Williams, in advocating the motion, characterized the tax on provisions as "flummery," and a "tub thrown to the whale," to deceive farmers by pretending they came in for their share of protection. As a farmer he scorned it. Nobody was going to import hogs into Indiana, wheat into Californie, or terraphas into North Carolina. This duty did not benefit the farmer in any way.

Bayard's motion was lost—syes 11, noes 28.

The provision schedule having been disposed of, schedule H, II, quors was laken up and some progress made, when the Senate adjourned.

Several motions for adjournment were rejected, and the chamber, 282 to 115, decided to continue string American Industry. The great hall was so crowded that it was almost impossible to find standing room. Feter Cooper presided, assisted by Wm: E. Dodge. Among the vice-presidents were Hamilton Fish, John Jacob Astor, Hon. Edwin D. Morgan, A. A. Low, Whitelaw Reid, Jesse Seligman, Hou, John Jay, Hon. Wm. H. Roberts, Russell Sage, Clinton B. Fish, Hugh J. Hastings, Hon. Seth Low, David Dows and John H. Starin. Mr. Coper said he was glad to see the acention of the American people fixed on the question of free trades and protection. The free-traders of alher countries have tried to persuade us to adopt their teachings. Should they be adopted our mechanics would be forced to work for starvation wages or abandon their trades and become competitors of the agricultural laborers of the country. Free trade in England produced wretchedness among the working people and gave them barely sufficient to maintain life. The effect in America would be similar.

Wm. E. Dodge followed. He said it was time to let the country and the turn of the Prince's friends would soon come.

Wm. E. Dodge followed. He said it was time to let the country know what they meant and what they meant to do. Labor was made to believe capital was its oppressor, when it was its protector. Capital don't need protection as much as la-protected. The late elections have proven, if they have proven anything, that the people are to be the masters; that extravagance and wilful misuse of public money by public servants must be stopped. These were the only two points emphasized by the voice of the people at the late election. The question now comes whether in reducing the revenues of the Government the tariff system shall be so arranged as to benefit our own industries or the industries of foreign countries.

An address to the public of the board of directors was read and resolutions passed sustaining a tariff for the protection of American industry

Madier De Montjoy, Republican, urged the immediate expulsion of all Princes.

The general debate on the government's proposals was declared closed, and it was decided, 396 to 134, to pass to the discussion of Fabre's compromise bill.

Andreaux, republican, proposed an amendment, rubstituting for the first clause of the bill depriving the princes of civil rights, a declaration of the rights of men, proclaiming all citisens of the republic equal before the law, and eligible to all offices according to their capacities. Andreaux was loudly interrupted by members of the Left. He did not admire little Robespierres and St. Justs, who produced the blood-stained page of history.
