

DIVORCE MILL'S WEEKLY GRINDING

Wife Seeks Separation. Man Goes
To Jail. Threats to Another.

GRIST HAD VARIATIONS.

No Two Things Were Matched Before
Judge Morse Yesterday—Jones
Decree to Stand.

Four divorce proceedings came before Judge Morse yesterday afternoon, one wife and one husband applying for legal separation, while a modification of a decree was asked for in one case, and in the fourth a man was sent to jail for failure to pay alimony to his former wife, as the court had ordered.

Elizabeth Hendry told how that for a number of months her husband, John M. Hendry had failed to provide the necessities of life for herself and children. Corroborative evidence was introduced, and the plaintiff's prayer for divorce, permanent alimony, the homestead and the custody of the children was granted. The Hendrys were married at Ogden, Feb. 8, 1888.

Nettle Woods was granted a divorce from James P. Woods, upon the ground of non-support. Mrs. Adeline Stewart, mother of the plaintiff, testified in her daughter's behalf. The defendant is a railroad man.

WIFE DESERTED HIM.
According to the evidence of Fred Carpenter, substantiated by Oscar Rollins, his wife, Sarah Carpenter, deserted him Aug. 21, 1905. They were married in Blaine county, Idaho, in 1892. A divorce was granted to Carpenter.

July 2, last Sarah Parsons was divorced from R. A. Parsons, and on Oct. 31 she was married to a Mr. Jones. The ex-husband yesterday asked Judge Morse to modify that portion of the decree wherein the plaintiff was permitted to have custody of the children. As a ground for this request, Parsons alleged that Mrs. Jones is not a proper person to have charge of her offspring. He alleged that improper relations had existed between his ex-wife and Mr. Jones before they became man and wife. These charges were positively denied by Mrs. Jones. Her two daughters, Blanche and Florence, expressed a desire to continue to live with their mother, and Judge Morse refused to modify the decree.

CUMMINGS SENTENCED.
Mrs. Eva W. Cummings complained that alimony had not been paid by Charles Cummings, from whom she was divorced a short time ago. Cummings was in court, and when asked by Judge

Morse if he had made any endeavor to pay the amounts due, replied no. He was promptly sentenced to five days' imprisonment in the county jail for contempt of court. The amount that Cummings is delinquent is $34.95.

Brooks W. Holliman was also accused of failure to pay alimony. He was not in court, and had told the complaining witness, Mrs. Ivy V. Holliman, that he didn't care if they did send him to jail. If Holliman does not pay $20 alimony and $25 attorney's fees by Nov. 25, he will be in contempt of an order made yesterday by Judge Morse.

Ed States courts, while under examination yesterday made a statement to the attorneys regarding the color that had been given his testimony in the press reports. He declared that he wished to go on record as saying that while he pointed out to Stutz, Clark and Major Bird the location of coal deposits, he did not suggest in any way to them the use of "dummies" in making entries. The attorney stated that this would not be necessary, because they had put no such construction on his testimony.

SHARP CASE AGAIN.
May Be Seeking Additional Evidence Against U. P. Coal Company.

From the names of several witnesses appearing before the Federal grand jury, it would appear that that body is inquiring more deeply into the case of D. J. Sharp, a former coal dealer of this city, who, it is claimed, was discriminated against by the Union Pacific Coal company, ending in the dissolution of the firm. This case was first investigated by the Interstate commerce commission while in session in this city.

KIRKER MAKES STATEMENT.
The case of Sissam against the United States Smelting company will probably be concluded in the United States court Monday adjournment having been taken yesterday until that time. At adjournment the defense was introducing testimony and it is believed they will conclude soon after the session is resumed.

SMOKE CASE NEARS END.
Witness R. J. Kirker, who is before Master in Chancery S. H. Lewis in the circuit court room of the United States court.

known to thousands. He was always affable and obliging.

He was connected with Z. C. M. I. as traveling salesman for many years and has a host of acquaintances—friends every one of them, and these friends are going to give him a rooming benefit. About a year ago Mr. Gibson met with an accident that paralyzed his left side. For many months he was helpless and now, though he is able to work his left arm is still paralyzed. He is one of the most popular members of the Elks' lodge of this city and members of the order will take an active part in the program. The juvenile band, Hugh Douglass, Horace Ensign and other local celebrities will take part in the entertainment. All who know "Jimmy" are anxious for his complete recovery and they are going to show by deeds their high regard for him.

If the benefit is not a huge success, and if the house is not filled to its capacity it will not be the fault of Mr. Gibson's friends.

THANKS.

The old folks committee thanks Mr. Florence of the Elks moving picture theater most sincerely for his generosity in furnishing four free separate entertainments for the old folks, widows and orphans of this city, which were much appreciated, and wish him success in his effort to furnish an enjoyable entertainment.

