

The Japanese embassy, which with servants included was listed at $10,000 for three months, she has forfeited all this and there is nothing to show that she is even endeavoring to sublet the place. If she were to consult her own wishes Lady Ross would not trouble much about the London season, and it is remarkable that on the first occasion when she proposed to do something brilliant she should meet with so sad a disappointment. When she was summoned to the automobile club—where her husband met with his accident by slipping on the stairs—Lady Ross is said to have observed: "I had a premonition, my dear, that the London season would not be a lucky one for us." It is only lately that Sir Charles took to motoring. Heretofore he has always preferred the saddle as his means of recreation. Since he became a member of the Automobile club he has been a substantial contributor to its funds and to prizes for amateur and professional racing, but he is opposed to anything approaching "scorching" on the public roads. Recently when a diphthery test run was in progress between Land's End and John o' Groats, Sir Charles joined the party when it touched Bournemouth, his charming place in Scotland, and traveled with it to the end of the journey. He was so delighted with the trip that he bought a car and joined the Automobile club.

GEN. EVANS HAS RETIRED.
H. Clay Evans, who relinquished the American consul-generalship here the other day, has practically retired from politics after a long and varied career. In discussing his future plans, Gen. Evans told me that after spending a month for recreation on the continent, he would settle down in the city of Washington, where he resided so long, first as congressman from Tennessee and later as commissioner of pensioning. While the retired was born in Green county, Wis., he has made Tennessee his home for over 40 years. His business interests are extensive in Chattanooga, where in the principal owner of the Chattanooga Car & Foundry Co., and where he has a magnificent home, which he will visit from time to time, although he will not again resume active business life.

Callender, the New York man who discovered the secret of making paper and boards from Irish peat, and who is now conducting a prosperous business in this connection in Ireland, a party of Americans who appear to be conducting business with pleasure were shown over a large tract of land comprising some 800 acres in the west of Ireland, on the 31st inst. Some time ago it was reported that traces of gold, lead, copper and other minerals were found in the region referred to, and it was to test the accuracy of the story that Mr. Callender invited his friends to make a sort of superficial exploration. The party included William T. Thompson of New York and Theodore James Jeffries of San Francisco, two gentlemen who have had wide experience of mining affairs both in the United States and South Africa. They took away with them some samples of rock and surface soil, but declined to express any opinion as to what they thought might be the result of their investigations. The tract of land in question, the estate of Lord Magheramorne and adjacent to Kilmore Castle, the seat of the Duke of Manchester.

IN CASE OF ACCIDENT.
So far as known, King Edward has never yet run over anyone in his motor car, but if he should at any time hereafter, the estate of Lord Magheramorne and adjacent to Kilmore Castle, the seat of the Duke of Manchester, would be the first to be notified. The king has just started a new fashion of carrying in one's car a little case containing everything necessary for rendering "first aid" in case of accidents. "A friend in need is a friend indeed," surmounted by a crown, is the inscription upon the front of the silver case which holds this royal "first aid" kit. The box contains eight numbered compartments. It is carried in a case of royal blue velvet, and has on the lid detailed drawings corresponding with the numbers of the compartments. The contents include an india-rubber tourniquet to stop bleeding, several pairs of forceps and scissors, antiseptic swabs, gauze and bandages, a variety of pastes and powders for dressing, and a bottle for brandy. The whole outfit, however, weighs only five and a quarter pounds. It would be an edifying sight to see his majesty down on his knees by the roadside engaged in patching up some luckless individual whom he had managed to bump into with his Panhard!

PHILANTHROPIC MARQUESS.

Although the present Marquis of Salisbury is a long way from being the intellectual equal of his famous father, he makes up for it with a kindness of heart which was not numbered among the qualities of the late marquis. The former master of Hatfield concerned himself but little with the troubles of his tenants, but since he came into his inheritance the present marquis has made it his business to visit every cottage on the estate and to find out how its inmates were getting on. The other day he visited for the first time an isolated little cabin occupied solely by an aged widow. Lord Salisbury introduced himself and the old woman at once inquired if he had come for the week's rent. She said that the last week was the first time during 27 years that she had not been able to pay it and she implored the nobleman to give her a little more time. Finally the marquis managed to make her understand that he was not after his due and learning that she paid about a dollar a week in rent, gave her some money and told her not to worry about the debt. A few days later the widow got a notice from the estate offices telling her that her rent was reduced to a shilling a week for the rest of her life.

HALF A QUID FOR A KISS.

The story of how an amorous London stockbroker was "had" by a pretty Salvation Army girl is being told with great gusto in Throgmorton street and Mayfair. It was during "self-denial week"—just gone by—that the attractive "soldier" came into the merchant's office and asked for a donation. The broker offered half a sovereign for a kiss. The girl agreed, but got no money. Then she offered him the back of her hand to kiss! The story goes that the broker was so much impressed that he yielded up another half sovereign.

petition to the fountain of all honor, the king, "for a lawful hearing and inquiry into these things." For," he adds, "if such trifling be approved or rewarded with undisturbed success, of a truth other of your majesty's subjects may quickly follow the same methods of acquiring property in England."

