

RUSSIA WILL CONTINUE THE WAR

Her Answer to Defeat at Mukden Is Announcement of a New Army Will Be Raised.

ROJESTVENSKY TO MEET TOGO.

Would Agree to Peace if Japan Would Recognize Her as the Power in The Far East.

St. Petersburg, March 12, 2:10 a. m.—The immediate answer of the Russian government to the defeat at Mukden is the announcement that a new army will be raised and the forces in the far east reorganized; that Vice Admiral Rojestvensky will be ordered to sail on and try conclusions with Togo, and that the war will be prosecuted to the bitter end.

This is the present temper of Emperor Nicholas and his dominant advisers, voiced in a firm official announcement that the position of Russia is unchanged and that the initiative for peace can only come from Japan. Should the Russian empire choose to tender "moderate" terms and recognize its adversary as the power in the far east, peace could be easily arranged.

The voice of her diplomats, however, in various parts of the world, indicates that she is not ready to do this, and the Russian government, with the full magnitude of the disaster at Mukden still unknown, but with the 1905 campaign seemingly inevitable, and the retreat to Harbin inevitable, and the Vladivostok practically lost, declares that the time has not yet come when Russia can be forced to humble herself. It is reported that the dispatch of the fourteenth army corps, including the fourteenth from Poland, and several smaller units, has already been determined upon, and that plans for further mobilization are in progress.

While this is the official attitude, nothing but peace talk is heard in St. Petersburg. The difficulties of another mobilization on a large scale will be enormous, in fact, it is stated in some quarters that it will be impossible. Nevertheless, it might be accomplished.

The real hope, however, for anything like a successful termination of the war is attributed to rest upon the prospects of the financial exhaustion of Japan. Russian resources, it is figured, can stand the drain better than those of Japan, and a protracted campaign it is hoped will bring about Japanese financial ruin.

Financial Minister Kokovoff at the conclusion of a conference of the national finances a few days ago, is said to have tapped the table before him and exclaimed: "We can win the war at this desk."

The Russian capital is still in ignorance of the nature and extent of the reverses in Manchuria. The only information of its magnitude is that which has been derived from the Tokyo telegrams that have been allowed to be published here.

To the censor at the press the word "prisoner" does not exist, and not only the Japanese and organizations have been sent off and captured has reached this city either in Gen. Kuropatkin's official dispatches or in reports from correspondents at the front.

Aside from the reports given out by the war office there is practically no further information of the progress of events, the newspaper dispatches received yesterday being principally those filed before the retreat began and transported to the press among the papers of the telegraph office.

It is declared that at the moment Gen. Kuropatkin was ordered to retreat, that storm and taking advantage of the failure of several Russian organizations to occupy appointed positions, drove him deep into the Russian flank, and that he was forced to retreat, and that he was on the point of launching a momentous counter-stroke; but where or how it was to be accomplished is not stated.

Gen. Kuropatkin has telegraphed to Emperor Nicholas, assuming himself all the responsibility for his defeat, and excuses except that the strength of the Japanese army was so great and refusing to place any of the blame upon the council of generals, upon whose advice he determined to give battle.

This manly course and the general's personal exertions in directing the retreat will, however, hardly save him. His reputation as an offensive strategist is gone and though the emperor's military advisers know of his resignation for a better general, his resignation will be accepted.

It is difficult to find a capable successor, but it is said that he probably will be Gen. Gromov, governor of the Amur, although in casting some military officials are turning to Gen. Dragomirov, who is considered to be Russia's greatest strategist, but he is a feeble old man, suffering with heart affection and it is highly improbable that he would be able even to make the long trip to Manchuria.

In losing Gen. Kuropatkin the army will lose the idol of the private soldiers, an officer who, in spite of the intrigues of his generals and his failure to win a battle, has won their confidence and affection.

VERDICT OF GUILTY IN CHADWICK CASE

Charged With Conspiring to Violate United States Banking Laws.

JURY WAS OUT TWO HOURS.

At First Defendant Failed to Grasp Meaning of Verdict, but When She Did She Collapsed.

Cleveland, O., March 11.—Mrs. Cassie L. Chadwick was tonight found guilty of conspiracy to violate the United States banking laws by conspiring to procure the certification of checks on a national bank when there was no funds in the bank to her credit. She was found guilty on every count of the indictment upon which the jury was at liberty to judge her, seven in all.

The indictment contained 16 counts. Two of these were ruled out during the trial by Judge Taylor, one of the remaining 14, one-half charged her with securing the certification of checks without having the proper entries made on the books of the bank.

Judge Taylor, in his charge directed the jury to disregard these counts and consider only the remaining seven, which related to the certification with no funds in the bank. On all of these the jury found her guilty. According to the law she can be fined on each count not more than $10,000 nor imprisoned more than two years on each count.

The jury left the courtroom at 3:33. It was announced two hours later that a verdict had been reached and that the jurors asked to be taken out to dinner. Word was sent to Judge Taylor and he set 3:30 p. m. as the time at which he would appear in court to receive the verdict. The jury went out at 4:15 and returned at 7:30.

Court was opened promptly at 8:30 and the verdict read at 8:33. Mrs. Chadwick came into the courtroom about five minutes before the jury. She was accompanied by her son and two trained nurses. She sat in the seat she had occupied during the trial and rested her face in the palm of her right hand—a position she held almost constantly throughout the sessions of the court.

