

INTERURBAN TO PROVO PROMISED

Salt Lake Capitalists Agree to Commence Construction Within Six Months.

NOW SEEKING RIGHT OF WAY

C. B. Lang, Representing Syndicate, Making Trip of Inspection Through Utah County.

(Special to The News.)
PROVO, Oct. 5.—That Provo and other Utah county points may soon be connected with Salt Lake City by an interurban electric railroad is the indication of events now transpiring in this city and county.

C. B. Lang, representing Salt Lake City and other capitalists interested in the proposition, was in Provo yesterday on a trip of inspection, and he promised that the parties who have agreed to finance the project will commence work on the electric road within six months. Applications for franchises to the city councils of the various cities through which the line will pass will be presented at an early date, and it is promised that work will be commenced within six months after the right of way is secured, as all the money needed is available, and there will be no need of delay for the purpose of getting capital.

LOOP AROUND LAKE

In a few years when the west side of Utah lake becomes more thickly settled (and this section is now rapidly becoming populated), a loop will be constructed around the lake, for the convenience of the people and also the State. Salt Lake city has the opportunity to make trials in this beautiful section of the state and enjoy the fishing and hunting on the lake, and the pleasures of the resorts which are bound to be established on the shores of the lake following the construction of a railroad.

A REMARKABLE RECORD.

Chicago & Northwestern Carries 27,000,000 People Without a Fatality.

The announcement is made by the Chicago & Northwestern Railway that for the year which ended June 20, 1909, 27,000,000 of passengers were carried over its rails without a single fatality, and it is difficult to comprehend the significance of this statement without the aid of the most illuminating illustrations.

For example—the number of passengers carried by the Northwestern during the period above mentioned, was more than all the railroads in the United States carried in the year 1859. This number of persons is seven times greater than those carried by both federal and confederate armies during the Civil war; twenty times as many as were in Xerxes army at the invasion of Greece, generally supposed to have been the largest number of persons ever gathered together in one place at one time. It is a third of the population of the United States, yet each one of these 27,000,000 of people came from the east to the Chicago & Northwestern railway, and the railroad safely accounted for every precious life placed in its care.

The population of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Massachusetts and Indiana approximates 27,000,000 persons, and statistics show a greater number of fatalities each year in those states as the result of accidents to persons who are pursuing their usual duties, than in traveling that line on the passenger trains of the Northwestern is attended with less hazard than pertains to the ordinary everyday vocations of life.

This record is not obtained by accidental good fortune, but is the result of a fixed policy on the part of the company for a systematic and liberal expenditure wherever such outlay can add to the safety and comfort of the traveling public.

ELECTRICIAN IS BANKRUPT.

Albert J. Giarraus, an electrician, filed a petition in bankruptcy before the federal court yesterday. His liabilities are placed at $17,732, of which $16,957.58 is unsecured. The assets are said to be $55, which is largely exempt. The largest creditor is the Intermountain Electric company, to which is owing $554. His hearing will take place Oct. 7, at 10 a. m., before Commissioner Baldwin.

SURVEYING WATER GRADE LINE

Union Pacific Corps Working Between Bridgeport and Medicine Bow.

(Special to The News.)

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 5.—A corps of surveyors has been operating in the vicinity of Grant, in the northern part of this county, and it is reported they are employed by the Union Pacific and are running lines for the extension of the Union Pacific. Chapelle, N. M., Bridgeport, to a connection with the main line at Medicine Bow. This is the long-talked-of North Platte to Medicine Bow water grade line, following the valley of the North Platte, reducing the mileage and cutting down the heavy grades now encountered on Sherman hill.

OFFICIALS ENTERTAINED.

O. S. McDonald, general traffic manager of the Harrington lines, and Mrs. McCormick, Colonel E. M. Conway and wife, and Judge J. O. Humphrey of Springfield, Ill., stopped over in this city yesterday from the northwest, and were entertained at luncheon at the Alta club, by Thomas Kearns. The party left in the evening for the east.

SPIKE AND RAIL.

F. C. Peck, general passenger agent and F. C. Wilson, general traffic manager of the Denver, Laramie and Rockwood through Salt Lake City yesterday afternoon on their way to Chicago. Mr. Wilson was accompanied by his wife.

Ronald C. Keay yesterday accompanied Mr. Smith president of the Beaver Auto Transportation company, on an automobile tour from Salt Lake to Millard.

