the county recorder conveying to J. P. Channing of New York the Copper plant property, real estate and appur-tenances in North Salt Lake. Mr. Channing purchased the property at a foreclosure sale growing out of the suit of E. T. Singer et al vs the Salt Lake City Copper Manufacturing company. The consideration expressed in the deed was $50,000.

Boston Herald: Mr. Henry Hornblower comes home from the far west with warm commendations of the business methods observed at the Consolidated, the Bingham, Chociti and Navaho mines. He makes no pretence to knowledge of the mineralogical de-partment of mining, but does appreciate systematic way in which the it-dustry is being conducted at the mines. He confirms commonly accepted views of the mines above mentioned.

The residents on the west side were greatly alarmed last night over a fire which broke out in the woodshed and storeroom on the property of Mrs. Mary McKean, 173 north Fourth West street. These small buildings burned very rapidly, causing a great illumination in the neighborhood. The west side fire department made a timely run to the scene, and put a quietus on the blaze before it had done much The entire loss will not exdamage. ceed $39.

A kindergarten school for children opens this week under the Latter-day Saints college, in the Social hall on lower room has put in order for this purpose and this morning a number of children were on hand to begin. The children will be entering all this week. Miss Mabel McBride is the teacher, and Froebel's method of child training is the basis of the work. The training is intended for children between the ages of three and six years, and the present opportunity for those who live in the vicinity is an exceptionally good one. George McCune of Nephi is here on a sheep buying junket. He proposes to buy 5,000 more sheep for his herd in southern Utah, if conditions are favorable. Mr. McCune is associated with A. W. McCune and W. P. Read in this enterprise. Mr. McCune says the outlook in the sheep and wool market is very bright. There being a shortage in the world's wool market the price is on the raise. Mr. McCune says the sheep men throughout the State are taking more pride in the breeding of their flocks now than they have ever done before.

COMMENTS ON ANNIE LAURIE

Says the Latter's Criticism of Her Book is the Convulsive Outery of a Fossilific Class.

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Stetson, the noted author and lecturer, arrived in Salt Lake Saturday evening and spent Sunday at the Kenyon hotel. Mrs. Stetson left today for Provo where she will remain until Wednesday, gelivering three lectures there during her stay. After filling this engagement, Mrs. Stetson will return to Salt Lake where she will probably lecture before leaving for California.

Owing to a change in dates, some misunderstanding existed as to the Tensdale, and of the general board, Apostle Matthias F. Cowley and Elder Le Roi C. Snow, After the opening exercises, Elder Joseph Parkinson spoke time of Mrs. Stetson's arrival, so that the plans and arrangements for her reception and lectures in Salt Lake had not been matured.

Mrs. McCune and Mrs. E. B. Wells, whom Mrs. Stetson met in London dur-ing the International Council, and who with Mrs. Susa Y. Gates prevailed upon Mrs. Stetson to visit Salt Lake, are absent, both having been called away ciations in the Stake. They are now all complete in their organization, have complete work in earnest, and are complying, as far as possible, with all from home at this time, so that nothing was definitely known of the plans nor time decided upon for her coming. Mrs. Stetson, who has been widely known for some time past through her clever literary contributions to the Judging from the present favorable conditions this will be the most suc-cessful year of M. I. A. work ever prominent reform and other magazines of the country, has achieved a world-wide reputation through her re-cently published book, "Women and to the young people expressed his pleas-ure in being associated with the great Economics," which has made her one of the most notable lights amongst the Improvement movement. "Its great object is for the salvation of the wayward authors of reform literature of the century. The book, published about a year ago, is in its third edition, a re-markable record for a work dealing chiefly with dry economic problems. It has been translated into German power for the accomplishment of good that each one might make the world a little better. "Do not become slaves to evil habits," continued the speaker, "beand Dutch, is about to be translated into French by a noted litterateur of that country; and most notable of all in the author's estimation has been translated into Russian, by an author who recently wrote Mrs. Stetson stat-ing that he had already translated her work, and asking her for biographical sketches for his book.