COMMITTEE

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cottrell announce the engagement of their daughter Alice to Lewis James Bowers, the wedding to take place the early part of December.

The dancing party given by the Sophomore class of the university last night was a distinct success. The decorations were in the school and class colors, the red and white and blue and white being seen in flags, pennants and other details, and in every thing the college colors prevailed, sofas piled with college cushions, and other devices transforming the hall into the semblance of a cozy "frat" or sorority house. The party was chaperoned by members of the faculty and about 150 were present.

A new dancing club has been formed with the membership limited to 50, the initial dance to take place on Nov. 22. The patronesses are Mrs. Lewis A. Evans, Mrs. Elbridge Thomas, Mrs. Wallace Bransford, Mrs. Rebecca M. Jresden, Mrs. Fred C. Dorn.

Mr. and Mrs. Morton Chessman leave today for a European trip.

Parker for the Philippines. The red, white and blue prevailed in the decorations and in the evening game, cards were used decorated with soldiers and drums, and other military emblems were seen. The flowers were chiefly in bronze chrysanthemums. Prizes in the contest went to the guest of honor and Mrs. F. U. Leonard.

Mrs. H. C. Edwards entertained at a luncheon yesterday the decorations being in pink chrysanthemums and covers laid for eight.

Miss Edith Edmunds entertained at a beautifully appointed luncheon Friday afternoon in honor of Miss Audine Gann, covers being laid for six.

Miss Mayme Convey entertains this evening in honor of Mr. W. W. Allen, who is in this city for a few weeks.

WILL ILLUMINATE "U."

The students of the university have arranged to illuminate the big "U" on the hillside above the campus. In past years in case the Utah boys are victorious in the football game with Boulder this afternoon. The signal will be made with red torches, with which the big letter will be covered should victory perch on the "U" team banner. If Boulder wins the letter will remain dark. Time by which the letter was supplied with municipal water at a rental of $100 a year. The city wanted the state to pay at a meter rate. A satisfactory agreement will doubtless follow yesterday's deliberations.

UNIQUE HOT WATER SPA

THE THERMAL WATERS OF
AN ARKANSAS TOWN
HAVE MADE IT KNOWN
TO ALL THE WORLD

Western Slope of Hot Springs Mountain

Hot Water Drinking Fountain

Bath House Row

RECENT publication of the report of Dr. Herman Schlundt, professor of physical chemistry in the University of Missouri, confirming and emphasizing the earlier report of Dr. A. E. Bollwood of Yale university to the effect that the waters of Hot Springs, Ark., show reactivity to a marked degree, serves to call wider public attention to this unique watering place. The remarkable but mysterious curative properties of these hot waters have been known to white men for more than 450 years, since the springs were discovered by the celebrated explorer De Soto in 1541, but until the recent discovery of radium in the waters and in the tufa deposits which they make of the base of Hot Springs mountain the scientific world knew nothing definitely as to the secret of the wonderful cures of various human ailments effected at Hot Springs. Now it is believed that the newly discovered element, radium, supplies the magic curative power.

Aside from this highly interesting scientific analysis and deductions, the Arkansas hot springs are of unique interest. There is no place in the world possessing so large a list of unusual features, topographical, geological, climatic, aerial and otherwise, as the city of Hot Springs, which has grown up chiefly within the past thirty years around the famous thermal springs which since 1882 have been owned absolutely and irrevocably by the United States government and operated under the authority of the interior department. This fact of federal ownership makes Hot Springs a national sanitarium in itself, is enough to set the Arkansas watering place in a class by itself, for no other healing springs are owned by Uncle Sam.

The Hot Springs reservation of 361 acres was the first national park created by our government seventy-five years ago the authorities at Washington became convinced that these hot springs, which had been known to the Indians from time immemorial and had fallen into the hands of white "squatters," should of right belong to the American people as a whole. Accordingly an act of congress set apart this reservation, "dedicated to the people of the United States to be forever free from sale or alienation." The tract being designated as "a national sanitarium for all time." This act was now for the fact that the healing waters may be benevolently appropriated by anybody who needs them without having to pay holdup prices such as would be exacted if the springs were owned privately and operated as a private monopoly.

Purified by Fire.
Hot Springs is a city of approximately 20,000 people, having almost doubled in population since the last census. Two important things have happened in the Arkansas spa since that census was taken. Two and a half years ago a very considerable portion of the city was burned to the ground. Like the great Chicago fire, it was a blessing in the end. That district already is rebuilt with modern structures, giving the town a much better appearance than it had before. The other big thing that has altered the aspect of Hot Springs is the knockout blow dealt to gambling within the present year. It was a five years' fight to win this battle on the part of the reform element, led by the Rev. W. T. Amis, a Baptist preacher of fighting qualities.

