THE EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday. - - April 29, 1873.

The Great Consular Inspector; or the Would-be Methodist Pope.

What kind of man is Dr. Newman?—so writes one of my fairest correspondents. This I know, because she curled her capitals, and blackened her eyes, and left a perceptible color of new mown hay in the half sheet of foolscap. Thrifty goddess, behold the doctor!

He is a lusty fellow to wrestle with angels, and would break down Jacob's ladder if he set his foot on it to climb to Heaven. He weighs upwards of 200 pounds, and his hips, thighs, back, and belly are adapted to fight at the doors of fairs on free admission days. A certain kind of oil is resident in his skin, which oozes out in that gracious sort of perfume peculiar to people of professional holiness. His hair is of a fine brown color, worn long, and his features are large, effective, and without sensibility. Broad-shouldered, of good height, well dressed in his broadcloth, with a flash of gold somewhere about his watch fixings, and forwardness, worldliness, and visible goldliness all over him,—such is the hyperbole of a preacher.

The clerical office is upon occasion the most needful and healing which a man can fill. It brings the oil of balm into the households of people bereaved, and, when physic is done, doctors the mind and heart. The ladies-ed fellowship of a true man in the ministry how well we know when we have felt his hand upon us, saying, "My brother, take heart! There is a higher life than this." For the sake of this great remedial and refining office, and to protect it against presumers, the press of the country has, almost with unanimity, condemned the whole course of ostentatious and intriguing procedure of Dr. Newman.

At the centennial celebration of American Methodism, it was resolved to erect at Washington city, a church with the grand Latin title of the Metropolitan—a word which much reminds us of the Roman phrase of the Metropolitan see. To record with this ambitious edifice, a Metropolitan preacher was demanded. He came to his work with the ambition and unscrupulous assumption of a Jesuit—which word I use in its critical sense, for some of my acquaintances are of the Jesuit order, and have much more humility than Dr. Newman. The new clergyman immediately set to work to depopulate the neighboring churches? He took off the chief justice from Wesley chapel, and Mr. Colfax, who was possessed with the Presidency, came over from the first Presbyterian. The building was domineered over by a noisy chime of bells. The tower, which had been begged by one of the sisters from an old gentleman at Baltimore, was ostentatiously inscribed Kelso's Spire. The interior was adorned with cedar of Lebanon and Shittimwood, hauled from Jerusalem. The preacher appeared to begrudge the choir all the time they spent singing, and wanted to do the whole performance himself. He got himself speedily elected chaplain of the senate, and the amount of eloquence which he did on week days was stupendous for to see. His sermons were of the most modern character, with a Mansard roof on top, and a mortgage in the rear. He charged them with assumption like a vase of soda water. To-day he thundered at the newspaper press, and the next day covered President Grant with oil in a prayer to Jehovah. He instructed the senate as to its duty, asked the Lord to give simplicity of wisdom to the chief justice, and alluded to the equinoctial storm as the booming "simoom." Determined to be made a bishop, he undertook the office-brokering for the brethren—some of whom, be it said, would rather collect taxes for Cæsar than be gate-keepers in the house of the Lord; and, at this point, the chief fugleman of the Metropolitan See got into newspaper correspondence. He fastened upon President Grant like a horse-leech—this term seems to be appropriate both to the leech and the horse—and, skimming the horizon for a point of sensation, the Reverend Doctor concluded to convert the Mormons. Properly advertised, he moved in a caravan upon those devoted people. His march across the country resembled that of a menagerie, and all the animals, from the monkey to the alligator, were represented in this grand transcontinental fantasy. Of course he made religion ridiculous.

* * * * Failing to accomplish anything, Mr. Newman returned to Washington, and, with unparalleled meanness, proceeded to operate upon the government and have the Mormons persecuted.

He has been routed in his insidious and audacious attempts to be made a bishop. His influence in congress has come to be less than zero. His endeavors to keep the Metropolitan church, to the prejudice of the general rule which limits a Methodist preacher to three years' local occupation, has been so far a failure that I am told bishop Simpson expressed his disgust; and Dr. Tiffany, a later incumbent, was so annoyed by Newman's attempt to undermine him that he compelled the trustees, about one month ago, to put the question to vote before the congregation, and every soul in the house stood up and put a final quietus upon this ambitious clerical demagogue. Newman then retreated into politics, and begged from President Grant the sinecure office called inspector of consulates. His wife was appended to the appointment, under the name of Mr. F. Newman, with an additional salary.

Such has been the career of a man with plentiful talents and no humility. He is irrepressible, and plenty of churches would be glad to get him; but it is respectfully submitted to the board of bishops that he lacks the sense to turn this government into a theocracy. His heft and girth would justify him in applying for the sergeantcy-at-arms, where he might come near enough to the example of St. Peter to cut off the High Priest's ear.—"Gath" in Chicago Tribune.
