

CHEESE FACTORIES.

Now that the "Act, providing for incorporating associations for mining, manufacturing, commercial and other industrial pursuits," has become a law, there is nothing to prevent the formation of co-operative societies to carry on every branch of business that may be needed.

It is scarcely necessary to say, at this date and in the light of our present experience, that we must take speedy steps to prevent the constant drainage of our circulating medium to which the Territory is exposed.

It is estimated that the feed which will make one pound of beef will produce twenty pounds of milk. This quantity of milk will make two pounds of cheese.

In the East, where cheese factories are established, the houses and requisite machinery are usually provided by parties interested in the enterprise, who resolve themselves into a co-operative or joint stock company, under the general incorporation of the law of the State where they happen to reside.

In small concerns the cheese-maker fills both places, taking in the milk, making the cheese and keeping the accounts. In some factories they charge ten cents per pound for making and curing the cheese; but this amount generally includes salt, rennets, muslin for bandages and annatto.

Those who take milk to the factory are credited at each delivery of milk with the number of pounds delivered, which entitles them to a certain number of pounds of cheese.

The ratio varies from one of pounds to eleven of milk to one of pounds, depending on the season of the year and the care and skill used in the manufacture. During the greatest flow of milk the ratio is largest, and in the Fall it is less. Last season the average price of cheese at the factories in New York was seventeen cents, which netted the owners of the milk about three cents per quart. The cost of boxes was deducted from this.

There is profit in this business, if rightly managed. In the East, where they have many disadvantages which we, in this country, do not have, they do it profitably.

We hope to hear of cheese-factories being established in many of our settlements this season.

CONSIDERABLE praise is bestowed upon A. T. Stewart, the New York millionaire, for his expenditure of money in building a model village at Hempstead, L. I., and a model hotel for working women, in New York city.

Fifty years have passed since this valley was brought under tribute to the husbandry of our people, during which time the people have produced their grain for their support and some surplus from the virgin soil of the desert.
