OREGON SUGAR CO.

Figures of the Run Last Year by Its Factory.

A recent issue of the Observer, published at La Grande, Oregon, contains the following items regarding last year's operations of the sugar factory there. This is the company of which Hon. David Eccles, of Ogden, is the president. The figures, while small in comparison with those of the Utah factories, are quite interesting as showing the growth of the beet sugar industry in Oregon and the increased expectations for the coming year.

Notwithstanding that the sugar factory has been in operation in this valley for the past three years, we doubt if many of our readers fully realize the importance the beet industry is to us and what it will be in a few years.

During the season ending September 1st, the Oregon sugar factory paid for labor alone, over $24,000, averaging a monthly payroll of $2,000, during that same period $10,000 of seeds were received and paid for by the factory at the rate of $4.50 per ton, $42,500. The cost of the seed, preparing the ground, cultivating, harvesting and marketing was conservatively estimated at cost $25 per acre, as there were 1,750 acres in beets last year, the cost of growing, etc., was $42,500, now add these three items together and the total cost of the beet industry in this valley is $110,000, and is doing for the country:

Factory payroll.....$24,000

Amount paid for seeds.....42,500

Cost of growing beets.....42,500

Total.....$110,000

The above figures represent only the factory payroll or wages paid, not such items as taxes, time, freight, fuel and other things that are necessary in such large establishments.

On the above basis every acre in beets last year placed $5 in circulation, as the cost of growing, etc., was $25 per acre, and the amount placed in circulation this year was $42,500, the cost of growing, etc., was $42,500, now add these three items together and the total cost of the beet industry in this valley is $110,000, and is doing for the country:
