THE RED RIVER INSURRECTION.

THE telegraphic dispatches, for the last two or three days, have been a little mixed in relation to the affairs of Messrs. Reille and company, the leader and adherents of the insurrection against Queen Victoria at Winnipeg. By perusing those dispatches the public may learn that in the British parliament, three or four days ago, it was stated that the expedition which the government was preparing to proceed against the insurgents at Red River had been abandoned, that the difficulty had been settled to the satisfaction of the participants, the condition being that their territory was to become a distinct province of the Canadian Dominion, and to have representation in the Dominion Parliament. Another dispatch says the Department at Washington had received from the British government, a message confirming this statement.

Telegrams to the above effect were received and printed in Tuesday's paper, and on the same day a dispatch, on the authority of a Montreal correspondent, stated that Reille was as elated with his success and greatness that he had given up all idea of annexation to this country and was determined to have nothing less than an independent nationality. To-day the dispatches say that preparations are being made in Canada for an early departure of troops to Red River; and the Governor General, in a speech at the adjournment of the Dominion Parliament, yesterday, made a similar announcement.

These conflicting statements are not at all reconcilable, and it certainly is not a supposable case, that the difficulties at Red River are settled. If they were the Canadians would not be preparing troops for that place, and if such a dispatch as the one referred to above had been received by the British government, and transmitted by it to Washington, it can be nothing but a hoax; for had any such bona fide arrangement been made, the Canadian government would certainly have been apprised of it first.

Instead of the difficulty being amicably settled there is little prospect of it being settled at all, without bloodshed; for if the dispatches are to be relied on, the purchase money, $300,000, has been paid by the Dominion government to the Hudson's Bay Company, and the transfer of the Northwest is to take place in about a month. This purchase and proposed transfer, without consulting the wishes of the settlers, was the cause of the inception of the present movement, for independence at Red River.

The population of the Red River country is very limited, its numbers a few years ago being only about six hundred, including natives, half-breeds, and Europeans; and it is supposed to be not much more numerous at the present time. The discontent is said to be confined chiefly to the French half-breeds; but if Reille were supported by the entire population the idea of attempting to gain independence seems ridiculous; and if persisted in will in all probability end in their destruction. But having had matters all their own way thus far may have blinded them to the real nature and dangers of their position. It is one thing to talk independence when no troops are near; and another when thousands of well-organized forces, with every appliance necessary for warfare are on hand to contest the point. Not that we believe the Dominion Government, well aided by the British, will find it as easy to bring the Winnipeg colonists to terms as they imagine; for hundreds and thousands of turbulent spirits from this country will no doubt flock to the standard of freedom in Winnipeg to aid Reille and his followers. The country through which troops have to pass is much against them, it being of such a character that ambushes of a few men could seriously harass a large number. Reille and his forces will be certain to take advantage of this. They now occupy Fort Garry, situated at the junction of the Assiniboine and Red Rivers. The distance from Ottawa to this point, by the best route, is eleven hundred miles, only a little over fifty of which can be travelled by rail; the road being for a considerable distance a wilderness. A portion of this route passes through United States Territory, and if the Government refuse permission for the Canadian and British troops to travel it, their journey to Fort Garry will be much longer and more perilous.

This Winnipeg enterprise offers a fine opportunity to the Americans to strike a blow at the power of Britain; and it is said that when they next take the field, Red River, instead of Canada, will be the scene of action. Hitherto they have only excited contempt and ridicule by their wordy battles and threats against Britain; now they have a chance to act. They have lately been holding secret councils, at which it is said intense martial order was created, and liberty to Winnipeg and death to the Saxon was the watchword; and if they permit such an opportunity as this, to harass, if not to humiliate and defeat, the power by which their native land has so long been misruled and oppressed, their pusillanimity will expose them to lasting contempt. Should they unitedly act with Reille, much hard fighting will probably take place before the cause of independence at Red River will be abandoned.

The people and physicians in the neighborhood were on the ground promptly, and labored incessantly to alleviate their sufferings. Hon. F. M. AVERY, President National Watch Co., Chicago, Ills.

Dear Sir:—During the month that I have carried one of your "R. W. Raymond" Watches it has not failed to keep the time with so much accuracy as to leave nothing to desire in this regard. For accuracy in time keeping, beauty of movement and finish, your Watches challenge my admiration, and arouse my pride as an American, and I am confident, that all respects they will compete successfully in the markets of the world, with similar manufacturers of other nations. They need only to be known to be appreciated.