CAVE WILL TRY AGAIN.
Gladwin Clives Cave, an English lawyer, is going to have another try for the earldom of Newburgh. He first instituted proceedings to establish his claim in 1884, but failed then because his chain of evidence was not complete. Since then he has been lying low and conducting a still hunt for documentary proof. Now he has gleefully announced that he has found all the missing links, principal among which is a birth certificate, and is prepared to do legal battle again for the title and estates—especially the latter. It is somewhat odd that the present earl is an Italian nobleman. His name is Sigismund Nicholas Venantius-Gaetano-Francis Giustiniani Bandini, and he has a string of titles equal by long. He is a prince, a duke, a count and several other things in his own land. But his most precious title is the English earldom because its estates in Derbyshire are worth about $300,000 a year.

CURIOS AND COMPLEX.
The case abounds in curious complications which there is not space to tell here. The second Earl of Newburgh died in 1694 and as he left no sons the title and estates were inherited by his daughter Lady Charlotte Maria Livingstone. She was twice married. Her first husband was a son of Lord Clifford of Chudleigh. By him she had a daughter from whom the present earl is descended. Her second husband was Radcliffe, who laid claim to the earldom of Derwentwater and got his head chopped off for high treason in 1746. Mr. Cave bases his suit on descent from the eldest son by the second marriage, which he maintains gives him a better right to the earldom than can be obtained through descent from the daughter by the first marriage. The trial will involve rich pickings for peerage lawyers however it turns out.

THORNTON BRYCE.
GLASGOW CAN SHOW CHICAGO.

Special Correspondence.
GLASGOW, April 28.—People here are rather skeptical as to what will be the results of the municipalization of Chicago's street railway system which has just been decided on. To make a success of such a project demands honesty above all things, and rightly or wrongly the notion exists here that that qualification is conspicuously lacking in most of the men who run things politically in the big American cities. But it is acknowledged that there is no one better fitted to show Chicago folk how a big city should operate its street railways than James Dalrymple, the manager of the Glasgow Corporation tramways, who has been granted leave of absence that he may accept the mayor of Chicago's invitation given for that purpose. He is a Scotchman of the best type—a man of the highest integrity, shrewd, level-headed and a prodigious worker with a gift for organization. Glasgow is immensely tickled over the compliment that has been paid her.

Ancient witchery was believed in by only a few but the true merit of Dr. Wills' Witch Hazel Salve is known by every one who has used it for boils, sores, tetter, eczema and piles.

Joseph H. Choate and Equitable Life Suits.

Special Correspondence.
LONDON, May 3.—It can be stated that the Hon. Joseph H. Choate soon will be available for consultation purposes as to the legal standing of the policy holders in the Equitable Life Assurance society. When I saw him yesterday, Mr. Choate declined to discuss the matter at this time, for diplomatic reasons, but I am able to state that while no definite understanding has been reached the matter will be considered by all parties interested as soon as Mr. Choate returns to the United States.

He is booked to leave England on May 12, which is the date of his recall. He states that he will never return to the active work of his profession, nor has he any idea of forming a new legal firm because of his age. He is now 73, and has decided to withdraw into privacy as much as he can and still have something to engage his attention. His future legal occupation, therefore, will be only as advisory counsel in specially selected instances. Mr. Choate will spend this summer at his country residence at Stockbridge, Mass. He has made no plans whatever for his place of abode next winter or the extent to which he will accept professional engagements. The fact that Mr. Choate leaves on May 13 and his successor, Mr. Reid, arrives on April 28, disposes entirely of the story, published in New York, that Mr. Choate would take revenge upon Mr. Reid for the latter's reputed act in delaying the confirmation of Mr. Choate's appointment as ambassador to England, by not retiring from his post here without pressure. This, however, Mr. Choate emphatically denies, and it is pointed out that the formal transfer of an embassy is not a political measure so much as one of courtesy and custom.

Can't rest at night with a bad back, a lame, a weak or an aching one. Doan's Kidney Pills are for bad backs.

They cure every form of kidney ill. From common backache to diabetes. They are endorsed by Salt Lake City people.

Mrs. John M. Child, wife of John M. Child, retired, of 25 north Fifth West street, says: "My back ached so that I could not sit still without placing my arm across my joints and leaning against it for the night relief this makeshift position afforded. If I awoke at night I dreaded to change position for I knew the moment I attempted to turn agony followed. I had little confidence in Doan's Kidney Pills when they first came to my notice, for I had tried plasters and kidney remedies unsatisfactorily without receiving any satisfaction, so when a box of the preparation procured at the F. J. Hill Drug company's store brought relief and a continuation of the treatment was followed by the greatest improvement in my condition, it is little wonder that I very emphatically endorse the remedy." For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-McMillan Co., Buffalo, N. Y., sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.