The people of Hot Springs are now wondering what will be the effect upon the town for the coming winter season of the closing of the seven well-known outside, possesses a large store of gambling houses, which have not been paroled to exterior circulation.

A Knockout for Racing.
The Amis law passed by the last session of the Arkansas legislature was the knockout blow. Now the great Oklahoma racing park, built by Dan Stuart and his associates at a cost of $500,000 and undoubtedly one of the splendid racing plants in the United States, lies idle, having lost three winter meets. It is claimed by the prearranging contingent in the Hot Springs population that the coming winter will witness an appreciable falling off in the number of visitors because, as they hold, "those who came for the races and the games, the people who spend the money, will not come." This element, therefore, predicts hard sledding for Hot Springs hotels, boarding houses and other institutions dependent upon the winter visitors. It should be remarked that the winter time is the "season" at this resort, running from about the beginning of the year to the middle of April—three months of throngs, probably 100,000 people visiting the springs during that period.

There who fought the gambling and horse racing declare that they have no fear as to the effect of the anti-gambling law. "The people we want, the substantial people, who come down to spend a quiet week or month and who in many instances have been kept away heretofore because of the presence of the rowdier element—they will be here this winter in big bands. Watch for 'em!" So say the reformers.

But Hot Springs has a considerable number of visitors both for health and for pleasure at all seasons of the year. With two exceptions all the hotels are open the year around. One of the exceptions is a house accommodating a thousand guests. The other accommodates 500. Two other houses which never close have capacities for 100 guests, while there are hundreds of smaller hotels and boarding houses—considerably more than 400 actually listed by a recent city census.

Water of All Kinds.
Most of the people visit Hot Springs, of course, "for the water." As a prominent local physician expresses it, "And there are all sorts of water, hot and cold. Originally there were seventy-two hot springs flowing from the western base of Reservation or Hot Springs mountain. Some of the springs have been eliminated by combining two or more, while others are lost in the little creek that flows through the valley. At present there are nearly fifty hot springs in use, all flowing from a space less than half a mile long. Other mountains, very like this one, rise abruptly to west and north, but they produce no hot springs. They give forth cold water in abundance of varying mineral qualities, which the citizens exploit and sell to the utmost limit. Certain of these cold springs, according to competent physicians, are highly beneficial in treatment of human ailments.

Bathhouse row is the central point of interest to the tourist in Hot Springs. Twenty-three big bathhouse establishments, privately owned but operated under United States regulations as to charges and the use of the hot waters, supply the city with its chief asset—hot baths. Most of these houses are on Bathhouse row, which is the eastern side of Central avenue. The rest of the bathhouses are connected with hotels elsewhere located, the hot water being piped thither underground. Some of the springs pour water at 133 degrees F., which must be cooled down to the proper bathing temperature. The combined hot springs flowing from the western base of Reservation or Hot Springs mountain aggregate 500,000 gallons daily.

Across the street from Bathhouse row are business houses, hotels, physicians' offices, post card and souvenir shops, and what not. Here flourishes

Moderate Charges For Baths.
The highest price permitted to be charged for a course of twenty-one hot baths is $4. From this maximum the prices scale down to $1. The government maintains a free bathhouse for the indigent and also a bathhouse in the splendid army and navy hospital perched up on a flattened site in the side of the mountain.

Walks or drives over the mountains serve to help pass away the time and to give exercise and the exhilaration of delightful views of scenery. The government has built eleven miles of splendid mountain driveways. Every year these roads are being improved and extended. The reservation superintendent, Martin A. Kiehl, has charge of all the government property and is Uncle Sam's executive boss of Hot Springs. Recently one of the bathhouse managers refused to discharge at the demand of the superintendent a negro bath attendant who had been convicted of "drumming" for a physician in violation of the law. The United States of America immediately shut off the hot water supply from this particular bathhouse, thus putting it out of business until such time as it may decide to comply with the regulations and "be good."

the "Hot Springs diamond," which grows nowhere else in the world. Near the city is a mountain of crystal "diamonds" weighing a hundred pounds and more are hauled into town by the wagon load. Local lapidaries cut the stones to real diamond shape and when so that the expert is required to detect them. Mounted in rings or studs, these "diamonds" may be purchased at an average price of $2 per karat. For $5 one may buy a real headlight or a magnificent sunburst. Uncle Sam has not taken possession of the diamond mountain. Anybody can mine diamonds there.

Central avenue, where the "diamonds" flourish on one side and the hot water baths on the other, is the only thoroughfare running between West mountain and Hot Springs mountain. The valley is so narrow that the buildings on the western side of the avenue in many instances are built sheer up against the mountain side. Some of the hotels use the mountain as a cheap and safe escape from the third and fourth floor windows, the lower stories of the house being set in a cut in the mountain.