A representative of the "News" called at the Kenyon yesterday and had a most interesting interview with the gifted reform advocate.

peties. Be not users of tobacco, or slaves to the use of liquor. Their is not a single virtue in them, but on the contrary, they cause the destruction of both body and mind. Young ladies, you can exert a potent influence anong the young men, in aiding them to re-torm from such habits, give them to understand that if they wish your com-panionship they must be pure and clean, therefore free from the stench and filth of tobacco and liquor." Mrs. Stetson in appearance is the extreme opposite of the popular picturi-zation of the "new woman." She and flith of tobacco and liquor." Elder Snow made a strong appeal to is slight, almost petite in figure, and is extremely quiet in manner. She has dark hair, expressive brown eyes, and a face which possesses no distinctly striking quality in repose, but be-comes fascinating under the illumination of wht: which she is devoted. Ideals Her personality is most striking. She speaks in a low, soft voice, modulated one degree perhaps above a whisper, yet her tone, words, face, eyes and gestures tell the story of a wonderfully forceful in-dividuality, which bubbles out in epigrammatic expressions of her ideals-a wisdom and logic which if new to unprepared or untrained thought, is cer-tainly most convincing when heard from the lips of the forceful, conscien-tious and brilliant woman who exploits them. Mrs. Stetson's first words were in reference to the "News" reproduction of Mrs. Winnifred Black's alleged review of "Women and Economics," which appeared in the Denver Post recently under the title of "Only a Man." "Mrs. Black either has never read my book at all," Mrs. Stetson said, "or she has maliciously misrepresented and perverted its contents and meaning There is absolutely no truth in her statement that 'it tells all about how women have been put upon and abused and relates their crushing sorrows, and the awful humiliation and subjection of women, and it is as equally untrue that 'the book ends with an appeal to the downtrodden sisterhood to rise and throw off the yoke.' "The book is a simple statement of sociological and economic facts, and ends with the summing up of the ous factors that have created conditions described and the effects that might naturally be supposed to follow the es-tablishment of a new system of economy in daily life. "Mrs. Black's effort is simply one of those convulsive outcries that go up out of the mouths of a certain class whenever an idea is advanced that hints at the progression or independence of women. Such ideas, at their first intro-duction, have always caused terrific upheavals of scorn and ridicule since the world began, and the strange thing is that women use these ancient tools to tear down, at their foundation, structures which in time they may rejoice to dwell in. "Such criticism does no actual harm, however, save as it wilffully misrepre-sents the nature of my book. It is the misfortune of journalistic work that it often has to cater to special tastes, irrespective of personal conscience. Journalism is one of the most powerful factors in the enlightenment and progress of the world, and is on the other hand, a dangerous thing in the hands of the unscrupulous. The world is so big that we have only one way of coming to know and to be in touch with its denizens and doings and that is through the press. Important consequences often rest upon its reports and for that reason, journalists should be nobly trained and generously paid, and bring to their profession the honor of a judge. "My aim? I am glad to tell you, for many people think that I am trying to realize a hobby-to change existing conditions and "fix things up" myself, The fact is. I have no scheme whatever, I have simply observed and considered facts, and have written my deductions and conclusions, nothing more. It is simply that the thought of the world is ready for change and progression along economic lines, and I am working in the current of that thought and trying to help channel a way for its course The effort is not a "fad" nor a scheme it is a socialistic movement. In St Louis where the kindergarten system is most perfect, and supported chiefly by the State, after I had been lecturing one day, a little woman came to me with evident emotion and deep distress of mind and asked. "What! do you mean to separate children from their mothers and let the State take charge of them? It would be cruelly inhuman!" I pointed around me and said, "you have in-stitutions here where you send your children for five hours in the day, and the State takes care of them. Is it cruel or inhuman? Why should not children have places built for them where they may be surrounded with ob-jects to please and interest and educate them as well as grown people, instead of being left to pick up their knowledge and amusement at haphazard? Our mothers, worn out with the care of large households, are very glad to leave their little ones in some one's care for a few hours of respite-why not in hands of those carefully selected and trained for that

