Denver, June 20 .- The f-st public land convention ever held ...me to an end late this afternoon with the adoption of a series of resolutions which were not so radical as expected. A letter was received from President Roosevelt and was a feature of the day's session. The resolution over which there was the most dispute read; "We oppose any change in the existing law and customs as to grazing live stock upon the public domain, outside of forest reserves.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER.

PRESIDENT'S LETTER. "There has been placed in my hands a paper purporting to be issued by the program committee of the public lands convention to be held in Den-ver. The preliminary discussion of the general subject in this paper con-tains several statements to which I desire to call your especial attention, as they not merely misrepresent the attitude of the administration, but portray that attitude as the direct reverse of what it really is. "The first and most important of these misstatements is to the effect that there has been a change in the public land policy of the government, which change will result in depriv-ing the western states of the right to settle the public lands with American clizens. This allegation directly re-verses the actual facts. The course the government is now pursuing is to carry out the traditional home mak-ing policy of the United States as to its public lands. The men most in-proposing the actual of the most in-terested in opposing the action of the administration are themselves on James R. Garfield, secretary of the interior, and R. A. Ballinger, commissioner of the general land office, were heard on the first day, but since then there has been but one address in support of the ad-ministration. Conservatives, however, declare that the two sides to the con-troversy are really not far apart, as both contend they are striving for changes in the present polley that will make it easier for new settlers to ac-quire home sites and become an integ-ral part of the great region lying west of the Mississippi river.

rich men and powerful corporations whose interests are hostile to those of the home-makers. "The policy of the present adminis-tration has steadily been, is now and will be, to promote and foster actual settling, actual home-making on the public lands in every possible way. "We have incurred the violent hos-tillity of the individuals and corpora-tions seeking, by fraud and some-tillity of the individuals and corpora-tions seeking, by fraud and some-tillity of the individuals and corpora-tions seeking, by fraud and some-tillity of the individuals of the public domain to the exclusion of settlers. The beneficiaries and instigators of, or participators in, the frauds, of course, disapprove the acts of the ad-ministration. But if the administra-tion's policy is upset the one man who would be irreparably injured would be the settler, the home-maker, the man of small means, who has taken up a farm which he intends himself to work and on the proceeds of which he intends to support and bring up his family. This statement is not in ac-cord with the facts. This proposed law specifically provided that the range land under government control should be open to entry or location under all of the public land laws and provided in every way for the pro-tection of the rights of the settler. As a matter of fact, one of the prime reasons for advocating its passage is because if enacted it would safeguard the rights of the home-maker on the EXTRAORDINARY

"It has been alleged that the gov-ernment intends to make the users of water for irrigation pay for their water. There has never been any such public interests against the great coal monopolies, by leasing the right to mine the public coal. Unfortunately, Congress falled to act in the matter, and most of the coal lands have been already restored to entry, while the remainder are being restored as rap-fidly as the necessary examinations in the field can be made. "As a matter of actual fact, most of the coal lands have hitherto been taken under some forms of entry other than those of the coal entry laws, and in many cases by actual fraud. The administration will cer-tainly renew its efforts to get Con-gress to pass a law which will do away with the fraud. "The writers of this program state that the plan for government control
