Parisian Charities—Taking Care of the Babies.

Among the manifold noble charities that go far to redeem the vice and voluptuousness of Paris none is more striking and pathetic than that which provides a safe and happy asylum for the infants of washing-women during the time when their mothers are engaged in labor away from home. This sweet charity owes its existence to humane and benevolent ladies, who many years ago felt the need of an institution that should relieve overtasked women from some portion of the care of their young children, and yet should not discharge them from all maternal obligations or separate them wholly from the little ones, whose gentle influence does so much to soften and hallow domestic life. The charity, commending itself as it does to every motherly heart, and appealing to its strongest instincts for generous support, has extended with great rapidity throughout Paris, and with the happy effect of diminishing mortality among poor children and of increasing the comfort and self-respect of their mothers.

As nearly as possible in the center of each district inhabited by the working population is situated one of these institutions, bearing the name of Creche, which signifies literally "manger," and refers to the humble cradle that received the Savior in his lowly birthplace in the city of Bethlehem. On the walls of the Creche is inscribed this passage of Scripture: "They wrapped Him in swaddling clothes and laid him in a manger;" and here in a large hall, lighted with many windows and enlivened with the songs of numerous caged birds, are ranged rows of little cradles hung with curtains white as snow. The doors are open at 6 o'clock in the morning, and the mothers as they proceed to their work bring in their little ones, which, with a parting kiss and caress, they deposit in the arms of their waiting nurses. Immediately on each baby's arrival it is rid of its poor, scanty garments, treated to a thorough bath and dressed in clean, comfortable clothes furnished by the institution. It is then placed in a cradle to rest and sleep, or it is left on the floor to roll and creep about on the soft matting.

At noon the mothers, in their hour of respite from labor, return to the Creche to cheer themselves and their little ones by the performance of the tender offices of maternity. As their footsteps are heard entering the hall the babies lift their heads from the cradles with smiles and cries of welcome, and with arms extended to meet the warm, loving clasp to a mother's bosom. Is it possible for a charity to conceive or create a scene of purer bliss?

Among the prosperous families of Paris it is felt to be a religious duty to assist in supporting the Creche, and an annual gift to the institution is never forgotten. Children are encouraged to contribute to it, and to present a part of their pocket money toward the endowment of a cradle, while little girls are stimulated to ply their needles in the construction of a wardrobe for some one of the destitute babies. Mothers who mourn over the empty cradle or cot in their own households find some solace for their grief by furnishing a cradle for a child of the poor, while mothers who are happy in the sight of their rosy offspring give from the overflowing of a grateful heart to this work of love and charity.

Each cradle is designated by a number, and bears the name of the one who has endowed and annually provides for it. Generally this name is that of some beloved child, who, living or dead, has inspired its mother to the gentle deed of charity. As a reward of well-doing, children are taken to visit the Creche that they may learn lessons of sympathy and benevolence from a most impressive and affecting scene. In ministering to helpless, suffering infancy they learn the beauty and the satisfaction of assuaging the miseries of the poor and the wretched of every age.

The services of all who unite in supporting the Creche are given gratuitously, except in the case of the nurses. These are paid for their daily attendance, and four or five of them find employment in the care of thirty babies. The mothers each pay two sous a day for the privilege of having their infants guarded and cherished during their working hours. By this small outlay they contribute something toward the support of the Creche, and retain a wholesome feeling of responsibility for the nurture of their offspring. When the labors of the day are over the mothers take their babies from the Creche to spend the night at home. Yet if the infants are ill, and likely to disturb the mother's rest with their restlessness, they are retained at the asylum, and the poor working-women are thus enabled to secure the sleep that is so much needed to sustain them in their life of toil.

Every day the Creche is visited by a physician who bestows medical advice without remuneration. The ladies who have the institution in charge also visit it daily to inspect the condition of the children, to note if they are regularly cared for, if the nurses are regular in their attendance and obedient to the rules of the establishment. A register in which all matters referring to the Creche are carefully recorded is kept open to the examination of visitors, and thus under the eyes of all interested parties the institution is regulated according to an exact and efficient system.