These things are being thought about, and will eventually re-sult in some system which will simpilify problems that have long been stumbling blocks in our domestic science. How it will come about I can-

In reply to a question in regard to her interest in socialistic ideals, chiefly those outlined by Bellamy and others of his thought, Mrs. Stetson said: "I am a Christian Socialist from beginning to end. Bellamy's plan for reaching the goal of socialistic thought may not be practicable-the 'nationalist' move-ment instituted in accordance with his ideas has already died out-but his ideas has already died out-but his books have been a mighty factor in spreading socialistic ideas; he was one of the waves of that great sea of so-cialistic thought whose onward sweep nothing can stop." Speaking of her im-pression as to the dominant thought and influence of the International Coun-cil of Women in London Mrs. Statson said: "Tit was chiefly and importantly economic. I suppose you have read Mrs. economic. I suppose you have read Mrs. Francis Lowe's criticism of the council for its lack of definite aim and purpose in coming together? Well, there reason why the gathering should have had a set purpose. The important thing was that thought on every con-ceivable subject should be brought out. Yet in spite of the fact that no special im governed discussion at the coun il it was noticeable that in nearly all the papers read there, the pre-dominating tinge of thought was economic. I confess it survrised me. economic. I confess it surfaced me. Yet it shows that the world is ready for the discussion and settlement of certain problems and nothing can stop the work from going on." Asked as to her plans for the future Mrs. Steison said that as soon as her measure hosture contrast was duffied present lecture contract was fulfilled she should go to California and commence her work upon a new book which will be upon her cherished subect-work.

Mrs. Stetson will lecture in Carson City and San Francisco, and will then take up her literary labor.

LAST SESSION LAST NIGHT.

The last session of the Young Men's Mutual Improvement conference of the Oneida Stake was held last evening, at which a new Stake superintendency was presented and sustained by the conference. The attendance was very large and an excellent spirit was manifested. The Improvement choir furnished delightful music. This was pronounced the most successful and enjoyable M. I. A. conference ever held in the Stake. In the afternoon a very pleasant officers' meeting of the Y. M. M. I. A. was held, at which over fifty effects were present. It was a strong officers were present. If was a strong force of fine, earnest young men. At the evening meeting Elder Geddes offered the opening prayer. Apostle George Teasdale made a very interesting address to the young people.

He showed clearly the difference be-tween a well spent life and one that is not well spent. "Virtue is always re-spected, vice is never respected. He who is slave to evil and vile habits is not leading a successful life. Be strong, have courage, shun evil. We want colonists. A successful farmer, a producer, is a useful man. That is what we There is no life that is nobler. The producers are the glory of the country. Take an interest in your farms and make them beautiful. In Mexico we are redeeming many waste places and our people are doing well. Become independent, become masters not servants, God bless you and give you strength to lay aside all evil habits and live successful lives." Apostle M. F. Cowley of the general board, was the next speaker. He referred to the excellent advice given by Apostle Teasdale, and said such counsel is substantial and practical and will make all of us better if we carry and it out. "It is customary for noted edu-cators to hold up before the young men for their limitators, the life of some worthy man who has been successful in accomplishing much. I think that the ideal life to present for the consideration of the young men and as most worthy of their imitation is the life of Jesus Christ. The great lesson that His life teaches us is that of obedience. Jesus never sought to do His own will Jesus never sought to do His own will but that of His Father. Every one has his free agency, to choose either the good or the evil, virtue or vice. I ask God to be with you in your labors." presented the names of the gen-Elder Le Rol C. Snow, of the general board, presented the names of the gen-eral and of the local Y. M. M. I. A. officers, and they were sustained by officers, and they were sustained by the unanimous vote of the conference. Elder Arthur W. Hart was sustained as Stake superintendent, with Joseph S. Parkinson and Ezra J. Merrill as his assistants. President Parkinson of-fered the benediction and the Y. M. M. I. A. conference was adjourned.
