RECORDS! RECORDS!!

WE ARE NOW PREPARED to receive orders for BRANCH and WARD RECORDS, of a new and improved form, which has been approved by the presiding Bishopric and others.

We shall make them of four, five and six quires each, holding 2,040, 2,560 and 3,000 names each, respectively, and the price will be, for four quires $12.00, five quires $13.00, six quires $15.00. Each book will contain a suitable Index, and be well bound in Cloth and Russia Leather, with ornamental lettering pieces for name of the Ward on the side. The book being of a large size, we do not think it advisable to make them over six quires.

Specimens can be seen at this Office, and orders received for size of book required.

Bishops in the country desiring Records can order by mail, and we will make accordingly and forward to them.

[Continuation of Moulton's Card, commenced in yesterday's issue.]

"But the published accusations of Mr. Beecher affecting my character, my own self-respect, the advice of friends, and public justice make it imperative that the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth be now declared."

Moulton says, "Igive the statement as worded before Beecher made his statement, no syllable being changed. I withheld it only as a last, despairing effort to save friends, and now give it to defend my own character. I have only one alleviation to my grief, and that is that the facts now published will be no more destructive than when they came out in January, 1871, when I took the part of mediator and attempted to restrain them. It leaves Beecher and Mrs. Tilton in almost the same position in which I found them, excepting in so far as their solemn statements may lower them in the estimation of the world. I reserve to myself the right hereafter to review the statement of Mr. Beecher, in contrast with the facts as shown by the documents herewith submitted, and others which I have at my hand, the production of which did not seem to be necessary until some portion of the published evidence of Mr. Beecher demanded a contradiction. (Signed)

"FRANCIS D. MOULTON."

Statement.

The statement says that Moulton has been, since 1850, intimate with Tilton, and a frequent visitor to his house, and up to the 22nd of December, 1870, the day of Tilton's resignation as editor of the Independent had never heard or known of the slightest disagreement or unkindness existing between Tilton and his wife, but believed their marital relations were almost unexceptionably pleasant. On the 29th of December, Tilton told Moulton of Bowen's charges against Beecher, and of his hiring him to write the open letter to Beecher, demanding his retirement from Plymouth Church and from Brooklyn, for reasons which you explicitly understand, which words were, so Tilton stated, underlined in the note at the request of Bowen. Tilton at the same time told Moulton that he said to Bowen that he was prepared to believe his charges, because Beecher had made improper advances to Mrs. Tilton. "Surprised at this," he says, "I asked him what, when he replied, 'Don't ask; I cannot tell you.'" Moulton thereupon remonstrated with Tilton upon his foolishness in signing such a letter on the strength of Bowen's assertions, and not have Bowen sign it also, and further expressed his doubt as to whether Bowen would deliver the letter. He afterwards learned from Beecher that Bowen did deliver the letter and that Beecher gave Moulton a copy of it on the 1st of January. Subsequently Moulton received from Tilton a copy of the same letter. Moulton then repeats the circumstances of Bowen's dismissal of Tilton from the Independent and Union, as related to him by the latter, from which it appears that the dismissal was caused by Tilton's announcement that he was going to see Beecher.

Mrs. Tilton's Confession.

The statement then says: "On Friday evening, December 30th, Tilton came to me and said, that by his wife's request he had determined to see Beecher, in order to show to Beecher the confession of his wife of interviews between them, which he (Tilton) had never, up to that time, mentioned to Beecher, though made in the July previous in writing. Tilton did not tell me how his wife came to make the confession in July, nor did I, at that time or ever after, ask. Indeed I refrained from asking for the confession of all parties, farther than they chose to make them voluntarily, for the purpose for which I was acting. Tilton wanted me to go down and ask Beecher to come up and see him at my house, which I did. I said to Beecher: 'Mr. Tilton wants you to come and see him at my house immediately.' He asked, what for, I replied: 'He wants to make some statement to you in reference to your relations with his family.' We then started out to go there. It was storming at the time, and he remarked, 'There is an appropriateness in this storm,' and asked me, 'What can I do?' I said: 'Mr. Beecher, I am not a Christian, but, if you wish, I will show you how well a heathen can serve you.' We then went to my house, and I showed him into the chamber over the parlor, where Tilton was, and left them together. In about an hour Beecher came down and asked me if I had seen the confession of Elizabeth. I said I had. Said he: 'This will kill me,' and asked me to walk out with him. I did so, and we walked to Tilton's house together. On the way he said: 'This is a terrible catastrophe; it comes upon me as if I had been struck by lightening.' He went into Tilton's house and I returned home.

Wanted a Reconciliation.

"When we arrived at Beecher's house he wanted me to stand by him in this emergency and procure a reconciliation if possible. I told him I would, because the interests of the women, children and families were involved, if for no other reason. That ended the interview that night. I returned to my house and had some conversation with Tilton, in which he told me that he had recited to Beecher the details of his wife's adulteries, and the remark which Beecher made was this: 'All a dream, Theodore,' and that was all the answer Beecher made to him. I then advised Tilton that, for the sake of his wife and family, and for the sake of Beecher's family, the matter should be kept quiet and hushed up."

Next morning, Moulton learned from Tilton of Beecher's conference with him. Tilton, during the interview with her, threatened before the retraction of her confession. Tilton was furious. Moulton still counselled Tilton to forgive and forget, and to go himself and see Beecher. This he subsequently did, and gave the retraction to Tilton.

Subsequently Moulton went to Beecher's house, and says: "He took me into his study and then expressed his great grief at the wrong which he had done as a minister and friend to Theodore, and at his request I took pen and paper and, at his dictation, wrote what is known as the apology, which was to be shown to Tilton only. It had reference only to criminality with Mrs. Tilton, which Beecher on that occasion confessed. On several other occasions he confessed his guilt with Mrs. T., and always in a spirit of deep grief and sorrow at the enormity of the crime he had committed, and at times he was so bowed down with grief in consequence of the wrong he had done, that he threatened to put an end to his life."

Reconciliation.

Then follows a statement as to the reconciliation between Bowen, Beecher and Tilton, the substance of which has already been published on several occasions.

Next comes a lengthy statement in reference to the triangular scene and between Bowen, Tilton and Beecher; also the appearance on the scene of Mrs. Woodhull, and her connection with the scandal, the refusal of Beecher to preside at a lecture by Woodhull, &c., all of which has already been published in our columns.
