UTAH WOOL RATES DISCUSSED

J. A. Munroe, freight traffic manager Winter Quarters could have conceived the scene which is witnessed during our conferences. There had never been a for the Union Pacific, and T. M. Schu. macher, acting traffic manager for the lisagreement between the presidency of Oregon Short Line, this morning rethe stake or the High Council. They met regularly in the Temple. The High Council was composed of faithful and intelligent brethren. He stated also that it had not been necessary to wait viewed the local wool situation with the result that Mr. Munroe will take all the steps in his power to have the rate on wool kept down within the old $2 limit. When seen this morning the gentlemen stated that the matter would be taken a minute to organize the High Council. The High Priests and the Elders have improved in their diligence and faith-fulness. Many of the latter had been up with the eastern roads who made the advance of 18½ cents, and they hoped when the business was placed in fulness. Many of the latter had been sent on missions. He was gratified with the way in which the young men laid aside their occupations and went on missions. He felt that it was a great evil for so many of the poor to come to the city. The Church had to be called upon to sustain the poor. He thought that many of these might, to good ad-vantage, go into the country. As a rule, the proper light regarding the western situation that some satisfactory agreement would be arrived at.

This is in line with the action taken at the meeting with the Idaho Wool-growers' association, which took place in Boise on Thursday when the wool-men met with Messrs. This part of the country had suffered from scarcity of water and from a grasshopper plague. Nevertheless the tithing of the people had failen but a little. Regarding the raise in the wool rate as first printed in the "News" a month ago, the woolmen are very outspoken. "If the western roads insist on keeping the rate up and not absorbing the 18½ cents recently raised by those lines east of St Louis we cannot underlage to Louis, we cannot undertake to fight them; we will simply take the ad-ditional freight expense out of the pockets of the growers," declared Mark Harris this morning. The woman was charged with murder in the first degree and her trial was set for today. When she appeared in alt court this morning and the case was called by Judge Morse, District-Attorney Eichnor, addressing the court, announced that the defendant had agreed to enter a plea of guilty to murder in the second degree. He said that such a plea would be satisfactory to the state provided it was satisfactory to the court. The woman was then in-structed to stand up, and was asked by the court if she desired to withdraw her former plea of not guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree.

Capt. E. A. Wedgewood, who, with C. E. Marks, represented the defendant, nade a strong appeal for leniency and asked that the minimum sentence of 10 years be imposed. He referred to Vie-toria alley, where the crime was com-mitted, as a "hell hoie" in the very mitted, as a "heil hole" in the very heart of the city, under the shadow of the courthouse and the police station, He said that, of the many robberies and other crimes which had been com-mitted in that alley in the past num-ber of years, only two of such cases had been prosecuted, and, therefore, the state, county and city are, to a great extent, morally responsible for great extent, morally responsible for such conduct as this, because these peosuch conduct as this, because these po-ple have not been taught by the po-lice department that such things are uteral it cannot make her think for a minute that she was wrong. That she cher-ishes the memory of her erstwhile "exercises," in "cutting in" on saloons, is indicated in the unique and entirely characteristic way in which she intro-duced herself to Zion. She stepped off the train from the west at 10 o'clock this morning, with a little satchel sus-pended at her side. The first thing she did was to delve down into did was to delve down into this grip and bring forth a handful of little "silver" hatchets as souvenirs of her calling. She announced to the unsuspecting people who she was, but a smile of incredulity played on every countenance until she produced the handful of little hatchets. There was ne more doubting. There was her trade mark, her brand, her insignia and her title to greatness, and these show began to sell at 25 cents each. They were soon all gone and she strode away with the air of one who had "smashed" saloons in her day, and was liable to treak out again at any minute.
