MONETARY AND OTHER CONsiderations.

The circumstances through which the Church is passing affect more or less every interest and class of the community. It is necessary that we should be on our guard, that they may stand firm in their integrity to the initial position they assumed when they became identified with the work which they were convinced had been established by divine direction. Otherwise they are liable to be carried off from the rock of truth and make shipwreck of their faith, and their ethical prospects.

While carefulness should be exercised by all alike, it is especially needful under certain conditions. Perhaps there are few stronger inducements to lead men astray from their convictions of truth than wealth. When people have riches and they imagine the stability of their possessions is jeopardized by any situation, it is necessary to exercise much self-denial in order to avoid a tendency to turn aside from principle in order to protect what is generally so highly prized in this world, and which exercises a potent influence in human affairs.

In this regard, in the present situation, perhaps the more wealthy men of the community are entitled to more consideration and sympathy than is accorded them, as they are exposed to a situation in which the poorer classes of the community are comparatively ignorant of, although doubtless most of the latter would be quite willing to hazard the risk of the experience if a fair opportunity were offered.

The struggle in men's minds on this point that would be involved by a special class of circumstances can be approximately estimated by reflecting upon the strong inclination to gold-worship that exists in the ordinary run of the genus man.

Shakespeare, through the "Methinketh Dane," has enunciated the idea that "Conscience does make cowards of us all." The history of the world proves that wealth has had a pretty general bearing upon sapping human valor, and such an effect is consummation devoutly to be avoided by every Latter-day Saint liable to an influence of that nature, in any order of the Church.

Life and liberty are of inestimably greater intrinsic value than wealth, yet such are the peculiar methods of humanity in placing matters in their supposed relative order that frequently the first is risked and the second sacrificed for the third. But all three, and all other earthly considerations are not to be compared to the riches of mortality, in the minds of the Latter-day Saints, whose eyes have been opened by their incomprehensibly priceless character.

Therefore life, liberty and wealth must be held in secondary consideration when integrity to principle is involved. No earthly influence can corrupt true manhood, and no man can expect to win honor or respect by maintaining a position which requires him to maintain a false position.

Consequently any tendency to tameness, submission to wrong, and the relinquishment of principle because of real or imaginary risk of earthly possessions is dangerous ground upon which to stand.

Besides, it is a moment's reflection would show that if a man's feet fail to attain the object in view. The questions at issue affect the whole body of the people, and as a bulk they will remain immovable.

The action of the contrary will not affect the matter in its entirety. The results of personal conduct will only, in the main, have an individual effect. The chief body of the question will not be largely disturbed by it.

The situation in our present contest between error and truth, oppression and freedom, injustice and justice. The operations of tyrants must be legitimately resisted with all the means at command.

Their oppressions should be exhibited in their true light, and no sentiment of fearfulness on any ground whatever should induce men to favor a mode of action that would indicate that slavery and injustice are conditions to be met apparently desirably by non-resistance to their encroachments.

There should be no borrowing of trouble, but the issue of the day should be met, by those who have to confront it, like men and not like women.

But should a moment's reflection be allowed, it is not to be altered by financial considerations correct principles being all in all.

Fruit that can be shaken from the tree of life shall be, and assume the position of "windfalls." Those who desire to get to the ground in that capacity have the privilege, but it is not an inviting situation.

No such issue has yet arisen as the alternative of the abandonment of wealth for the sake of religion, and it does no good to anticipate such a contingency. But should it ever arise, there is no question as to the correct course of procedure.

The relative value of Gospel truth and earthly possessions has not changed since the day when the Savior trod the earth. He was the leading of all earthly exemplars in that regard.

There was no hesitancy on his part in preferring to do the will of his Father, rather than accept the honors and wealth of the world.

The other side of the picture was presented by the young man who appeared to be convinced of the Divine mission of the Redeemer. The choice between serving the God of Israel and adhering to the God of this world was tendered to him.

He had heavenly possessions upon which he had evidently set his heart, and he "turned away sorrowful."

This is a day that demands a vigorous defense and a careful scrutiny of self, upon whom an unprecedented verdict should be pronounced on the basis of a fair and impartial analysis of motives.

THE WAY IT IS WORKED.
 The way in which the anti-"Mormon" crusade is worked was illustrated this morning. The Salt Lake Tribune, which is the whipper-in of the assault, contained an article incorporating a demand that a raid be made upon the police force of this city.

It goes without saying that the demands of that violent sheet are as potent with some Federal officials and a host of other non-"Mormon" as an imperial decree of the Caesar of Russia is to his cringing subjects.

When that vicious and vindictive journal resorts to this kind of a remarkable shrinking of shoulders and cold shivers run down the backs of the non-"Mormon" slaves.

When its conductors, who exercise a species of terrorism over the people, care for its malicious structures, pull the string, the apocryphal jumping done in response is a sickening sight for freedom to gaze on.

As a matter of course the dictum in reference to the police is, in principle, responded to by anti-chief Andrew Smith, arrested to-day, in the first victim.

