OGDEN SOCIAL NEWS.

Ogden, Sept. 22.—The leading social event of the week was the party given last evening by John Greenwell at his residence, No. 815 Twenty-fourth street. In honor of the baseball club of Ogden, John is the favorite among the playing boys, and as the season's baseball is about at an end and the Ogden team was successful in winning the State pennant he thought the best way to celebrate their success was to have a good social time together, and they had one not soon to be forgotten. Miss Johnson, one of Ogden's popular pianists, entertained those present with delightful instrumental music, and a few hours of real merriment were spent. An elaborate supper was served in the dining room. Those present were: Misses Hill, Torgerson, Brown, Folkman, Wright, Backman, Smith, O'Hornet, Mrs. John Greenwell, Mrs.

Handford, Mrs. Henry and Messrs. Glinin, Handford, Horn, Whipple, Clark, Plake, Casey, Henry, Bluth, John Greenwell, Cochran, McGregor, Chas. Greenwell Jr., and Dell Madison.

The home of Miss Lizzie Rackham No. 656, Twenty-seventh street, was the scene of two merry parties this week.

The first one took place on Tuesday evening, the Sunday school children of her class giving her a very pleasant surprise party. The evening was spent in various pastimes, after which luncheon was served. Thursday evening Mrs. Rackham arranged a very delightful party in honor of her daughter. An evening of merriment was spent in music, recitation games, and other pleasures. Misses present and furnished many beautiful musical selections, after which refreshments were served. The parties were given in honor of Miss Rackham, who departs next week for Lehi City to take charge of a millinery establishment. Those present Thursday evening were: Misses Katie and Lizzie Hart, Lizzie Lockhead, Bessie Houlcher, Sarah and Zina Larkin, Inga Anderson, Lillian Lockhead, Lottie Stevens, Lizzie Rackham and Mrs. F. Rackham Messers, Bert Wilcox, Mervine Russell, Charles Em-day and Tuesday. Mr. Porter has been in the southern part of the State on political business.

Prof. R. R. Lyman, of the State University, visited in Provo on his return from Richfield.

Mrs. Reed Smoot is visiting relatives in Salt Lake City during this week.

Mrs. Silverwood, of Salt Lake City, is a guest of Mrs. S. S. Jones.

The boys and girls of Provo are invited to the Baptist church Wednesday afternoon where Evangelist Rozella will entertain them. His topic for the afternoon will be "How to Catch Monkeys."

Attorney Joshua Greenwood, of Fillmore, Millard county, was busy in Provo Wednesday and Thursday with court matters.

Stephen L. Chishman, of American Fork spent a busy day in Provo Wednesday.

The many friends of Miss Laura Christensen will be pleased to learn that she is regaining her health after a seven weeks' spell of typhoid fever contracted while in New York. Miss Christensen was traveling alone when she was taken sick and was removed from the hotel to a French hospital where she has received every possible attention.

Mrs. Brooks, a noted Christian Scientist of Idaho, is a guest of Mrs. George Craig.

Mrs. S. S. Jones was the recipient of a pleasant surprise party Saturday evening, Sept. 15. The event was planned by Mrs. Walter R. Pike. The evening was spent with music, recitations, etc. A bounteous feast was served in the dining room.

Apostle Reed Smoot addressed the congregation at the State Tabernacle Sunday afternoon. His remarks were given especially to parents, warning them against allowing children to see the performances now being carried on at the theater by the "hypnotists."

Mrs. Alice Smithers and sons, of Texas, leave Provo Monday to go to Ogden for the winter. Mrs. Smithers was advised by her doctor three months ago to try Utah's climate for her health, which we are pleased to state has benefited her very much. Since coming here she has made many warm friends who dislike very much to part with her.

Mrs. David John, Jr., returned Sunday from Selma where she spent six weeks ago to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Thompson.

Miss Beulah Bachman and Miss Florence Twelves, with companions, spent Sunday at the Telluride power plant in Provo canyon.

The many friends of Mrs. L. L. Nunn will be pleased to learn of her return to Provo after a three months' absence in New York.

