being the source of many citis in our midst - such as panperism, crime, disease, etc., the inference of course being that none of them would flourish in the land but for the agencies named, saving at this juncture among other things that "Not long ago, the rapid influx of Asiatics ofau exceedingly degraded character, accustomed to habits of life and addicted to practices revolting to civilized peo-, ple, provoked an agitation which resuffed in the enactment of restrictions that if rigidly enforced would practically exclude Chinese immigrants from these shores." The parity sought to be established here is that anything which a capricious civilization may flud objectionable in any respect should . also be excluded, and as there is an objection to some phases of "Mormon-1sin." members of that religious faith should be served with a notice to land elsewhere. The connection be tween the Sun's premises and its concindons is not apparent to a conse reader and thinker, for in one breath it objects to immigration because of its bringing disease, pauperism and crime, and in another narrows down and confines its objections 1) "Mormon" immigrants, and to them not because they are immigrants but because they are "Mormons!" Inconsistent, absurd as such a style of moulding popular sentiment is, that is just the way it appears in the columns. quoted from as further on, the Sam asks "whether it is not time to apply to the Mormon immigration the same sule which was adopted to protect the people from contamination with the vices of the Chinese hordes"-that is,
