

VOYAGE AROUND THE WORLD ON A LOG

Marvelous Trip of the Tilikum Which Left Vancouver Island, British Columbia, on May 21, 1901, and Arrived at Margate, Kent, England At the Beginning of This Month—The Story of the Skipper—Amusing Adventures Among Cannibals.

MOORED in the midst of a miscellaneous collection of small boats in Margate harbor is a curiously shaped little craft with three slim masts, from one of which the Red Ensign flies, says the London Daily Mail of Sept. 5.

She is the Tilikum, formerly the war canoe of an Alaskan Indian chief, who 4 years ago caused her to be hewn out of a single tree trunk.

In May, 1901, Capt. John C. Voss, a mariner well known in Canada, gained possession of the Tilikum, fitted her with three masts, and announced that he meant to sail her around the world. Friends and strangers tried to dissuade him from what they deemed a ridiculous and foolhardy undertaking.

"What! Circumnavigate the globe on a superior kind of log?" he exclaimed. "This thing is absurd!"

"Well—here I am snug in Margate harbor at the end of my journey. And here she is the Tilikum not much worse for having sailed round the globe. She has traveled 40,000 miles, and has taken three years, three months, and 12 days to do it. Here she is my mate, Mr. C. L. Harrison."

And the beery little skipper—a man of few inches, but incalculable grit—of a full youth with a strong jaw and a determined chin. Capt. Voss has stuck to the Tilikum throughout her last voyage, but Mr. Harrison is the fourteenth companion he has had.

"There have never been more than two men on board," added the captain. "In fact, there is barely room for two. One for five days there was only one man on board the Tilikum—myself."

HARD HIT.

Turning away to hide a suspicion of tears, the captain told how when 1,200 miles from Sydney a "southerly buster" struck the little craft and swept his mate, Mr. Begun, a Londoner, overboard.

"It happened at 11:30 at night," added the captain. "I have to sail quickly as possible, and shouted until dawn, but I never saw nor heard of Begun again. Moreover, he had carried the compass overboard with him. A few days before we lost our anchor, which fouled on a coral reef. So here I was minus mate, compass, and anchor over 1,000 miles from Sydney. It was the first time I had been quite lost."

"I thought all was over, and did not care much. Being alone, I worried a great deal. I could not eat, and of course, sleep was out of the question. On the fifth day another sudden gale carried away the foremast. I recovered it and spliced it. The boat was pitching badly, and I had only two feet of slippery deck to stand on. I was just managing to put in the repaired mast when a big sea caught it, and over that whole thing went again. Once more I recovered the mast, and this time succeeded in raising it."

"That morning I had my first breakfast for five days. In the excitement of the toughest job I have ever experienced, I had forgotten the fate of poor Begun."

"One night, when within 125 miles of Sydney, I saw the lights of a ship that was bearing straight down on me. The gale was still raging so strongly that I could not keep the lamps on my little craft, alight. The oncoming steamer could not see me, and again I thought it was all over. But it occurred to me to step some rats in kerosene and make a flare. This the vessel saw and sheered off."

In verification of these and subsequent statements, Capt. Voss produced his log and numerous documents from foreign consuls, steamship captains, and other responsible persons. The log showed that the Tilikum is 35 feet over all, weighs two and a half tons, and draws only 21 inches of water—by far the smallest and swiftest craft that has ever voyaged round the globe.

PORTS OF CALL.

The log further indicated that the Tilikum left Vancouver Island, British Columbia, on May 21, 1901, and that afterwards the principal ports touched at were as follows:

Perth Island, Pac. Timaru, Auckland, Danger Island, New Hebrides, Thursday Island T.S., Redoubt Island, I. C. G. Durban (S. Africa), Newcastle (N.S.W.), Melbourne, Spitway, St. Helena, Pernambuco, Ponta Delgada, Madeira, Liverpool (N. C.), and Margate.

"I wished to put into the Cocos Islands in the Indian ocean," proceeded Capt. Voss, "because an old lady in Nelson, New Zealand, had entrusted me with a fruit cake which she had made for her son, who is employed at the cable station in the Cocos. But unfortunately the wind failed, and the currents drifted me out of my course. At this time there was only eight gallons of water to serve the mate and myself, and we were 2,000 miles from the next port. Consequently we had to live on oats dipped in water."

The captain's experiences in the cannibal islands of the Pacific would in themselves make a remarkable book of adventure.