At first Mrs. Chadwick failed utterly to grasp the meaning of the verdict. She is slightly deaf and Clerk Carleton read the verdict in a tone so low that it was nearly inaudible. As the people around her began to move and talk, the prisoner grasped the fact that her fate was decided. She cast a quick glance at Judge Wing. "We have lost, Mrs. Chadwick," he said.

This time she realized it. She turned half around to look at Emil Hoover behind her and saw a confirmation of the words of Judge Wing. She flushed deeply and raised her hand in a bewildering fashion to her head. Suddenly her limbs seemed to give way beneath her and she sank feebly into her chair. Her head fell forward on her hands and a succession of straining sobs came from her, while Emil and Judge Wing sought vainly to comfort her.

"The government moves for sentence, your honor," said Dist. Atty. Sullivan.

"I desire to enter a motion for a new trial," said Judge Wing. "I will at a future time set a date for the argument on the motion for a new trial," said Judge Taylor, "and I presume the matter can rest until that time."

"That is satisfactory to the government," said Mr. Sullivan.

Judge Wing bowed a silent assent and stepped back to the side of his distracted client. Mrs. Chadwick soon composed herself, raised her head, wiped her eyes and rose to her feet. Attended by Emil Hoover and the marshal, she walked steadily to the elevator. It was not there and in the slight delay most of Mrs. Chadwick's composure deserted her utterly.

She was carried into the elevator and was taken into the office of Marshal Chandler and placed on a sofa. An attack of hysteria followed and lasted fully fifteen minutes, the sobs and cries being distinctly audible in the hall outside. The two nurses were in prompt attendance and applied restoratives.

In about half an hour from the time she entered the marshal's office, Mrs. Chadwick was restored to comparative composure and was taken to the jail. From the time of leaving the marshal's office until the door of the jail closed behind her, she kept up a low moan, saying that was distressing to hear.

Dr. Chadwick declined to discuss the verdict in any manner. He has not been present at any during the trial and his first information of the result was from the press.

The pass is naturally a strong position, and it has been extensively fortified. It is thought that the Russians will rally there and endeavor to check the Japanese, who are rapidly advancing. The Japanese are already in touch with Tie pass.

BARK DAYS AHEAD FOR JOHN ALEXANDER BOWIE

Chicago, March 12.—Ominous signals of distress are hanging over John Alexander Bowie, the actor, who is now in the city.

Observers from the outside are reading in these signals impending disaster of some kind. Recent events in the city of the "Restoration Host" have some what shaken the faith of Bowie's followers. It was a hard blow the first of the year when Deacon Carl Stern and Mrs. Spelcher died. The prayers of the "first apostle" availed not to bring these two stalwart members of the church back to health and strength.

Mrs. Spelcher steadfastly refused to receive treatment from a physician. She trusted in the power and saving grace of Bowie, and her trust was vain.

Deacon Stern was Bowie's chief of police and commander of the Zion City guards. No one in the actor's colony was more valuable except possibly Deacon Barnard. With Deacon Stern's body was buried some of the faith and hope of the Zionists who followed him to the grave.

Scarcely had this evidence of Bowie's helplessness against disease and death been thoroughly weighed when Deacon Spelcher announced from the pulpit that the "first apostle" had power to raise the dead. This declaration was made at a very inopportune time. The memories of the Zionists went back to the funerals of Mrs. Spelcher and Deacon Stern.

Then came the resignation or dismissal of Deacon Barnard, financial manager of Zion City, the biggest, brainiest worker in the Bowie vineyard. When he passed through the gates of the town and turned his back upon Shiloh Hill another mud of faith was gone.

By this time the minds of the Zionists were fertile ground for the sowing of rumors. From Mexico, where Bowie is staying, came a story that the apostle was suffering with cancer. Deacon Spelcher from it. He tried to reassure his congregation by telling them Bowie would return in due time, that he was detained in Mexico by his plans for the establishment of a new Zion City. Still, many believed the reports that Bowie intended never to come back.

AFTER SPIDER WELCH TO MEET DANFORD

Latter Says He is Perfectly Willing to Take on Coast Boy.

THE SPIDER IS EXPECTED SOON.

The Least Weight He Will Do is 135 Pounds at 3 o'clock on Afternoon Of the Contest.

Every effort is being made to get Spider Welch of San Francisco to come here at once and sign up for a match with Bert Danford. A recent letter to a friend in this city, Red Sammy McIntire, Welch's manager, said they were soon to start east where he expected Welch could get some important matches in the lightweight division of the game, and that they would stop off in Salt Lake long enough for a match if there is anything doing here.

He was quickly notified after Danford's victory over Hamp that there would be something doing if he would come at once, and a definite reply is expected hourly.

In the opinion of most of the local fight fans, the card would be about as good as any that could be secured. Of course Welch would have an advantage over Danford in point of experience and ring experience, but the local boy has had quite a number of warm contests, and he would have an advantage over Welch in weight and strength. He has a terrific punch and seems to know how to land it. If the match is clinched, Danford will probably place himself under the direction of Willard Bean, and with such a trainer he should soon learn a great deal about the game. If the men are signed they will probably meet at catch weights and would enter the ring with Danford having a shade of probably four or five pounds.

If the bout takes place it will not be in the Pastime club rooms. The place is not desirable for such events, being too close and not really in a great hall. It will hardly accommodate the army of passers, but then, that system is being changed, and the new system, semi-officials came in bunches and nearly everyone of them was a fighter. They took the best seats in the house, and the result was that some who had paid to stand were crowded out.

The "News" that he purchased 120 worth of tickets, and yet he was compelled to stand to make room for those who had passed, but were not entitled to them.
