EVENING NEWS. Thursday, . . August 4, 1881. The Horseshoe Nail.

"Murder, though it hath no tongue, speaks with most miraculous organ." On the evening of June 20, 1837, a pedler on horseback stopped at the smithy of one John Steele, on the outskirts of the town of Tickhill, near Doncaster, England. Several persons were in the smithy at the time, besides the blacksmith and his son Richard. The peddler asked Steel to shoe his horse as quickly as he could, as he wished to reach Don-caster early, and get to bed at his old place; for the next day being

he could, as he wished to reach Don-caster early, and get to bed at his old place; for the next day being "Statues," or fair, a number of visi-tors would be looking for accommo-dations.