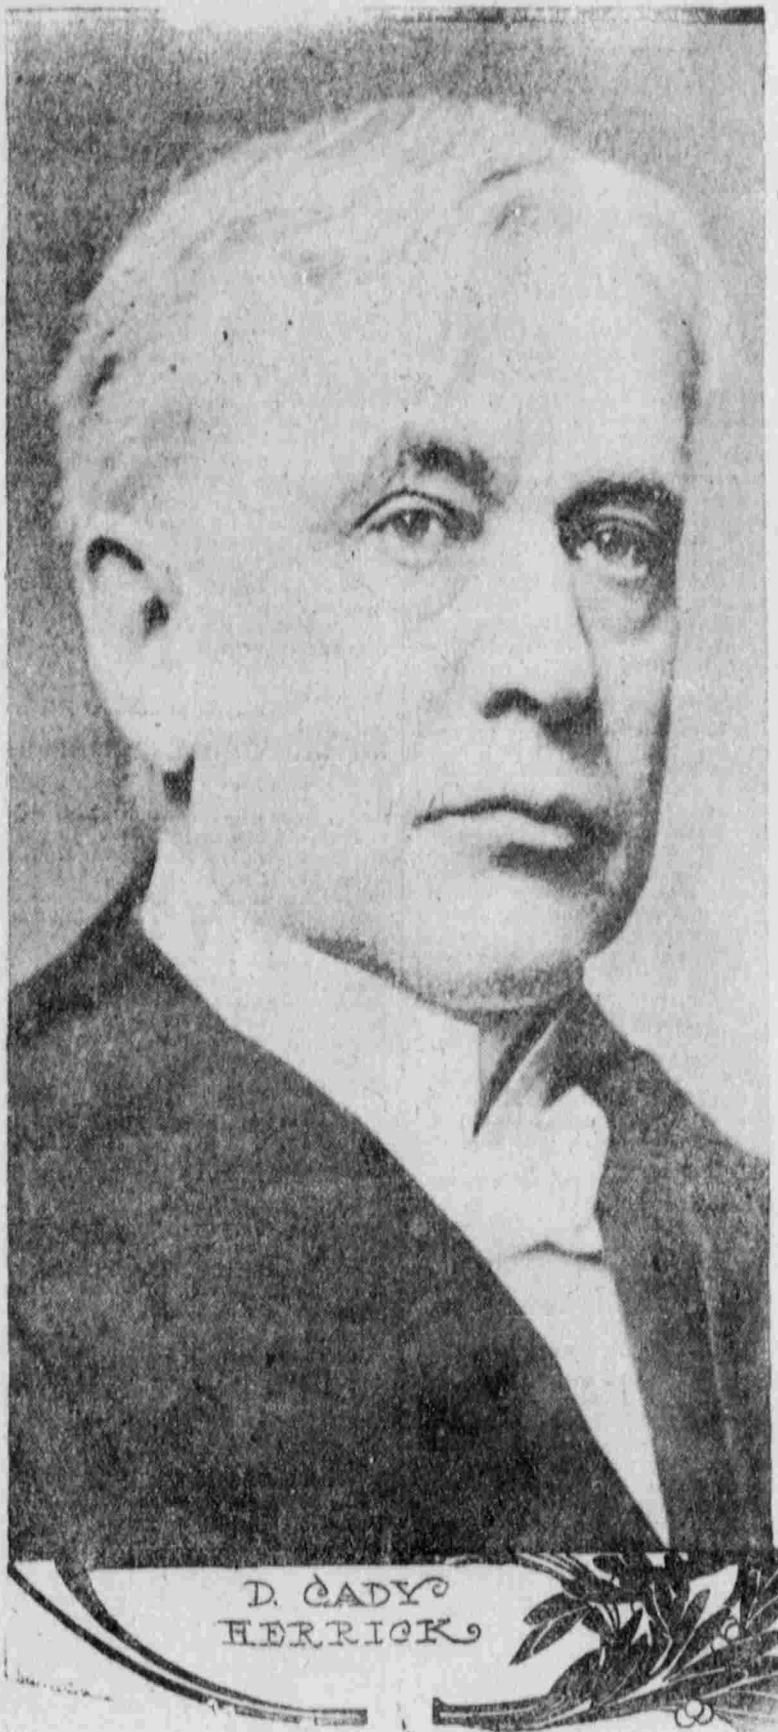

"At the time of my arrival at the New Hebrides," he said, "the natives great reception. The king of Manahiki entertained the mate and myself to a banquet, 'his majesty' and the household sitting at a little distance watching us eat. Although there were only two of us, enough food was supplied for 200. In the center of the table was a roasted pig that weighed about 150 pounds. Native girls came in two by two and placed gaudily-decorated straw hats on our heads. No sooner had one girl thus crowned us than another came in, until there were between 20 and 40 hats on the floor.

