SCIENTIFIC MISCELLANY.

Rattlesnake poison is the singular remedy for leprosy brought forward by Dr. M. de Moura, of Brazil. A na-tive belief is that a survivor of rattlesnake bite is proof against this disease, and he has carefully pressed the poison glands and administered it to fifteen leprons patients-to some internally and to others in the form of a sub-cutaneous spray. The results have been so favorable that he is convinced the prefected treatement will become a genuine cure. A distinguished German pharmacist, while admitting that this conclusion may be justified, points out that the snake poison in quanity kills lepers as easily as other persons.

onsider the situation and transacted all its business in executive session. It is known, however, that Councliman Jones introduced a resolution calling on the city engineer for an estimate for a new waterworks system of the extent covered by the present sys-ter, and capable of sustaining 170 pounds of pressure, the estimate to cover the entire cost of everything in the way of material and labor. The purpose of this, it is said, was twofold: First, the council, or a portion of its members, contemplate the construction of such a system; second, it is still hoped that some method may be found to compel the sale of the present system to the city at the actual cost price, in accordance with the terms of the original franchise.