But the charity that Paris extends to the children of her poor does not cease with their departure from the Creche. When they have learned to walk and have been weaned from their mother's breast, they pass from the shelter of the Creche to that of an asile, where their health and comfort are amply protected, and their dawning intelligence is wisely developed. As they reach a proper age for study they are placed in the public schools, and from these they are taken in due course of time by a benevolent institution and apprenticed to a trade. When in old age they, by some misfortune become helpless again, they may once more seek the help of charity and enter one of the retreats provided for the aged and indigent. Thus from birth the poor children of Paris are kept out of the streets, and by the generosity of the rich are tenderly nourished, are given a rudimentary education, and are fitted to earn an honest living. But in the entire series of charities from which they benefit, their parents, except in extreme cases, are obliged to pay a trifle toward their support, while they always return when in health to spend the night at home. By this wise management family ties are never sundered, and the love of domesticity and of kindred continues to exercise its beneficial influences on the heart.

Hospitals for the sick are always free in Paris and so are the two immense retreats, Bicetre and La Salpetriere, in each of which 5,000 of the most indigent and degraded poor find a shelter. The pauper and the poor-house are almost unknown in France, as, by private and public contributions, a system of benevolence is sustained which provides for the wants of all classes of the sick and impoverished. Every amusement in Paris is taxed to aid in this great work, while among the prosperous it is esteemed a sacred duty to give freely and regularly in support of all charities. —Ex.

TRUSTEES' SALE.

WHEREAS, Parley P. Pratt, by his certain deed of trust, dated October twenty-sixth, 1874, conveyed to Lewis S. Hills and James P. Freeze, the following described real estate, situated in Salt Lake City and County, Territory of Utah, and particularly described as follows, to wit: Part of Lot five (5) in Block fifty-one (51), Plot B, Salt Lake City Survey, beginning at the south-west corner of said lot and running thence north six (6) rods, thence east ten (10) rods, thence south six (6) rods, thence west ten (10) rods to the place of beginning.

In trust, however, to secure the payment of a certain promissory note, fully set out in said deed of trust, bearing date of Oct. 26, 1874, for the sum of $300, with interest at the rate of one and one half per cent. per month; and whereas said principal sum and the accrued interest thereon is wholly due and unpaid,

And whereas it is provided in said deed of trust that should default be made in the payment of the said note or the interest thereon, according to the term thereof, then the said trustees might, upon the request of the holder of said note, proceed to sell said land for the payment of said note and interest and the expenses accruing by making such sale; and,

Whereas, Nicholas Groesbeck, the holder and owner of said note, has requested the undersigned trustees to proceed to make sale upon said deed of trust according to the provision thereof.

Now therefore we the undersigned, as trustees as aforesaid, at the request of the said owner and holder of the said note, and pursuant to the terms and conditions of said trust deed, do hereby give notice that we will sell, on Monday, the 3rd day of January, A. D. 1876, at 11 o'clock a.m. of that day, at the south door of the County Court House, Salt Lake City, in said Territory, the said land or premises above described at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to satisfy the principal and interest of said promissory note and the cost and expenses of executing this trust and making this sale

Rocky Mountain Pills.

A VALUABLE MEDICINE,

From New and Rare Medicinal Plants recently discovered in the Rocky Mountains!

PURELY VEGETABLE.

FIFTEEN years of earnest botanical research among these mountains and valleys have resulted in the discovery, not only of many new varieties of plants, but of new species, some of which have wonderful medicinal curative properties. By continued experiment their virtues have become known—and thus from extracts of these newly discovered plants are these pills compounded.

If properly used, they will cure very many diseases, pains and aches, and are more especially valuable in DYSPEPSIA, LIVER COMPLAINTS, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, and all cases of FEVERS, COLDS, URINARY AND KIDNEY DISEASES, RHEUMATISM, COSTIVENESS, HEARTBURN, DIARRHŒA, MUMPS, MEASLES, for PURIFYING THE BLOOD, and for many other diseases, and all cases of BILIOUSNESS and DISORDERED STOMACH.

On orders accompanied by the cash or postal order, I will send safely by mail postpaid, 1 box Pills for 25 cents; 1 dozen boxes, $2.50; 1 gross boxes, $24.00.