"The mate jokingly declared that he would embrace the next girl who thus decorated him. The king requested that the mate's words should be interpreted, whereupon he laughed uproariously, and whispered to an attendant. Much to the mate's chagrin and the general amusement, a very old wizened woman hobbled in with his next hat, and the king commanded him to carry out his promise. The mate, however, declined.

"Yes, the king of Manahiki was very hospitable. He even offered two of his daughters in marriage to the mate and myself. But I respectfully explained that I was already married, and the mate swore he would be true to the Australian lass he was engaged to despite all the kings of Humphrey Islands.

DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE FOR GOVERNOR OF NEW YORK

D. CADY HERRICK

The Democratic party of New York has demonstrated that they can sink all factional differences for the sake of success at the polls and have nominated a strong man in Justice Herrick. Justice Herrick is undoubtedly the choice of Judge Parker, and he will do much to help the national ticket in the Empire State.

had slain a woman. A missionary went to protest against their conduct, whereupon the wretched creatures beat him off with the bones.

"The islands of the New Hebrides are just as brutal as they were 200 years ago; but I learned that the rite of burying the chief's widows alive in their husbands' graves has been abolished."

GARGANTUAN BANQUET.

"The Humphrey Islands gave us a

"Penrhyn is a notorious cannibal island," Captain Voss proceeded, "but strict moral laws prevail there, 'but strict moral laws prevail there,' was antedated during our stay on the island and at seeing a young native man and woman walking hand in hand through the village, and all the other men, women and children pelting them with old tin cans, coconut shells, and stones. I ascertained that they had been seen out together the previous night after 10 o'clock. A rule that everyone must be in bed at that hour is strictly enforced."

Upon a small uninhabited island on the eastern side of the Fiji group, Capt. Voss found a human skeleton, near which lay an old gun. There were indications that the man had fallen a victim to cannibals; but the captain asserts that the worst of cannibals will not now inflict that terrible fate upon white people. He has in his possession the skull of the unfortunate castaway on the nameless island.

The Tilikum, it is understood, will be publicly exhibited in London, and Captain Voss will probably be asked to lecture before the members of several learned societies.

AESTHETIC ITALIAN LABORERS.

With the exception of the silent Sicilians, the Italian immigrants are generally fluent talkers and extremely intelligent. I have known a Neapolitan who could neither read nor write, quote from Dante, Petrarch and Tasso. It surprises you to hear a group made up of an asphalt-mixer, a sailor turned waiter, and a barber and baker, who had stuck to their trades, discuss the sculpture on a new court building; or when upon another night, the same men wrangle over the merits of Verdi and Mascagni, and end by humming and singing in chorus "Parigi O Cara."—The World's Work.

Stands for "Some people don't like us." It's a fact, and there's no use beating around the bush about it. We collect Bad Debts from Dead Beasts. There may come a time when we will be awarded a prize at the state fair for the best exhibit of Bad Debts Collected; if so you want to come and see the exhibit. We will guarantee an exhibit that will interest the most languid and cause smiles of approbation to ripple over faces that haven't rippled for years.

Here's a sample of a few we collected last week:

WE COLLECTED $125.00

In gold last week, for William Kirkup of Franklin, Ida. It was an old torn and battered note, had to be pinned to itself.

WE COLLECTED $35.00

last week for Mrs. Anna Liddy, for room and board from a skip out R. R. man.

WE COLLECTED $29.95

last week for Castleton Bros., for a grocery bill seventeen years old. The man that paid it gave he'll hire us when he has a hard case to fight and wants to win it.

WE COLLECTED $64.00

last week for W. J. Robinson of Grantville. It was a 10 cent fourteen years of age. Had two aunts in court over this and won both.

WE COLLECTED $75.00

last week for Jacob Aures from a man in Oklahoma. The man was his friend years ago and Aures loaned him the money.

WE COLLECTED $115.00

last week for The Murray Mercantile Co. from a man who went into bankruptcy. We had two fights in court over this, but we won in both courts.

Does anybody owe you? Do you want the money? If so write or call on us. If we did not know we could collect your bills we would not be spending $10.00 this year for advertising. This ad will bring us Bad Debts to collect. We will collect them and make commissions thereon. Don't think your bills are too bad—but send them in.