It will be observed that the complaint has been made out in accordance with the somewhat turned by Judge Zane in the case of Angus M. Cannon, when he decided—contrary to his former rulings—that it was not necessary in order to prove a case of cohabitation, to show that any act of sexual commerce had occurred. It was the "holding out" of more women than one as wives, that constituted the offense; the act of claiming them as such relationship. The complaint against officer Smith says: "Did unlawfully claim, live and cohabit with both of said women as his wives." The word claim is a new ingredient in complaints of that character, and is introduced to meet the requirements of the new programme. What the next variation will be, it is hard to say. It will undoubtedly be a furtherance of the character of some particular case in which conviction must be had at all hazards and can only be secured independent of former methods.

The complaint is awkwardly worded after all, and does not properly express what is intended to be conveyed. Taken literally it says: Did unlawfully claim, live with and cohabit with, etc. But though its construction is bad, the intention of the writer of the document is evident. Heretofore the mere claiming of women as wives has not been made an element of the complaint. Now it is infused into it and made the chief constituent of the alleged offense.

PUNISHMENT OF JUVENILE CRIMINALS.
 A METHOD of punishing juvenile criminals has been adopted in Kentucky in which the parents of the offenders are required to play a part—a part which they play at voluntarily at home when circumstances warranted it, might have prevented their children requiring a police court. The method alluded to is that of sentencing the young culprits to a term in the House of Refuge with the understanding that the parents are to follow up the child, and if necessary, to be in the presence of the court, the parents and not the child being allowed to choose between the two modes of punishment.

In four cases decided upon one day, as related by the Louisville Post, the parents chose to administer the chastisement, and did it in earnest with a double strap, displaying a keen sense of discrimination in selecting the spots on the persons of the youngsters upon which to apply the "stripes."

The paper in which we find the account does not state how effective this penalty is found to prove, but we would certainly look for better results from it than we would from the custom which prevails in some other places of sentencing boys of tender years to imprisonment in company with old and hardened criminals.

A recent case of this kind has come to light in California through the Governor issuing a pardon to a boy who, convicted of stealing a pocket knife, had been sentenced by a Napa County Justice to four months' imprisonment.

The boy, who was only twelve years of age, had served out half his sentence in the company of a herd of the most incorrigible and depraved criminals.

The effect upon a boy of such association can hardly be overestimated, and if juveniles must be imprisoned as punishment for the offenses they commit, they ought at least to be separated from older persons, whose example cannot fail to further demoralize and eventually prevent them from ever reforming.

We were reminded of the evil effects of such association on seeing, during a recent visit to the Territorial Penitentiary, a young boy, who was some time since convicted of some stealing, incarcerated in common with the other inmates, good and bad, of that institution.

He may possibly be old in crime, but he is certainly young in years, and a reformatory would seem a more fitting place than a common prison to send him to.

We trust when the new Penitentiary is built, for which funds have been appropriated, provision will be made for separating the youthful from the old and hardened criminals.

The subject of punishment we may remark that we do not, as a rule, approve of the practice of administering corporal punishment to children for their wrong-doing.

It is better to appeal to their reason, their sense of honor, their self-respect, or their love of their fear or the bodily suffering; and generally if a gentle and loving but firm and consistent course be pursued in the training of children from their infancy, they can be managed more effectively by such means than by any other.

Children, however, are not always so easily managed, and it is occasionally necessary to inflict bodily punishment; but it should never be done in anger nor without the child understanding fully the cause and the object thereof.

It is best, by all means, to prevent children from becoming criminals, where it is possible to do so, and when they do fall into crime in spite of all efforts to restrain them, it is better to study to reform them than to surround them with circumstances that will be almost certain to sink them still deeper in sin.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
 Another terrible colliery explosion is reported to-day from England, as having occurred in the Penbury colliery near Manchester. Seven dead bodies have already been taken out, and 280 more persons are known to be still in the mine, with but a faint hope of any of them being saved.

An explosion somewhat similar to this, which played such havoc in this city a few years ago, only on a smaller scale and less disastrous in its results, occurred at Denver yesterday.

A man fired a gun at the door of a powder magazine, causing the contents—37,000 pounds of powder and a quantity of dynamite—to explode with terrific force, killing the shooter, fatally injuring a companion, and spreading destruction throughout an area two miles in extent.

It will be remembered that two young men were killed near the powder magazines above this city at the time of the great explosion here, and probably that disaster was caused by their firing at the door as in the case now reported.

An impression prevails that the total British imports of grain and pulse exceeded the home production of that country. Even when such cereals as maize and rice are added to the foreign side of the trade account, the total of home produce is largely in excess.

The total British home production of wheat, barley, oats, rye, beans and peas for 1884 was 148,671,289 cwt., while the imports of the same cereals were 97,471,500 cwt.

Added maize and rice, the total imports were 128,773,470 cwt. Of wheat, the total production in 1884 was 46,175,000 cwt., as against an importation, including flour, of 55,000,000 cwt.

Even the excess of imports over home-grown wheat is not so great as is generally supposed to be the case.

EXPRESSIONS FROM THE PEOPLE.

THE COMING CRISIS.
 SALT LAKE CITY, June 18, 1886.

Editor Desert News: That there is a crisis near at hand, intelligent people who keep posted on the events of the day, will attempt to deny. Events that are taking place throughout the world are causing many to fear.
