

How Deacon Brown Got Sold.

Deacon Brown considered himself the pillar of the Church and chief conservator of the public morals, nor was this idea of his altogether a delusion.

Alas! for the rarity Or Christian charity Under the sun."

The old Deacon had not the least bit of it. Having no faults or foibles of his own (at least he thought so) that called aloud for charity, he could not understand why they should ever form a component part in the natures of other people.

Elder Wisely, pastor of Deacon Brown's church, was on a tour at the South for the benefit of that clerical disorder, the bronchitis.

PODGEVILLE, July 16th, 1850.

Mr. BROWN—Dear sir: I take the liberty to disclose to you some facts, which have given me as much pain as they will yourself.

As the Deacon read this epistle, there was a visible tremor in his hand. He polished his eye-glass with a silk handkerchief, and perused it a second time.

"Is Mrs. Wisely in?" "Yes, sir; she's in bed, sir."

The Deacon then examined his watch, and muttered, half-past seven. He then asked: "How long before Mrs. Wisely will rise, mam?"

"Can what be?" "Why that young gentleman is, at this very moment." "But you know, sir, he is a very young and very little gentleman, too, sir."

The Landlord Who Couldn't Keep People All Night.

A certain distance from the city of Montgomery, in the State of Alabama, on one of the stage roads running from that city, lives a jolly landlord by the name of Ford.

"Who are you there?" "Barber, and Yancy, and Elmore, from Montgomery," was the answer, "on our way to attend court. We are benighted, and want to stay all night."

"Very sorry I can't accommodate you that far, gentlemen. Do anything to oblige you, but that's impossible." The lawyers, for they were three of the smartest lawyers in the State, and all ready to drop with fatigue, held a brief consultation, and then, as they could do no better, and were too tired to go another step, they asked:

"Why, Ford, I thought your house was so full you couldn't give us a bed last night?" said Barber. "I didn't say so," replied Ford.

Save your Paper Rags.

The inhabitants of Utah are requested to gather up and save their worn out wagon covers, and every description of cotton and linen rags for paper making, and deliver them, from time to time, to the Bishops of the several Wards, or the 'News' and 'Mountaineer' Offices or their agents, for which, when clean, they will be allowed five cents a pound.

It is expected that, in a few months, all who wish can receive paper in exchange for rags.

EDWARD HUNTER, Presiding Bishop.