IRVINE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Well Known Provo Citizen Falls Across Rail, Striking His Face.

Robert H. Irvine, a well known Provo citizen, and supervisor of the poultry exhibit at the Inland Empire exposition, was seriously injured last night in falling across the railroad tracks at the time he was on his way to the depot to meet Mrs. Irvine, who was coming in from Provo to visit the fair. He tripped upon a rail and fell, striking his face upon the opposite side of the track. He was rendered unconscious for a time and was removed to the home of J. G. McDonald, the exposition, where medical attendance was provided. Mr. Irvine's face was badly cut and it is feared he may lose the sight of his left eye.

Peptiron Pills

Ironize the blood, tone the nerves, strengthen the stomach, aid digestion, and promote sweet, restful, natural sleep. They are chocolate-coated, acceptable to the stomach and easily assimilated, and the best medicine for anemic, pale, nervous and dyspeptic men, women and children, and all sufferers from the effects of the strenuous life of today. Price 50c or $1. Of druggists or by mail. C. T. HOOD CO., Lowell, Mass.

FAMILY HISTORIES OF GREATEST VALUE

The meeting of the Genealogical society held yesterday afternoon opened with prayer by Bishop Joseph C. Christensen. The president of the society, Anthony H. Lund, was pleased to see so many present, and believed there was an awakened interest in genealogical research and temple work. He said: "The saints should realize the importance of salvation of our dead for without our dead we cannot be saved."

TWELVE KITTENS ARE ON THE BACK FENCE

The Hoo Hoo, however, invite them to come to the yard and the fun starts.

The Consecrated Order of Hoo Hoo held its annual banquet last evening at the Commercial club. Prior to the "feed," 12 kittens were initiated "on the back fence." Chief Tom Cat E. V. Smith was one of the prominent felines at the festive board, where Frank Murphy, chief deputy feline, officiated as toastmaster. The affair was given in honor of members of the lumber trade and of the order by the well known lumber firms: Morrison, Merrill & Co., T. H. Smith & Son, Rock Island Sand and Dooley company, G. W. Gates & Co., J. J. Stewart, Parker Lumber company, George Romney Lumber company, McConaughay-Losse Lumber company, McFarland Lumber company, Utah Lumber company, J. P. and M. Nibley, Lillard & Daly, Holman, Payne, Taylor-Armstrong Lumber company, Salt Lake Building and Manufacturing company, and the Grand Ronde Lumber company.

Hot Chocolate, Beef Tea, Bonillion, Malted Milk and all kinds of hot drinks served promptly and daintily at our fountain.

Visitors Make Z. C. M. I. Drug Store your headquarters while in the city

Hot Chocolate, Beef Tea, Bonillion, Malted Milk and all kinds of hot drinks served promptly and daintily at our fountain.

The Pure Drug Dispensary
112-114 South Main Street

the request of a state federation president or chairman of education. The examination graduate is invited to enter this competition first making her candidate and fitness known to one of the two federation officers of the state. If her qualifications are deemed adequate to warrant the great courtesy of examination accorded by the Rhodes trust, then this officer may formally present her name to the national chairman of education for a permit to enter the examination.

The examinations are given in mathematics, Latin and Greek. The trustees have decided that any candidate from the United States who passes the qualifying examination in Latin and mathematics shall be eligible, although he may not pass the examination in Greek. The same rule will be applied to the women candidates for this scholarship. The examinations are to be held on October 12 and 13 next in each state of our union. Applications for the time, place and general conditions may be obtained from the secretary of any university in the vicinity of the candidate.

The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

6. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

7. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

8. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

9. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

10. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

11. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

12. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

13. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

14. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

15. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

16. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

17. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

18. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

19. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

20. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

21. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

22. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

23. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

24. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

25. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

26. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

27. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

28. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

29. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non-contributing state, then preference shall be given to the candidate from the contributing state.

30. The papers are read and rated at Oxford by the official examiners, and returned to the national chairman. The committee of selection then submits the names of the successful competitors to the state federation officers, who determine which one of the candidates shall be deemed in scholarship and position of distinction to best represent the interests of their state. The final selection between the various state candidates shall rest with the committee of selection. Any state may submit a candidate, but if the choice should finally rest between a candidate from a state which has contributed toward the scholarships and a candidate from a non