

HOW TO CURE HAMS.

The following receipts are said to be those after which the premium hams named at the Maryland State Fair were cured:

First Premium.—Mix two and one-half pounds of salt, finely powdered, one-half bushel fine salt, three pounds brown sugar, one-half gallon molasses. Rub the meat with the mixture; pack with skin down. Turn over once a week, and add little salt. After being down three or four weeks take out, wash, and hang up three or four weeks until it is dry. Then smoke with hickory wood three or four weeks, then bag or pack away in a cool place—not a cellar—in chaff or hay.

Second Premium.—The meat, after being cut out, must be rubbed piece by piece, with very finely powdered salt-petre, on the flesh side, and where the leg is cut off, a tablespoonful (not heaping) to each ham, and about half that quantity in each middle and joint; this must be rubbed in. Then salt it by packing a thin coating of salt on the flesh side of each piece, say one-half an inch thick, pack the pieces on a scaffolding, or on a floor with strips of plank laid a few inches apart all over it (that is, under the meat); the pieces must be placed skin side down, in the following order: First layers, hams; second, shoulders; third, joints; fourth, middlings—take the spare ribs out of the middlings. The meat must lie in this way six weeks if the weather is mild, eight if cold—the time being allowed to run freely.

Third Premium.—Half bushel of fine salt, three pounds of brown sugar, two and one-half pounds salt-petre, one half gallon best molasses. Mix these ingredients together, then rub each piece well with the mixture until all be absorbed. The meat must be taken out of the pickle once a week for six weeks; the two first times the meat is taken out, there is to be a plate of alum salt added to the pickle once a week for six weeks.

Fourth Premium.—Two and one-half pounds salt-petre, dried and finely powdered, one half bushel best Liverpool salt, three pounds brown sugar, and one half gallon of molasses. Mix all in a vessel, rub the meat well with the same, and pack with skin down. The above is the exact amount required for 1,000 pounds of pork. After being in salt three to four weeks, take out, wash clean the pieces, dry, and hang it up for smoking. Three weeks is sufficient to smoke them thoroughly—by fire made of hickory wood. When smoked, take down, or pack away in dry chaff or cut straw. Examine them occasionally, and if found to be at all damp, renew the packing with dry material.

Crime in New York City.

The frequency of murder in this city is becoming absolutely alarming, and unless some stringent measures are adopted by the authorities, the lawless element will become completely master of the situation. Indeed, to such an extent is the use of the knife and the pistol carried that no one is safe. The law has been proved to be particularly impotent to punish the assassin, and, as a result, the rowdy element feel that they are at liberty to vent their anger on any one who is unfortunate enough to incur their ill will. If the law were administered as it ought to be the reign of murder which now holds sway in the community would be ended. Unfortunately present they can nearly always count on the presence of some tender conscience on the jury who will vote to acquit. To defeat the law is a virtue. It is a great misfortune for a community to be blessed with people of this stamp. Their sympathy seems always to turn with the interesting assassin who, in a fit of jealousy, or heated by drink, murders in a cowardly and brutal manner some fellow creature. Unless we are to declare that killing is a noble sport, in which those who feel so disposed are at liberty to indulge, we must find some cure for the consciences of jurors. The most rational way out of the difficulty would be to pass a law that, except in political cases, two-thirds of a jury should be sufficient to give a verdict. Such a law as this would soon have the effect of removing a good many interesting assassins out of the way of temptation. It would also have a certain moral restraining effect on hundreds of young men who are being educated into murderers by the present laxity of the law. One thing, however, is certain, and that is that the present reign of rowdiness must be brought to an end.—New York Herald.
