The constitutional points raised against the law by Attorney Moyle are, brief as follows: First, that the act is contrary to that clause of the Constitution of the Unit-ed States, section 8, article 1, which authorizes Congress to regulate commerce between the States.

Second—That it is contrary to section 3, article 4, of the Constitution, which provides that citizens of each State shall be entitled to the protection and immunities of the citizens of the sev eral States

Third-That it is contrary to section 1, article 14, of the Constitution, which provides that no State shall make and enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges and immunities zens of the United States, nor shall any State deprive any person or life, liberty or personal property without due pro-cess of law, to deny to any person with-in its jurisdiction equal protection of

The case is being prosecuted under the title of Jesse W. Smith and twenty-nine other Utah sheep men, as plain-tiffs, against Thomas G. Lowe, state sheep inspector for Idaho. The matter was brought to a focus by some of the above plaintiffs driving their flocks into our sister State, whereupon they were arrested under the gover-nor's proclamation. If the law in question should be declared constitutional Mr. Moyle says it will result in great loss to the sheep will result in great loss to the sheep industry of Utah, because it will sim-ply turn thousands of sheep back on to the dry deserts where they will starve, and that, too, right in the lambing season. Attorney Moyle, how-ever, has no fears as to the outcome being unfavorable to Utah's interest, as among the flocks seeking to enter Idaho it is claimed no scap exists and Idaho, it is claimed no scab exists, and therefore the law cannot be made to bar them. The wool growers all over the northern part of the State are anxiously awaiting the result of the litigation as their vital interests are at

A MAIL CONTRACT.

M. Little and Ephraim Hanks in a contract to carry the mail once a menth from Salt Lake to Fort Laramie. In August of that year he went out with the mail, accompanied by Alford Higgins, Dr. Bernhisel was Alford Higgins. Dr. Bernisel was a passenger on his way to Congress. Stories were then rife of a renegade band of Crow Indians with Chief Big Robber at their head, and that they were going through plundering everything that they could, with safety. Uncle Charlie overtook Prof. Jones, who with seven men were making sketches of the country. The former proposed to the artist that they travel on together for mutual protec-tion until they had passed through the dangerous part of the country. To this suggestion Frof. Jones expitedly replied if Mr. Decker was afraid of the In-dians he had better return to Salt Lake and send some one out who was not. The intrepid but discreet Uncle Charlie made a low whistle to himself and drove off. On approaching Deer Creek and Boxelder twenty-six Indians filed across the road. They made many dem-onstrations but your Uncle Charlie did not understand a word of the Janguage which he later became skilful in. The a passenger on his way to Congress which he later became skilful in. The Indians lassoed the mules and took the entire outfit down into a ravine, when the chief showed a slip of paper written the enter showed a sho of paper whiten by Mr. Vasques, the partner of Colonel Bridger. The note stated that the In-dians would be pacified with a few presents. Acting on the hint, supper was prepared and downed, and the red-skins said all was peace. but there was no peace. As soon as Un cle Charlie and his assistant began to hitch up, some made a rush for the wagon, where Utah's first congressman was holding up his hands and saying, "Please don't, Mr. Indian," the others made for the two young men and at-tempted to tear the clothes from their body. Alford Higgins though was a good slugger and as often as an Indiag yould come within reach he would land a blow on his head that would send him sprawling. This was kept up unti about ten had been knocked down, and as each Indian went plowing his head into the ground his comrades would laugh heartily. At this juncture a squaw that was in the party went running down the hill giving the alarm that other white men were coming. Be-ing thoroughly frightened the dusky marauders let the coach go on and they retired. But it was only Professor Jones and his party, and as soon as the In-dians saw how many there were they returned and stripped them of all they had on, giving in return the meagre
