marched up and down the deck of the steamer, which was pitching and roll-ing heavily, I noticed the yawls which hung from the davits were half full of rain water. I determined to have a wash, and slipped below and got a towel and a piece of fresh water soap. But I found it a tough job. Just as I would get my hands into the fresh water in the boat, as I leaned over the gunwale, the roll of the steamer to leeward would swing her away from me. And there I han to walt, leaning half over the side, until the roll the off she would swing again, just giving me time to dip my fingers into the rain wash my hands, so made up my mind to make a beld dash for a clean face. I put the soap down, scooped my hands to gether and waited for the return of the yawl, determined to scoop up some rain water and throw it over my face. The steamer somehow stopped rolling for a few seconds, and began pitching, with the yawl just a few inches out of

TWO OF THE CHILDREN .- A little with the yawl just a few inches out of my reach. Leaning over the gunwale I made one supreme effort to reach the water in the yawl. But unfortunate-ly, at that very moment, the steamer rolled the way I had not expected, and girl who had spent the five years of her life in a very retired place in the country had never happened to see a colored person. She loved to be out of doors; indeed, spent the most of her time playing in the yard, but she before I had time to express an opinion never would keep a hat or bonnet on about it I found myself several fathoms her head, and her mother often told her she would grow black with sun-burn. A cousin who visited them about that time had some photographs under water. I had pitched over the gunwale and slipped between the side of the steamer and the yawl. As soon as I realized the situation I was imwith her, and among them was one of a little colored child. Graci-, looking

An official who was sent to the spot gives a doleful account of the desolation of the region in question and the difficulty of procuring food. The country, he says, is covered with snow in winter to the depth of 10 or 12 feet, and "in summer and autumn there is a species of insect which fills up people's noses, making life unbear able." There are no roads, and to supply military protection for the well failed me too. In another mosupply military protection for the miners would be a serious matter.