Mrs. Jacob Evans went to American Fork Sunday to attend a reunion of relatives in honor of her sister who has lately wed, and who will soon leave to make her home in another part of the State.

Bishop Leonard spent Sunday in Provo. Episcopal services were held at the new church.

CLUB CHAT.

The annual meeting of the Utah Federation of Women's clubs will take place October 25th, 26th and 27th, and club women are anticipating that the event will be the most important in the history of the local organization. In addition to the local participants, the program three distinguished and talented women, Mrs. Bertha Baker, Miss Carrie Bridwell, contralto to Sembrich, and Mrs. Lydia Avery Coombly Ward, president of the Chicago Woman's club, will take part in the meetings. Mrs. Kunz Baer will be personally remembered for her clever reading of Cyrano de Bergerac in the Congregational church last winter. Miss Bridwell is the sister of Mrs. Kate Bridwell Anderson.

No longer do club women sit around and wait for city fathers to promote improvements only when the municipal spirit moves. They promptly appoint a committee, who put on their prettiest bonnets, and proceed to ask the municipal authorities for their souls' desire, and, presto! there is the desired change. In Atlanta, for instance, club women who are housewives have for some time longed for a town market, but this domestic convenience was not forthcoming. The merchants were equally self-sufficient. Thereupon members of the Atlanta Woman's club waited on the city council and made captivatives. "aches. In consequence Atlanta is to have a town market 'right off."

The Woman's auxiliary to the New York Society for the Preservation of Scenic and Historic Places and Objects have framed a petition to the city and state authorities which they will earnestly endeavor to have granted this autumn. It is to save three New York buildings, Fraunce's Tavern, corner of Broad and Pearl streets, in whose "long room" Washington made farewell to the general and officers of the Revolution; the Morris or Jumel mansion, in northwest New York, which was Washington's headquarters in 1776 within which Nathan Hale received his commission, and the tiny cottage of Fordham Hill, northeast New York, which was the home of Edgar Allan Poe. The president and trustees of the parent society are in full sympathy with this petition, and have promised, the auxiliary says, to do all in their power to forward its success. The authorities are petitioned to designate a small park around Fraunce's Tavern as "Patriotic Park," that around the Morris mansion as "Hero Park," and that around the Poe cottage as "Poet's Park," and to commit the three memorial buildings to the care of the Society for the Preservation of Historic Places and Objects. The petition says, among other things:

Whereas, Since 1887 many small parks some of them costing over $1,000,000, have been created throughout the city, and sixteen others are now petitioned for, hardly one of which has been chosen with a view to its historic or other American associations; and Whereas the recent creation, at an expense of $8,000,000, of a speedway for fast trotting, the authorization of a rapid-transit tunnel which will cost $35,000,000, the condemnation of property in the Borough of the Bronx for a racetrack which will cost $20,000,000, and the recommendation of the governor of the State of New York for the expenditure of $60,000,000 on the Erie Canal, prove the resources of the city and State of New York for the execution of great projects for the use and enjoyment of the people; and

Whereas, The women of New York have never before asked any costly gift from the State and city authorities; therefore, be it Resolved, That the honorable legislative bodies and committees, executive bodies and determining boards are earnestly petitioned to exercise their respective powers for the purchase by the city by special enactment of Fraunce's Tavern, the Morris mansion, and the Poe cottage.

Resolved, That any other disposition of these several properties will be a desecration of their sacred association, grievous to the national mind and heart, and inexcusable in the great and enormously opulent State and city of New York.

Speaking for the women of New York, a member of the auxiliary says: "Nearly twenty-five years ago the women of Boston united to save the Old South Church of Revolutionary memory; within two years the women of Philadelphia have restored Independence Hall of that city; after the death of the Port Lovell, a Cambridge woman started the movement owing to which the grounds of his home were purchased for Lowell Park; the women of San Francisco have recently endeavored to save the great Sequoia Grove, and are now agitating a public park for the historic Telegraph Hill, while the women of New Jersey are bent upon preserving the noble Palisades, and those of Brooklyn preparing to honor the 'martyrs of the prison-ship.' Shall New York women do less for the hallowed places within her borders?"

