

HOW TO BECOME A GREAT HITTER
Champion Baseball Player Tells Secret of Batting.

GEORGE STONE'S ADVICE. Explains Just the Way to Swat the Leather With Wagon Tongue—Down to a Science.

George Stone, champion batter of the American league, and considered by many the greatest batter in baseball today, has told in his own words the essentials of becoming a good batter.

When a ball player attempts to tell other players how to bat, he is up against a pretty difficult proposition. Right at the start he runs against the fact that natural ability makes a whole lot to do with it.

But there are a good many things that will help even a poor batter. The most important is to have confidence in himself. If he comes to the plate thinking, "This pitcher is an easy one, he has the chances are away in favor of getting a good crack at the ball."

He should always keep his eye and hand in good condition by the right kind of exercise. The four hours are not in the same day with base hits.

Following the ball all the way from the pitcher's hand to the bat is a very important thing. Trying to get a line on where the ball is going by picking it up with the eye when it is part way to the plate is confusing.

TAKES LONG CHANCES. I occasionally go after a ball that is not directly over the plate. If a hit is secured it sometimes pays to charge. A ball may be just wide enough to force the umpire to call it a ball and go on to a few feet.

Another system that I use and which I notice several other players using is what I might call "looking the ball square in the face." To do this I have my eyes almost directly on a line with the middle of the plate. Then I watch the pitcher as he winds up. I feel the ball the instant it leaves his hand.

As soon as it begins its course my eyes are glued on it and my bat is drawn back ready to strike, whether it is a good or a bad ball. I do not allow myself to be thrown off by a ball that is not directly over the plate and yet I know which are good and which are bad from a long angle.

Another point that ball players should develop is springing. I trained for months and still keep it up. A fast man will make a great deal of money a season, just by being speedy enough to beat the ball to first base.

IS NATURAL BATTER. I think batting is natural for me. I could always hit the ball, even when I was a manager at Elkhart. I was not used to be a fielder, but batting was a gift of nature.
