabric of the country would be stricken to the foundation.

The Speaker stated that the operation of the resolution adopted on the subject was that at the close of the debate the previous question would be considered as seconded; that then, if the House refused to order the main question, it would throw the bill back and strip it of past agreements. The whole matter however, was in the control of the House.

The House then took a recess till 7:30 in the evening, the session to be exclusively for debate on the bill.

At the evening session speeches were made by Keefer, Dunnel, Sampson, and Loring, against the repeal of the resumption act.

Adjourned.

Records. Records.

WE ARE NOW PREPARED to receive orders for BRANCH and WARD RECORDS, of a new and improved form, which has been approved by the presiding Bishopric and others.

We shall make them of four, five and six quires each, containing about 2,560 and 3,000 names each, respectively, and the price will be for four quires, $12.00, five quires, $13.00, six quires, $15.00. Each book will contain a suitable index, and be well bound in cloth and Russia leather with ornamental lettering pieces for name of the Ward on the sides. The book being of a large size, we do not think it advisable to make them over six quires.

Specimens can be seen at this Office, and orders received for size of book required.

Bishops in the Country desiring Records can order by mail, and we will make accordingly and forward them.
