A CORINNE correspondent of the Chicording to his showing the Judges are very mild-mannered, innecent, agreeable persons. Speaking of one of

"like heaven, are pleas'd in doing good. Though the ungrateful subjects of their layous , Are barren in return."

This correspondent is not sufficiently communicative. He says that this benevolent gentleman who gives away valuable mines with the liberality of a prince, the recipient of his bounty; but he does of thought and Intelligence of the latnot say whether he is still unknown to | ter part of the 19th century. him. How pleased the public would be to know his name! Probably the correspondent in his next letter will give a description of the meeting which took place between the princely stranger and the delighted Judge, after the latter had discovered that he was the owner of the valuable 200 feet. Scenes of less interest than this would be, have been transferred to canvas and handed down to admiring posterity.

Of another of the "Triumvirate" the same correspondent says:

"He has acquired interests mines, -taken them up himself in some instances. Indeed, he spends a good deal of time in prospecting, same as your Judges do in farming and gardening, and why not just as innocently?"

Why not, indeed? Who can object to a Federal Judge exing out his scanty salary by trips into the mountains and shoulder? We feel confident that his district will not miss him, even if he does "spend a great deal of his time in prospecting." It is a pursuit more suited to his abilities and tastes, more agreeable to the people of his district, and more innocent in its results than the adjudication of lawsuits.

We congratulate the Judges upon having so excellent an advocate as this correspondent. Their merits are now n a fair way to be recognized. But we cannot see why there should be so much fuse made about Judges having interests in a few mines. It has always been a mystery to us how they, having no other Pauline Burnsm lost in the Anglo means of livelihood than that which they derive from their positions, do manage to live respectably. There is only one way that we can explain it. We have been assured, more than once, by Judges who have come here that the principal inducement they had for coming in this capacity to Utah was the condition of their health. Invalids do not generally eat as much as healthy men, and we have thought it was barely possible that they might make an arrangement, in view of this, for board at cheaper rates, and thus sustain themselves upon their salaries. But, then, Utah has a healthy climate, and Afternoon Dispatches. Rice and Reas saw mill exploded this though a Judge may not have good health when he comes here, it cannot be expected that he will always be an invalid and live on short commons. When his appetite increases it is but natural to suppose that if a stranger a mins that he should accept of it. True, it might afterwards come to light that the ownership of this mine in which he had received a share was contested, and that he had received his feet from one of the parties whose right to hold a share himself, much less to give any away, was disputed; but, then, how could he be expected to know that? To use the argument of their friendly correspondant: "If a judge can't acquire nor hold mines because controversy may arise as to their title, how can he acquire or hold any property?"

We would like those people who object to the Judges having interests in mines to answer that question if they can. If a Judge cannot accept a piece of real estate when it is presented to him, because the title to that real estate may some day come before him in Court to decide upon, what is the use of being an American citizen, or a Federal Judge?

Speaking of another member of the practice and corresponding income that he had in Chicago, sacrificed it all to come to Utah for the paltry salary of Associate Justice? Why should be not have interests in mines as well as other people? It may appear at first plant. Associate Justice? Why should be not have interests in mines as well as other people? It may appear at first glance, as though he was conscious by his "getting rid of them in some manner," that the transaction would not bear investigation; but the public should not be too hasty at jumping at such a conclusion. The gentleman possesses great tenderness of feetings and he has been cruelly become feeling; and he has been cruelly lacers-ted by charges in the past. If this cor-