The Buffalo Chapter, D. A. R., confines its efforts almost exclusively to educating the foreign-born population of its city in American history and the principle of citizenship, and is distinctive among similar organizations on this account. Buffalo has a population of 400,000, in which, without mentioning other nationalities, there are 75,000 Poles and 30,000 Italians. The children of these foreigners are taught American history in the public schools, but the adults would never gain much knowledge of this country, its laws, and institutions, if some special means of instruction were not provided for them. The National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, incorporates in its Constitution and bylaws the three principal objects of its organization, the second of which was considered of "primary importance," by Washington, namely, "the diffusion of such knowledge as should qualify men to perform well the duties of American citizens."

GIRL STUDENTS IN PARIS.

Facts About Their Experience and Expense Accounts.

"The average girl art student in Paris lives about as quiet a life as the American college girl," says Maude Andrews in the September Woman's Home Companion, writing from her own experience of "The American Girl Artist in Paris." "The tuition at the schools ranges in price from seven to fourteen dollars a month, but the price of an artist's materials cannot be estimated, for these are the items that make the study of art appallingly expensive. If an artist needs certain paints, she cannot stop to consider if others wouldn't do as well, or if she couldn't get on with less as she considers the purchase of remnants at a bargain-counter. The paints must be had at any cost, and that is why girl artists often look as hungry and seedy as the Marchioness when first discovered by Dick Swivel. It is safe to say that no girl ought to come to Paris to study art unless she has an assured allowance of fifty dollars a month, and this amount will just about enable her to meet the expenses of daily living, tuition and materials. A great deal has been said about the folly of American girls coming to Paris on limited means, but the impracticability of such a venture lies not so much in the drawback as in the pose and lack of practical sense in many of the art students themselves. The one great pose in art is the scorn of 'poh-ohing.' Most young artists, for instance, consider it to be a degradation of their art to turn their talents toward illustration, whereas it is one of the most remunerative things an artist can do. It may be said very truly that no poor girl should come to Paris to study art unless she is willing to turn her ability in the direction of pot-boiling now and then, in order to supplement her allowance. There are so many needs for money in Paris. It is a veritable circle of cities that changes its lovers not into swine, but into the most enchanting butterflies, if there is only a little extra money to be had for dress. A girl who is very poor and who cannot make a little pin-money of ten gets rather hopeless and depressed, for there is nothing so forlorn in Paris as shabby attire."

A Novel Little Folks' Party.

One of the prettiest of entertainments for a small folks' party was an innovation on the rather worn-out Jack-Horn-er pie. Over the middle of the supper-table, suspended from the ceiling by pretty ribbons, was a large, elaborately braided white straw basket of fancy shape apparently filled with flowers and greens.

The flowers were bunches and bouquets of sweet peas—one for each child—and asparagus-vines hid the stems; fastened to each bunch was a package. At the end of the supper the package was lowered, and every one drew his or her posies, and when the treasures came to light with the flowers screeches of joy arose; the bottom of the basket was filled with bonbons and mottos, which were emptied over the heads of the children. A scramble ensued for them, into which every child entered, and this ended the party.

New Mode for the Hair.

The "Marsellaise roll" is the latest wrinkle in hairdressing. It has not yet become very well known in this country, having been recently introduced by a Parisian artist at an old and well-known hair shop in town. The beautiful, wavy effect in the hair is produced by an intricate convolution of the strands. This fluffy mass is thrown up over the new parted pompadour pad, so that there is a decided break on the forehead, which is decidedly chic, and the back hair is brought up extremely high and confined in the artistic and universally becoming Psyche knot at the top.

And, speaking of hair, do you use a whiplash brush to keep the scalp in its healthy condition. They look very like the old-time wire brushes, and unless you are well up in toilet accessories you would easily pass it by. Once tried, however, you would certainly have over the splendid results obtained, for its constant use keeps that delightfully glossy appearance to the hair without a suspicion of oil, leaving it dry, fluffy and full of life.
