GRADED SCHOOL.—The fall term of Karl G. Maeser's graded school and evening classes opens Monday, September 2nd, in the 20th Ward school house. Brother Maeser will be assisted in his educational labors by a competent corps of assistants. From our knowledge of that gentleman's ability and understanding of his profession we can confidently recommend him to parents wishing their children to receive a respectable education. It will be seen by his advertisement that his terms are moderate. His evening classes present a fine chance for grown up boys and young men, as well as young ladies, to improve their time in acquiring useful knowledge.

GIVE IT PUBLICITY.—W. Woodruff, President of the Deseret Agricultural and Manufacturing Society, requests the leading citizens, in the various settlements throughout the Territory, who receive packages of pamphlets containing list of premiums, published by the Society, to oblige the Directors by distributing the same to their neighbors and friends, as it is desirable that the utmost publicity should be given to the pamphlet.

POLICE COURT.—This morning Cora Conway, Kate Flint, Sady Hulbert and Nellie Hutchison were before Justice Clinton on separate charges of keeping houses resorted to for immoral practices, Mr. Hoge for the City, and Messrs. Spratt and Field for the defendants. A large number of spectators were present in Court.

The defense moved for a further continuance of the cases, on the ground that Mr. Reid, who had been retained for their side, was unavoidably absent. The court did not deem the grounds sufficient, as the time for the trial of the cases had been arranged and agreed to by the defense, and the motion was overruled.

Mr. Spratt moved to dismiss the proceedings, on the ground that the crime charged against the defendants came under the provisions of a Territorial statute, and therefore the ordinance must be void, being in conflict with the general statutes of the Territory.

Mr. Hoge read the statue referred to, and also the city ordinance, and showed that that they were not identical either in language or substance. He also stated that the matter had been decided in the District Court, by Judge McKean, in a case which had been taken before the latter on habeas corpus, he ruling that the city had the right to make the ordinance in question, and to punish criminals brought within the scope of its provisions.

Mr. Spratt's motion was overruled, and the first case, that of Kate Flint, proceeded with.

After the examination of one witness, Mr. Spratt said the defense was willing to admit that the evidence was sufficient to justify the Court in imposing a fine.

Mr. Hoge said it was not for Mr. Spratt, but for the court to decide what was or was not sufficient evidence. He was willing the case should rest, providing the defendant plead guilty. The latter not being willing to plead guilty, further evidence was taken, it being clear and conclusive in proving the charge against the defendant, and after it was given both parties were willing to rest the case, and as the ordinance not only provided for the fining and imprisoning of those found guilty of violating its provisions, but stipulated for the abatement of the premises kept by such parties, Mr. Hoge asked the Court for a writ of abatement in the case.

An elaborate discussion then followed between Messrs. Spratt and Hoge, the former contending that before an establishment could be abated, the owner thereof must be notified of such intended action, and be proceeded against separately from any other charge, and the latter maintaining that, according to the ordinance, a place is a nuisance which was resorted to for immoral practices, and abundant proof had been given that such was the character of the premises kept by the prisoner. The Court had the right to say what the law was in the matter, and to adjudicate accordingly.

The Court said he would hold the case under advisement for the present, and proceed with the others.

The case of Cora Conway was the next in order, the evidence with regard to her guilt was equally clear as that of her predecessor.

It was stated in behalf of Nellie Hutchison that since she was fined, a few days ago, she had closed up her house and sent her furniture to the auction rooms to be sold, and the same plea was entered in the case of Sady Hulbert.

At the conclusion of the examination of witnesses, counsel on both sides agreed to rest the cases.

In summing up the Court said the community demanded, as the hands of the city authorities, the abolishment of such establishments as those kept by the defendants. It had been demonstrated that the imposing of fines was not a sufficient remedy. The disreputable business in which the defendants were engaged was being carried on with increased boldness. This, he presumed, was the result of the encouragement it had received. Eleven cases, on one occasion, had been before the court at one time, but all the defendants were discharged by Judge Hawley. He was glad to say, however, that Judge McKean had sustained the city in the matter, by deciding that it had the right to make the ordinance, and to proceed under its provisions. As fines alone had failed in decreasing the evil he would impose a fine of $15 each on Kate Flint and Cora Conway, and order that their establishments, being nuisances, be abated. Nellie Hutchison and Sady Hulbert were discharged.

Two parties of officers then proceeded to Commercial St., one going to the establishment of Kate Flint, number 17, and the other to that of Cora Conway, number 41, and demolished all the furniture, fittings, &c., within those premises, a large crowd gathering on the street in front of the houses while the officers were thus engaged.

Philadelphia has just launched the Pennsylvania, the first steamer of the new Philadelphia and Liverpool line. The line is to consist of four first-class propellers, all on the same model, and the three which are to follow will be named the Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. These steamers are designed to afford accommodations for eight hundred steerage passengers, and contain twenty-four choice staterooms for first-class passengers. In addition, they will have an immense freighting capacity. The merchants of that city feel a just pride in their promising enterprise.
